KEAP STREET GREENHOUSES,

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK, March 23, 1900.

MESSRS. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
Nos. 46 and 48 Marion St., New York City.

GENTLEMEN:—

I purchased from you last September one of your Sectional Hot Water Boilers for my Greenhouse at Flatbush, and was so well pleased with the results that I bought another one for my Keap Street Greenhouses, taking out another make.

Anything I might say would not be too high praise for your boilers.

It works perfectly, and I am pleased to say that so far I have saved in coal one-half the cost of the boiler. They will therefore pay for themselves in another year, a result which I consider remarkable. I would be pleased to reply to anyone desiring the actual proof of above.

Yours very tru'y,

Signed, JOHN SCOTT.

P. S. Kindly book my order for another boiler. I will let you know later when to deliver it.

Easter Indications.

A few days more and the Easter rush will be upon us. If the experience of last year counts for anything we may look with confidence for an enormous plant trade and unless very unseasonable weather should ensue the cost of packing will not be large, as by April 15 the outside temperature should be favorable. Another advantage of this late Easter is that it leaves the plant grower no good excuse for forcing the life out of his plants in order to be on time. Let us hope, for the credit of the business and the future prosperity of the plant trade that the soft, short-lived stuff that has brought dissatisfaction so often in the past may be conspicuously absent this season and that customers' faces may be wreathed in smiles instead of frowns as they come in to pay their bills to the equally happy florist.

Lilies are a "tough proposition" this year. The stock being grown is mostly Japanese but, while fairly free from disease, is so badly mixed as to give very irregular results and many a poor grower has been nonplused by conditions that he has never faced before. In some lots there is quite a sprinkling of a very narrow and long leaved variety that has yet to show signs of a single bud. Other lots are composed mainly of a robust growing, thick stalked and broad leaved variety that is much slower than the type and bears very few flowers, three or four to a strong stem only, and the bulbs that produced these are pronounced to have been the most promising looking bulbs offered last fall, hence very deceptive. In buying your lily blooms from the wholesaler, if you do not grow your own, it is wise to have the flowers shipped a few days in advance in a half-opened state, thus avoiding the danger of bruising.

The Crimson Rambler will presumably enjoy an enormous sale this year and is now secure in its position as one of the leading Easter plants. As the quantity produced increases from year to year it is to be hoped that overproduction and trade rivalry will not be such as to cut prices on this plant to a ruinous extent. From beginning to end much labor and care is required for the production of a well-bloomed Easter rambler and the grower who does it well is entitled to his profit. The stock as seen in different establishments varies in grade and in some cases in reverse ratio as compared with last year. This is accounted for, in part, by the fact that the last summer being much dryer than its predecessor, it especially favored the grower with heavy soil, this rose doing poorly in light soil in a dry season. Some growers overlook the necessity of training their ramblers low so as to bring a good mass of foliage down close to the pot and the bare, unfinished appearance of their plants underneath is a great drawback in their sale. Good foliage is a very important requisite in a rose. Look out for too much heat, also for underwatering, as both these conditions will take the color out of Crimson Rambler. The White Rambler is a pretty and prolific bloomer and while not especially desirable in quantity, a few plants of it are a great addition to the Easter display, making the red variety brighter by contrast. Under the same treatment it comes in a month ahead of Crimson Rambler, hence should be started later in order to get it in at Easter.

Azaleas have been somewhat draggy in sale this winter. Various reasons may be advanced but none more effective than the fact that growers have not been careful enough to produce plants that will last a reasonable time after being delivered to the customer. There were more than the usual proportion of poor plants sent over here last summer, but many an otherwise good azalea has been spoiled by over-forcing. It is not so well known as it should be that a very light frost in the fall is apt to ruin the flower buds of azaleas that later on, when they are well matured, will withstand a considerable freeze without injury. For an Easter variety Vander Cruysen is, by far, the best. Empress of Brazil is an unexcelled light pink one but takes a little more heat than Vander Cruysen if it is wanted to bloom at the same date.

Astilbe in three standard sorts will be seen in quantity this Easter. The old Astilbe Japonica makes up grandly in a 16-inch pan, about a dozen clumps to a pan. Be careful, however, in arranging such to have them all of one variety. If elevated on stands above the other plants on the greenhouse bench the outside foliage will droop gracefully, almost hiding the pan. These arrangements offer innumerable opportunities for the ingenious artist; for instance, by the addition of a few stalks of lilies and long-stemmed American Beauties they can in a few minutes be transformed into a superb floral basket or center piece.

Hydrangeas seem to be regaining somewhat the popularity which they lost a few years ago. Grown cool, they should be classed among the most persistent rather than the most evanescent plants. Buyers should in every case be particularly instructed as to the hydrangeas' need for an abundance of water. Those on view this year are unusually well colored, both pink and blue. Growers are also anticipating a better demand for genistas this Easter than has been enjoyed in recent years. This plant, like the azalea and the hydrangea, owes its lapse from popularity to the unnatural forcing conditions imposed upon it by the growers.

Violets, primroses and such small plants, as well as all the spring-flowering bulbs from snowdrops and grape hyacinths up, should be provided by every florist to meet the Easter demands of customers of moderate means. Some of the prettiest effects are possible with these little subjects. Supply dealers offer a great variety of small hampers and dishes in which a tasteful artist can arrange them attractively and, if offered at a fair figure, which does not contemplate one hundred per cent profit on the ribbon and other trimmings, can be disposed of in large quantities.

About the cut flower trade for Easter—well, the general florist doesn't care whether he sells plants or cut flowers so long as he pleases his customer and makes his profit, but the exclusive cut flower grower may well look to Easter with some anxiety. Perhaps he will realize that the best way to ruin whatever business has been left for him by the plantsmen is to double up the shipping price of his product a few days before Easter. The public love roses and they will buy them freely if satisfied that the goods are fresh and the price reasonable.

Nicholas Kress.

One of Baltimore's old time florists stepped aside to make room for the younger generation when Nicholas Kress relinquished his place on North avenue to his son, Edward, who will carry it on for himself hereafter. The elder Mr. Kress was born in Hindersteinan, Hessen, Germany, April 15, 1822, and served a six years' apprenticeship at gardening before he came to Baltimore, in 1846. He worked as a private gardener fifteen years before he started the business which he has carried on profitably ever since. His success in growing the varied assortment of plants and cut flowers required for his trade was something surprising and his effort to grow as much as sufficed for his trade and no more, and get the top price for it, was, perhaps, after all, the wisest course for the average florist to pursue. Certainly what he grew was always well grown, and the measure of prosperity he met was well deserved. That his success was fully equal to what might have been acquired by means of any other trade, his vigorous health and comfortable home plainly testify. MACK.

The American Rose Society.

At the annual meeting of the American Rose Society, March 28, President Dorrance delivered the following address:

When Providence made it impossible for your duly elected president to take upon himself the duties of the office, I confess that it was with many misgivings and a troubled mind that I stepped into his place, for I felt that the one best fitted to fill the office with honor to himself and acceptably to you, had been succeeded by one, who from inexperience and general incompetency was not only unfitted but in fact incapable of leading to a successful issue the workmen in our chosen calling and steering the society between and around the many pitfalls that are sure to lie in the path of a new organization. When I contemplated that six years ago a party of old and tried horticulturists had made an attempt to start the society, and so little interest was taken by the craft that it "died abornin'," it seemed almost useless to make a second attempt, yet when a year ago it was revivified, and a fair start made, those of us who love the rose for its own sake were encouraged. And now that we have a life membership of over thirty and a total membership of over 200, I think we may safely say that it is on a firm foundation. We can congratulate ourselves and believe that the baby so auspiciously started on its journey will grow to maturity, be an honor to its parents and a full sufficiency to itself.

It is safe to say that in the long ago when Adam and Eve wandered in the Garden of Eden and breathed the perfume from the little single wild roses that must have adorned that wonderful creation, they little dreamed that some day, under the fostering care of their descendants, those delicate flowers should expand and increase into the many hued and petaled flowers of to-day. That we should love our flower is not strange, since in song and story its praises have been made the theme of love and tragedy, the home of fairies and the name of wars, even as in life and death this emblem of the heart has ever been the foremost flower.

Nature has always lent a kindly aid to man in his endeavor to improve this flower and when, in frigid clime and under forbidding skies, man has lent his talents to producing its beauty to adorn his bride she has not said him nay. Who can look back even for the short space of thirty years and not feel a pardonable pride in the advancement made? From Bon Silene to American Beauty, from Safrano to Golden Gate or from Souvenir d' un Ami to Bridesmaid are leaps that only giants make. And the end is not yet. It is with due modesty we can look at the results of our first efforts and, pointing to the array of beauty which has been submitted to the view of the city of New York, say without fear of contradiction that never before in this country have so many beautiful and perfect roses been assembled under one roof. Your executive committee has endeavored to discharge the duty imposed upon its members with fidelity and impartiality. They hope for your approval and that shall be their ample reward.

In further submitting to you the reports, which you shall this day receive from your officers, I am fully confident you will find that each has tried to do his duty and succeeded. It has been the aim of each to present to all the worthiness of the object for which we strive, and that in joy and in sorrow, the happy and the weary may turn to the rose and looking in its face from their hearts all say:

Oh! never from a fairer dwelling,
The angel form of virtue smiled.

Here's to the American Rose Society, may it live long and prosper!

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SPORTS.

For the past few weeks there have been several articles in the AMERICAN FLORIST upon this subject, relative to a chrysanthemum bloom from the variety Wm. H. Chadwick, which diverted from the typical incurved to a reflexed form. The experience and judgment of the worthy gentlemen who have contributed upon this subject are so well and favorably known that other attempts would seem fruitless. However, it seems to me there is one point to which they have failed to give as much emphasis as it deserves, and that is the marked influence the various types of buds have upon the blooms, not only as to form, but in color and stem as well. Let us consider some varieties which most of us have grown during the past decade. Chrysanthemum John H. Taylor, sent out by John Thorpe in 1892, and described by him as a reflexed white, flaked and mottled with pink, will give a decided incurved, bright pink bloom if the terminal bud is selected, and the same may be said of Mrs. M. A. Ryerson. On the other hand, many of the varieties assume more of an incurved form when the first or second crown is chosen. Niveus, Mrs. E. G. Hill, Lady Fitzwygram, Yellow Queen, Mme. Carnot, Modesto and many others are examples of such. With some of these varieties the outer petals show less inclination to reflex, and in others the center petals give a very pronounced incurved form not obtained from later buds.

About August 15 last year we planted 300 Wm. H. Chadwick. They were a very uneven lot, being what were left after the season's trade. From these we had all kinds of flowers, the stronger plants being perfectly incurved, while the next in vigor were incurved about half way up, with the center reflexed, and the weakest (which were mere cuttings when planted) furnished perfect reflexed flowers, there being something over 100 of this form. Believing this variation was due to conditions, there was no record taken of these plants, and they were placed with the general stock of this variety, from which we are propagating and shipping for the typical Wm. H. Chadwick. I do not wish to go on record as being positive that these plants are not sports, although I believe this is true. I shall be pleased to receive notice from anyone securing a reflexed Wm. H.

ULRICH BRUNNER ROSES IN FLOWER FOR EASTER AT JOHN McFARLAND'S, NO. EASTON, MASS.

Chadwick from a bud taken not later than September 20 or a bloom not fully developed not later than November 10, and will pay expressage on such a specimen to determine the correctness of this opinion. Adula, a closely incurved variety, shows marked inclination to reflex from extreme late buds. We have had whole batches of H. W. Rieman decidedly reflexed when planted during August, and in many instances Major Bonnaffon has, under same conditions, assumed a reflexed form.

The variety in question has an inclination to become pink, which is more apparent when the petals reflex. It may be possible that those who get Mrs. Jerome Jones pink from terminal buds, might secure same results with Wm. H. Chadwick, if the latest form of buds were taken. Chas. W. Johnson, former grower for W. N. Rudd, has grown quantities of bright pink Mrs. Jerome Jones from terminals. Those who have apparent sports should fully consider the variations due wholly to condition, and give at least two or more years' trial to thoroughly establish the new type, before arriving at definite conclusions.

ELMER D. SMITH.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—The old saying that "give a knave rope and he will hang himself" is aptly illustrated in a recent issue of your Chicago contemporary by the party who writes of chrysanthemum sports. Is he a fool or a knave? When he says that the chrysanthemum exhibited last fall by Ira G. Marvin, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and certificated under the name of Mrs. Edward Salyer, is a twin sister of Wm. H. Chadwick and produced from the same seed, he makes a most damaging admission. An open confession may be good for the soul, but it is often physically uncomfortable. While in my employ the party in question worked under my direction and I am free to state that he required closer "watching" than any man I ever had 'round. Chrysanthemum Wm. H. Chadwick was certificated in its third year a few months after he left Elmira, "shaking the dust off his feet." Of course I keep a record of crosses for reference, as do hybridizers generally; but the assertion that Wm. H. Chadwick and Mrs. Edward Salyer chrysanthemums are the first varieties produced scientifically sounds "awfully funny." As to the parentage, his memory is as deceptive as his general statements. I happen to know that Niveus is neither the seed nor the pollen parent of Chrysanthemum Wm. H. Chadwick. The same party once wrote to a trade paper that the only chrysanthemum I ever originated was Mrs. Humphreys (imported by Peter Henderson & Co.). His "sensitiveness" reminds me of the butter Bridget bragged so much about. True, Bridget performed the mechanical part of the work, but her mistress looked after all the details. The mechanical part of cross fertilization is simple enough. Success is but careful attention to details. There is no secret about it—but shallow waters make the most noise, and the fools are not all dead yet.

The Bois de Boulogne.

One of the finest pleasure grounds in the world, if not the grandest of all, is without contest the Bois de Boulogne in Paris. Though splendid parks may be found in the Old as well as in the New World, and on your side Central Park in New York, Fairmount Park in Philadelphia and the park system in Boston, to mention only a few of them, are surely beautiful creations, yet none of them possess to the same degree the magnitude of our Bois, with the Champ Elysees and other broad avenues, which are parks themselves, leading to it. A few words about the history of the famous Bois may therefore not be out of place in your paper, before the opening of our exposition.

The Bois de Boulogne offers us the last vestiges of the ancient forest of Rouvray, which derived its name from the Quercus robur, called rouvre in French, and which was the dominant tree growing in the forest in olden times. According to the chronicle King Dagobert enjoyed hunting in the wood, many centuries ago, when he inhabited his castle of Clichy. The antique forest lost its name in the twelfth century and was then named Bois de St. Cloud, after the name of the nearest village. In the fourteenth century, a few pilgrims having, in the village of Menu-le-St.

Cloud, erected a church resembling the style of the holy building in Boulogne on the sea, the village exchanged its name for that of Boulogne and the Bois did the same.

As many of your readers know, the Bois is happily located at the door of the city, opposite the picturesque hills which border the left side of the River Seine. It is the most popular pleasure ground of the Parisians and many of our illustrious kings and queens favored its popularity by selecting it for the construction of their finest residences. Among these we may mention the Abbey of Longchamps, founded in 1256 by Isabelle of France, sister of St. Louis, and of which a few ruins can still be seen. King Francois I, on his return from Spain, built, in 1530, the Chateau de Madrid, which was successively inhabited by many kings until, in 1793, the state took possession of it. The Chateau de la Muette was the favorite summer resort of Louis XV and Marie Antoinette. The Ranelagh, built with the consent of the latter princess, after the style of a similar establishment erected near London by an Irish lord named Ranelagh, the delicious park of Bagatelle inhabited by many famous persons, all proved to be in after times valuable acquisitions to the Bois.

The first rules which insured its conservation, are due to King Louis XIV and the edicts issued by him in 1679 remained in force until the time of the revolution in 1789. Our civil trouble proved ruinous to the Bois de Boulogne. The pleasures which were formerly found in it had disappeared and about the end of the last century the Bois had become the refuge of tramps and vagabonds.

Under Napoleon the first, the Bois was greatly improved. Many trees which hindered were hewn; numerous drives created, a considerable number of species of trees, such as beech, birch, hornbeam and maple added to the oak and an effective patrol for the protection of the Bois was organized; the latter, however, suffered a good deal during our calamities in 1814-1815. The hostile forces camped in it and played sad havoc among the trees. Most of the original oaks, of which only a few remain, were felled and after the departure of the enemy the greater portion of the wood had to be cut down.

The Restoration tried to remedy the evil and to continue Napoleon's improvements by introducing the horse chestnut the Sorbus aucuparia and by establishing state nurseries and collections of trees, which proved to be very useful reserves later on. King Louis Philippe followed the same plan.

In 1841 the law of the fortifications reduced to a considerable extent the area of the Bois near the Ranelagh, Passy and Auteuil. Under the Revolution of 1848, the Bois ceased to belong to the civil list (reigning monarch) and was added to the public domain.

In 1852 the Bois de Boulogne was in no better shape than any other wood around Paris, and as the city council considered that it was not worthy of our big city, they decided to improve it. To this end the government, by a law dated July 13, 1852, gave up the wood to the city of Paris under the following conditions:

1. That the city would defray all the expenses and charges for the maintenance and survey.

2. That the series of improvements to be executed within the next four years would not amount to less than $400,000.

3. That no land would be withdrawn from their former object, but that all the land thus ceded be reserved to their actual appropriation.

The Bois at that time covered an area of about 1,900 acres, which was increased by subsequent purchases to 2,200 acres, of which about 1,000 acres is in wood, 680 in lawns and the rest in lakes, rivulets, roads, flower beds, etc. The total length of the drives and footpaths is over 100 miles, the length of the stream is not less than seven miles and that of the pipes necessary to supply the lakes and provide the water required for moistening the roads and lawns not less than thirty-five miles. The volume of water used daily during the summer is not less than 200,000 cubic feet.

The first important work was begun by the city in 1853, when the two important lakes were dug and the road surrounding them traced. With the soil excavated, the hillock of Mortemart dominating the wood and environs was created. The straight roads were suppressed and replanted, the lawns bordering the lakes made. This first work met with so much success that it was determined to transform the whole 2,000 and extend it to the Seine, from which it was only separated by the plain of Longchamps, not over half a mile wide. But the expense of such a vast enterprise exceeded to a considerable extent the amount of the first appropriation and to help the city to carry it out the government decided to create, in the above mentioned plain of Longchamps, a splendid tract for horse racing, offering to contribute one-half of the amount necessary to purchase the land. Many other additions were secured which extended the limits of the Bois on the eastern part to the fortifications, on the western part to the Seine, while the northern and southern sides were closed by a ditch or ha-ha twenty-two feet wide. The latter was itself bordered by a broad boulevard on which all residences to be built were subjected to special obligations or servitudes matching the surroundings.

The additional plan of the city for the improvement of the park included the change of all straight to winding stone roads for the drivers, sanded roads for mounted men and shady footpaths, the establishment of several water courses, of three rivulets, of large lawns around the lakes and on the denuded parts; the plantation of big trees on the abandoned roads and of selected shrubs on various parts of the ground, the construction of grottoes, cascades, lakes, etc.

All these improvements begun in 1853 were ended in 1858. The expenses involved by them amounted to $3,250,000, of which one-half was spent in the purchase of additional land. If we consider, however, that the government contributed $420,000 toward the improvement and that the sale of some of the land, of the timber etc., etc., brought about $1,750,000, the charges to the city did not exceed $1,000,000, for which Paris has a promenade unique in the world. The government itself has made a good bargain, since the land around the Bois has increased a hundred times and the taxes have followed the same scale.

The charges for the maintenance of the Bois de Boulogne amount yearly to a little over $500,000, which is more than covered by the revenues or the rents paid by the horse racing club, the skating club and the restaurants and cafes established in the park. It is therefore a self supporting affair.

To conclude we may say that the plantation required not less than 420,000 trees, which at the rate of 30 cents per tree, necessitated an expense of over $120,000. The dominant trees in the Bois are still the Quercus pedunculata and the Quercus sessiliflora, but all other species sufficiently hardy under our climate are represented; for instance, the birch, poplar, ash, acacia, elm, beech, hornbeam, horse chestnut and, among the permanent-leaved trees, Pinus larix, Pinus sylvestris, Cedrus Lebani, abies, picea, thujas, juniperus, taxus, etc., etc. Of these species the cedars, larches, junipers and pines have given the best results and now form large groups on the Cedar Island.

The walnuts, oaks, tulip trees, horse chestnuts, chestnuts, ashes, limes, alders, planes, honey locusts, magnolias, wild cherry and other trees found in the nurseries established in 1819 had grown, in 1853, to stately specimens which proved of the greatest value, not only for the plantations in the Bois de Boulogne, but also for those in the city, on our quays, boulevards, squares, etc.

The wonderful results to which we have just referred were all obtained thanks to Alphand Barillet-Deschamps, who, with Haussmann, were the great beautifiers of the city of Paris. The Bois de Boulogne will be their living monument and we Parsians should be the more grateful to them that these results have been obtained on very poor, sandy soil, most unfavorable to the growth of plants. We shall have to come back, in our subsequent articles, on some of their wonderful work in other parks and squares.

Hot Water Under Pressure.

In the issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST for March 24 we see some statements as to heating by hot water under pressure. We have had a little experience in this line that may be helpful and interesting and present it herewith.

Our entire place, office included, is piped for steam, the main being carried to the highest point directly above the boiler where it is divided into two lines of 3-inch pipes running to the farthest points, dropping into 1¼-inch runs of two, three or four pipes on each side of the houses as required, the return pipes being 1½-inch or 2-inch. Each run is connected by branch tees and valves, with automatic air valves where necessary in the branch tees. The valves about the houses are Jenkins valves for large sizes, Globe valves for the smaller. The boiler is steel, with eighty 2-inch tubes and is of about thirty-five horsepower.

With this apparatus we found the temperature of the houses was inclined to run too high in mild weather and at too great cost for fuel. We tried filling the entire system with water and running a hot water circulation and have succeeded in maintaining proper temperature with less consumption of fuel. We made no change whatever in the arrangement of pipes or valves, except at two or three of the highest, points where we connected a short piece of stand pipe one or two feet long and closed it at the top except for a pet air cock in each. Occasionally, when we think of it, we open these air cocks to let out any accumulated air, but do not find it often necessary.

Our water supply is from the street mains, which have a pressure of about eighty pounds, and the water valve connecting the street mains and our boiler is left at all times partly open. Before we fill the system with water we go about the place and set the automatic air valves tight, so that when the system is filled everything is closed in except for what little leakage there may be here and there in the pipes and valves.

In case of an extremely cold spell of weather we can draw off the water in all the pipes down to the proper level in the boiler, close the street valve and run the steam circulation again until, weather moderating, we can reverse the process, fill up with water again and run by hot water circulation.

Last winter we changed over to steam when the thermometer outside indicated

20° above zero. This winter we ventured to run the hot water circulation in colder weather, with the result that we have done so the entire winter, not changing over to steam at all. The coldest night we have experienced has been 12° below zero. We plan to keep our largest houses at 60° during the night, but in the coldest nights the temperature dropped to 50° and even a little lower, with no visible injury to the stock.

With hot fires, steam will form in the pipes and we have noticed the gauge at the boiler indicate twenty pounds pressure additional to the ordinary water pressure of eighty pounds, or a total of one hundred pounds pressure. The heat has to travel, evidently, and the circulation is free, notwithstanding our Globe steam valves here and there. If fitted with hot water valves no doubt it would be still more rapid. You will perceive that with so much pressure one would be obliged to be sure that the boiler tubes are sound and the piping likewise, otherwise you are "done for" until repairs can be made. In our case we should plug up a broken tube or broken pipe and run steam until permanent repairs could be made.

Another precaution while firing heavily is to never close the water valve connecting with the street main, for certainly, with the pressure off, steam will form in the pipes and you will be liable to burst anything and everything. We had such an experience not long ago, when one of us closed this water valve for about fifteen minutes to repair a water faucet that was leaking. There was a hot fire under the boiler and the result was a loud report; an office radiator had succumbed and we were flooded until connecting valves were closed. As soon as we had disconnected the damaged radiator and filled up again, everything was running as smoothly as before. However, such an accident is just as liable to happen to a boiler tube, in which case it would not be so soon remedied.

For fuel until January 15 we used Cumberland coal; since then Cumberland coal and hard coal screenings mixed, half and half. We have always heretofore used steam but are surprised at the good results obtained from hot water under pressure and that, too, handicapped as we are with steam fittings. Our roses, what few we grow, have never done better, Easter lilies are on time, violets healthy and full of flowers and bedding stock coming along all right.

E. & C. WOODMAN.

By Long Island Sound.

One of the best private places along the sound is that of James M. Constable, at Mamaroneck, N. Y. On a recent visit I found the gardener, Wm. Anderson, busy among his famous antirrhinums. A house occupied principally by these fine old-fashioned flowers was certainly a treat worth going miles to see. On many of the spikes, which were four to five feet long, I counted as many as forty open flowers. On the side benches of the same house were some fine plants of marguerites, mysotis, freesias, etc.

To show that Mr. Anderson successfully employes every available space in his houses, an illustration is presented affording a glimpse under the middle bench of this house. It would almost seem as if it were a realization of Mr. Watson's "Mushrooms for the Million." The bed was spawned at a temperature of 85° and the night temperature of the house was never over 50°. There were no heating pipes near, but there was a free circulation of air of an even temperature, all draughts being checked by canvas which hung around the outside, which no doubt accounts for such a fine crop. Two other houses were entirely devoted to mushrooms and, although not at the time of my visit in such bearing, several beds gave promise of an abundance of this favorite esculent.

The rose houses were a splendid example of up-to-date gardening. The Brides and Bridesmaids were undeniably fine. Mr. Anderson believes in grafted stock for these varieties. In the carnation house were some six or eight varieties, all in first class condition. Passing into the large palm house I found some rare specimens. Most noticeable among these was a fine Cocos Bonneta eight feet high. This rare palm is seldom seen in collections. There were some large plants of Rhapis flabelliformis, Phœnix rupicola and P. Canariensis, Ceroxylon niveum, arecas and kentias in variety and many fine crotons, pandanuses, aralias, anthuriums, dracænas, etc. Among the newer foliage plants were Dracæna Godseffiana, D. Sanderiana, Evodia elegans and Maranta Sanderiana.

The fern collection includes some excellent specimens, among them Adiantum Williamsi, A. gracillimum and A. Farleyense, nephrolepises and davallias in variety, possibly the finest of which was a large D. Mooreana. Two fine plants of Goniophlebium subauricalatum brought to memory the specimens of this fern exhibited by Mr. Anderson several years ago in Madison Square Garden.

Tomatoes and cucumbers, which form very important winter crops, were both looking well. The varieties of tomatoes mostly grown are Eclipse and Frogmore Selected. I will pass over the graperies and peach house at this time but hope to be able to describe them on some future occasion.

There is a range of twelve greenhouses and from Mr. Anderson's willingness to explain how all these can be so successfully handled, a visit to this place will no doubt greatly interest many of our floricultural friends who will be in New York the coming season. A walk around the grounds reveals many fine specimens of ornamental trees and shrubs and here, as in the greenhouses, it is plainly to be seen that everything is under the control of a master hand. LITTLE CHANGE IN THE WHOLESALE MARKET.—CARNATION SHORTAGE ACCENTUATED.—ROSES ARE PLENTIFUL AND CHEAP.—PREPARATIONS FOR BIG EASTER SHIPPING TRADE.—COMMENTS ON THE ROSE SHOW.—CRITICISM OF BERMUDA METHODS.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

With the exception of the increased value of carnations there is no great change from market conditions as outlined last week. The scarcity of carnations is something of a puzzle and is attributed by some to the holding-back-for-Easter process. There is an increased supply of roses from all sources and of all grades and varieties, so that prices are maintained with difficulty. Brunners and Jacqs occupy the field against the Beauty and, being in large supply, they all sell at prices that appear ridiculously low to the grower. A considerable number of Baroness and other hybrids are seen but are not quoted at fancy figures. Brides and Bridesmaids, in consequence, appeal to the captious buyer with but indifferent results, even when of exceptional quality. The quantity, quality and selling price of violets remain unchanged. Reports as to the scarcity of lilies for Easter are current but, so far, buyers have been able to place orders at fair figures, provided they are buyers who pay promptly. Bulb stock is plentiful and smilax very scarce.

Extensive preparations are being made by the wholesale cut flower dealers for a big out of town demand during Easter week. Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets are all wide awake and the enterprising wholesale dealers located therein are in a position to supply any variety and any quantity of material such as is called for at Easter. Growers are inclined to co-operate with them in providing stock in fresh condition, carefully handled and delivered at frequent intervals, and arrangements have been made by some whereby shipping orders for lilies and such delicate goods will be packed direct at the greenhouse and thus subjected to but one handling. A perusal of the many special advertisements of cut flower stock which appeared in our special edition of last week will give some idea of the great supply of material which these gentlemen expect to handle next week and with such a grand presentation of the Easter indications there is no good reason why any good florist should go without good flowers. Read the advertisements and then get into communication with the advertisers. It will pay you, every time.

MUSHROOMS IN GREENHOUSE OF J. M. CONSTABLE, MAMARONECK, N. Y.

The comments most frequently heard regarding the rose exhibition of last week are on the great difference noted in the keeping qualities of roses from different growers and on the ease with which distant growers captured the prizes that local growers had been confident of winning. The untidy effect of flowers badly wilted on the second day of the show will probably cause the adoption of a rule hereafter making it obligatory on exhibitors to keep their displays in presentable condition or, at least, giving the superintendent full power to remove dilapidated material at his own discretion.

Local papers tell of a concerted attempt contemplated by florists and bulb dealers, to compel Bermuda lily growers to quit shipping flowers to this market or else go out of the bulb trade. Nothing of an organized plan is apparent, however, although the sentiment as above expressed is universal. The preponderance of bulbs this season from other sources of supply ought in itself to set the greedy, short-sighted Bermuda people a-thinking.

Superintendent Cleary reports receiving a big lot of applications for the trade exposition next August and the prospects are strong for a remarkable display on that occasion.

H. A. Bunyard received 1,250,000 galax leaves for cold storage last week and expects to have at least 3,000,000 in stock before May 1.

MONTHLY MEETING OF THE CLUB.—MR. DORRANCE DISCOURSES ON THE ROSE AND ITS SOCIETY.—THE QUEEN OF EDGELY RECEIVES HIGH COMMENDATION.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—LILIES FOR EASTER.—AN EXCEPTION TO THE RULE.—GOOD RAMBLERS.

The April meeting of the club was not as well attended as it should have been, to meet the president of the American Rose Society, Benjamin Dorrance, and hear his paper on what the society is doing for the queen of flowers. Those who were present, however, enjoyed a treat in Mr. Dorrance's reading and explanatory words that cannot be reproduced in type. The lines between the grower and retailer in the New York market must be closely drawn, as both Mr. May and Mr. Dorrance have the same complaint, namely, that the store keepers there use all their influence to discourage the introduction of new roses, as every new variety would compel them to carry some of it in stock and thus add to their expenses. As a retail member of the profession I do not believe this ground to be tenable, as any new rose that has merit as a salable cut flower and is profitable to the grower would soon be added to the "big four." A grower will not very long force a variety which does not pay him, and the dealer, who must make a profit out of the stock he handles, will also very soon drop unsalable kinds. The subject for the next meeting is, "Experiences of the Easter trade of 1900," assigned to Robert Craig.

The Floral Exchange exhibited a vase of their new rose, Queen of Edgely. This is in reality a pink American Beauty. Blooms in various stages were brought, showing that the color varies but little from the bud to the full blown flower that had been cut for nearly a week. The following is the report of the committee on exhibits: "We are convinced that this variety is a valuable addition to the list of forcing roses, being in every respect except color an exact counterpart of the American Beauty. The color is a beautiful bright pink, which is good even in the full flowers. The fragrance is also as sweet as the Beauty and the exhibited blooms gave evidence of great vigor in the plant." This was signed by the committee, Robert Kift, William Munro and Joseph Heacock.

There will be an abundance of stock for Easter in the plant line; $10 to $12 is the price for lilies and the 12-cent flowers have to be exceedingly fancy; $8 is asked for short-stemmed stock. There is a vast difference in the various lots to be seen. Short, dumpy plants with stems six to twelve inches high are far too plentiful. Why this is no one can say with certainty. At the Faust greenhouses, near Bala, is to be seen one of the best flowered lots about this city. As they stand on the tables, without sorting, each plant in a 6-inch pot carries from six to ten flowers, all borne on stalks about thirty inches high above the pot. It is a very even lot and reflects great credit to Mr. Faust, or H. F. Michell, who furnished the bulbs. They are Bermuda grown longiflorums.

Business moves along fairly well. Flowers are scarce, particularly carnations; anything worth having is quoted at from $3 to $4, the merest rubbish going quickly at $1.50 to $2. The fancies are on the gallop and there is no telling where they will be when Saturday arrives. Roses are in fair supply at about last week's prices.

Robert Scott's house of Crimson Ramblers is worth going miles to see. It is 25x250 feet and entirely filled with plants in the best possible condition, ready for the hour. The 8 inch pots contain plants with twenty-five to thirty clusters, with from thirty-five to one hundred or more buds on a cluster.

Rupert Keinle is to occupy the store on Seventeenth street soon to be vacated by Alfred Hoag, who will move to his Chestnut street establishment permanently about May 1. K.

WHOLESALERS ARE BUSY.—CARNATIONS AND LILIES UP TO EASTER LEVELS.—PLANT ORDERS HEAVY.—GOOD THINGS SEEN AT EDGAR'S.—CRIMSON RAMBLERS AT WALTHAM.—BOCK'S BLAZE OF COLOR.—WAVERLEY HAS ITS SUCCESSES.—THE WEEKLY EXHIBITION.—A NEW ORCHID.—NOTES.

Wholesalers are busily at work on their Easter price lists in the rather infrequent spare minutes that are allowed them. There is little in the present situation to indicate the mid-Lent season, for Lilies are bringing the topmost Easter quotation to-day without a struggle and carnations are good for values rarely recorded at any time of the year. Roses will, without doubt, stiffen up somewhat for the Easter call, but on carnations and lilies the limit has probably been reached two weeks in advance. As to the plant business, all indications are for an unprecedented demand. Growers are practically cleaned out of everything that is likely to bear a flower at Easter time, something decidedly unusual at so early a date in advance.

A visit to Edgar's big plant houses at Waverley finds the rows of big acacias, genistas, ramblers, rhododendrons, etc., nearly all marked "sold." Lilies in pots, singly or in large pots grouped, are nearly all spoken for and the hydrangeas are all gone. Azaleas, too, are tagged for early delivery. Mr. Edgar has a good word to say for Simon Mardner, the popular Christmas variety, which he finds all right for Easter also and prefers to the more generally grown Vander Cruysen. A long row of pendant baskets of Asparagus Sprengerii attracts attention for the beautiful effect of the sprays covered with white bloom.

Anderson & Williams, at the Mathison place in Waltham, have a house of Crimson Ramblers of phenomenal strength and profusion of bloom. Trusses with from sixty to eighty flowers each are not infrequent and one truss showed 117 flowers by actual count. A method rarely followed is practiced here with Bride and Bridesmaid roses. The canes are tied down to horizontal wires in March and a strong growth is thus induced that gives a crop of grand flowers in June, at a time when good roses are always scarce.

W. A. Bock's houses at North Cambridge are a perfect blaze of color—hydrangeas, azaleas, rhododendrons, geraniums and lilies—but everything down to the smallest heliotrope, everything that promises a flower, is sold already for Easter and the question of delivery is all that is bothering Mr. Bock.

There are 22,000 lilies blooming at Pierce's in Waverley and crowded in the corners are astilbes, Brunners and white stocks which are all ready to take the place of the lilies as soon as they go, and bring in another crop of dollars for Decoration day. That accomplished, the "Administration Building" will shut down until chrysanthemum time.

The usual noon exhibition was seen at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, March 31. A very fine specimen of Dendrobium fimbriatum oculatum was shown by Geo. Melvin, gardener to Col. Pfaff. Andrew Grierson, gardener to Hicks Arnold, sent flowers of Lælia Jonghiana, this being its first appearance on exhibition in this country, and Dendrobium atroviolaceum, the first receiving a certificate of merit and the latter honorable mention. A. J. Loveless received honorable mention for fine spikes of Antirrhinum Wyndhurst, a rich dark colored variety, and David Monteith again showed his pink seedling carnation, Beulah.

N. F. McCarthy & Co., have just received a specimen of the beautiful Picea pungens pendula, the first of this variety to be imported to this country. It is to be presented to Thos. W. Lawson by the purchaser.

Mention of the fine specimens of Carnation Francis Joost, for which M. A. Patten received first prize in their class, was overlooked in report of the spring exhibition last week.

Alfred Dimmock has been shedding the the sunlight of his presence in Boston this week and his order book is filling up rapidly.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—H. Raymaker & Sons have had a very successful season and are preparing to build an addition to their establishment.

PATCHOGUE, N. Y.—Bryant and Clarence Moore have leased the G. E. Layton greenhouses on Main street and will carry on the business.

BRITISH growers report much success with "Veltha," a new fungicide.

WE are in receipt of a series of very attractive advertising pamphlets from the Booklet Publicity Company, of Boston, Mass. "Flower Fancies" is the title of one of these pamphlets which was specially designed for a retail florist.

IN W. L. Smith's advertisement in the Spring Number the price of double white petunias read $5 when it should have been $4. Mr. Smith writes that he intended the offer of "200 for $5" to apply to alternanthera, not cuphea.

ONE successful propagator of palms from seeds states that he obtains the best results by planting as follows: A secondary bench is erected between the ordinary bench and the floor. The spaces between the boards having been filled with moss, a layer of potting soil one inch in depth is spread over the bottom. A 2-inch layer of moss follows, then the seeds three layers deep, with two inches of sand on the top.

THE New York Florists' Club has distributed the schedule of premiums for the horticultural exhibition to be held during the S. A. F. convention at New York, August 21 to 24, 1900, and in it there seem to be attractive features enough to insure the best horticultural display ever staged in this country. Copies of the schedule may be obtained by addressing the secretary of the committee in charge, Joseph A. Manda, 209 Valley street, South Orange, N. J.

A CLIPPING from the Pittsburg News informs us in big type that Easter lilies will command fancy figures and prices on Easter flowers will be much higher than last year. Information gleaned from local florists, it asserts, indicates that prices will be doubled up on many flowers a few days before Easter. It seems hardly possible that any florist wishing to see his business prosper would be so unwise as to furnish statements of this character to sensation-loving reporters, but it is done—often thoughtlessly, it is true—by florists in all sections. No greater injury to the welfare of the trade can be imagined than one which frightens the public from the idea of buying flowers at such a time and disseminates as well a feeling of distrust and resentment towards the florist.

She is Very Proud.

Mrs. Hiland—Did you ever see anybody so proud of her conservatory as Mrs. Shadyside?

Mrs. Halket—No, she is a regular haughty-culturist.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Nathan Smith & Son register seedling canna The Express, Philadelphia × Gloriosa; flowers bright crimson, large green foliage, height two and one-half feet.

Lager & Hurrell register Cattleya Trianæ aurantiaca. Flowers very large, sepals and petals white, slightly suffused with palest lilac; lower part of petals thrown forward, upper parts gracefully reflexed; lower part of lip whitish lilac superposed by a large wedge-shaped blotch of very bright orange.

The same firm registers Cattleya Trianæ Fairy Queen. Flowers of medium size, well balanced in all parts; sepals and petals pure white, the latter being slightly reflexed. Upper part or tube of lip white, the lower part light lilac extending to the edges.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

The Rose and the Oak.

A red rose one day in a thoughtful way
Remarked to an ancient oak tree,
"I seem to have powers beyond other flowers
That attract everyone to me.
But why this should be I never could see,
And so, sir, if you're in the mood,
I wish you'd make clear a matter I fear
I've never yet quite understood."

The jolly old oak thought it all a joke,
And rustled with laughter and glee.
"See here," then he said, "my sweet rosy-red,
Don't you try your fine games on me.
You know well enough such talk is all 'stuff,'
Or else you're too modest, by half;
However this may be, you can't humbug me,
And that is the reason I laugh."

The rose hung her head, until the oak said,
"My beauty, you surely are blind,
For you cannot see what is plain to me,
And known to the whole of mankind—
That no flower grows, like you, my sweet rose—
None other with you can compare;
And this is the key to what you can't see
Of the fairest, you are most fair."

The Best Pumping Power.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What will be the best or most economical power with which to pump water for greenhouse use from a twenty-five foot well, a windwill, electric motor, a coal oil or gasoline engine? H. S.

So much depends upon the amount of water required, as well as other conditions, that an off-hand answer is out of the question. A windmill will be cheapest in first cost, and requires little attention, but it is usually idle when its work is most needed and should never be relied on unless one has a reservoir sufficiently large to store a supply of water for three or four weeks. For a large establishment, although a windmill might be used as an auxiliary, I do not believe that it should ever be relied upon as the exclusive pumping power. For a small place a hot-air engine will be satisfactory, as it requires little attention, but the larger engines are rather expensive and for large establishments I prefer a gasoline engine, which can be operated at an expense of about one cent per horse-power per hour, and with little attention will be found quite safe and reliable. While many florists are not able to secure electric power, and in most places the expense will be greater than that of a gasoline engine, there are some sections where the cost of electric power is comparatively low, and there I would recommend the use of an electric motor, which is certainly the most satisfactory power for pumping or other mechanical operations. L. R. T.

Myosotis German Star.

This new forget-me-not is a chance seedling from M. palustris, according to Moller's Deutsche Gartner-Zeitung, and forms neat, compact, little tufts about one foot in height. It possesses all the good qualities of M. palustris semperflorens, but its flowers are larger, sweet scented and produced continuously. The flowers are borne on long stems and are of the most beautiful sky blue shade. It is an excellent variety for pots, beds and cutting.

Important to Shippers.

Welch Bros., of Boston, Mass., who do a very large shipping trade by express every holiday, inform us that it is their custom to notify the agents of the various express companies a few days in advance of the fact that they are about to deliver to them a quantity of perishable freight, naming the more prominent destinations, and asking that they make necessary preparations to handle same with best care and dispatch and instruct their employes fully as to their duties in connection therewith. This precaution not only gives the express people a fair opportunity to prepare for the extra work but affords a strong argument in the shippers' behalf later on should any complaint of neglect or delay on the part of the carriers be made. Shippers of Easter plants and cut flowers generally might follow Welch Bros.' custom to advantage.

A Big Connecticut Establishment.

The most extensive horticultural establishment in the New England states is that of A. N. Pierson at Cromwell, Conn. Here, at present writing, 50,000 longiflorum bulbs are blooming for the Easter demand; here a million lily of the valley are forced annually, and these are only incidents in the routine of this big place. More than 100 men are constantly employed in the various departments. Among the equipments are a machine shop, a saw mill, a blacksmith shop, ice pond and cold storage house. All the wagons required and all the shipping boxes are made, horses are shod and the greater part of the material required for the construction or repair of greenhouses is turned out on the premises. A range of eleven large houses added last year was put up and heated complete by the local force. They are piped for heating with steam and with hot water as occasion may demand, the main steam pipe being sixteen inches in diameter at the boiler end, thus giving capacity for large future additions of glass.

The material grown includes a general variety of roses, carnations, lilies and other flowering bulbs, lily of the valley, ferns, asparagus and decorative plants. The asparagus house is twenty-two feet high. A portion of the lily of the valley used the past season was home grown and it gave flowers of a much finer quality than the average imported stock. A larger proportion of this year's pips will be home grown and it is expected that within a very few years no part of the million pips required will be imported. Two houses each 275 feet long are to be devoted to Adiantum Farleyense this summer. The soil used for roses is clay loam from low lands that are flooded once a year by the Connecticut river. Since using this soil Mr. Pierson has lost all trace of eel worm, which troubled him previously. He attributes it to the annual flooding with water which he believes kills them out completely. The place is well worth a visit by anyone interested in rose growing. Large and convenient packing rooms are provided and the product is shipped over a wide range of territory.

Grand Rapids.

Carnations are a little off crop and the demand is excessive, resulting in a famine. We hardly know whether there has been any Lent or not, as far as business is concerned. The local trade have enjoyed a very prosperous season and hope for the busiest Easter that ever struck the town. There will be plenty of roses and of excellent quality, also plenty of bulbous stock and potted plants. We only wish for a few day's lull before the storm, with slight hopes of getting them.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secy and Treas.

C. L. KUNZ, of the M. G. Madson Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis., visited Chicago during the week.

MAIL and counter trade has materially improved with the warmer weather of the past few days.

J. C. VAUGHAN, with Mrs. Vaughan and Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Beatty, has been spending a brief vacation in New Orleans.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Northrup, King & Co. state that all branches of trade show some improvement over recent years.

WE are in receipt of a circular from Haarlem, Holland, intimating that the bulb growers and dealers of that country have established the Bulb Exporters' Association for the promotion of the trade interests of its members, collection of debts, etc. The secretary is J. Spoor, 24 Wilhelmina street, Haarlem, Holland.

F. BARTELDES & CO., of Lawrence, Kansas, inform us that the report of the fire at their establishment in our issue of March 31 is misleading. It appears that the office and retail department were damaged by fire and that the wholesale department and warehouses were not touched at all. The firm transacted business and filled all orders the next morning after the fire.

HARTFORD, CONN.—A. A. Welden is putting up a violet house.

BELTON, PA.—F. J. Winkler has embarked in business here with a greenhouse 12x100 feet.

DES MOINES, IA.—I. W. Lozier states that he will at once rebuild his store, destroyed, with all its contents, by fire on the night of March 26.

HIGHLAND, N. Y.—Arthur Palmer, for three years with J. W. Feeter, will be foreman for A. W. Williams when he opens his new establishment in June.

WATERLOO, IA.—Williams & Crittenden are planning to erect a rose house 24x110. The present rose house will be given over to carnations, which in turn will be succeeded by violets.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—CUTS INCREASING AND PRICES A LITTLE EASIER.—BIG BUSINESS ANTICIPATED NEXT WEEK.—A PLEA FOR FRESH STOCK AND EARLY CONSIGNMENTS.—FISK TO BE WITH RANDALL.—EVANSTON GROWERS OPEN DOWN TOWN.—PRELIMINARY SCHEDULE FOR THE FALL SHOW.—VARIOUS NOTES OF LOCAL INTEREST.

Trade has been good this week but prices have varied somewhat from day to day, the cuts increasing generally. On Thursday there were large receipts and Friday brought in still larger quantities of stock, the cheaper grades of which, as usual, fell a prey to the fakirs. There are a great many Beauties to be had but the demand has thus far been sufficient to consume them all. Of teas the supplies are fully up to the call and of carnations the shortage is no longer great; in fact it begins to look as though there would be a fairly adequate cut for Easter. All bulbous stock is doing reasonably well. The Easter prospect is bright. There seems to be assurance of enough stock to permit of a record breaking business and the call for material promises to be unprecedented. Very many early orders have been booked. The commission men are issuing the usual warning to their growers, decrying pickling and asking for consignments on Thursday rather than on Saturday, but it is a regular practice for the small growers to send in loads of stale stock on the day before Easter and many of them will doubtless repeat their folly next week; such may rest assured that they will reap only fakirs' prices.

A. L. Randall will go to West Baden, Ind., as soon as the Easter rush is over, for his annual outing. During Mr. Randall's absence C. H. Fisk will be in the store, where he will be regularly employed after May 1. Mr. Fisk is an old-time wholesaler and his well-known desire to get back into the business has has given rise to the story that he has purchased an interest with Mr. Randall, but this is denied. Mr. Fisk's retail place on Wabash avenue will be in charge of John Starrett, now with McKellar & Winterson.

Weiland & Risch have opened at 59 Wabash avenue and report a good first week. They have a neatly fitted up store, easily accessible, with every opportunity to achieve a considerable business success. Mr. Weiland is a very capable grower and the stock he is sending in is of the best. They are growing all the up-to-date sorts and next season will make large plantings of Lawson carnation and Liberty rose.

Bassett & Washburn say that their lilies have shown no more disease this year than usual but that among the plants were a lot of what Mr. Bassett calls "mongrels" with which they could do nothing. These were discarded and they will have a choice cut for Easter.

According to E. E. Pieser the violet growers are making more money at the present low rates than they were at the high prices which prevailed a few weeks ago. The reason is that cuts have increased faster than prices have fallen.

Kenuicott Bros. Co. announces that hereafter they will pay shippers every Monday. This is a practice which will eventually become general among commission men but which is new to this market.

W. E. Lynch has had his new establishment at 64 Wabash avenue painted and fitted so that it is now one of the most attractive and best equipped wholesale houses in the city. He has a fine line of baskets and other supplies for Easter, and has arranged for large shipments of all seasonable flowers in the best grades.

The preliminary premium list of the annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, to be held this year November 6 10, inclusive, is now ready for distribution and copies may be had on application to the Secretary, Room 1002, 185 Dearborn street, Chicago.

McKellar & Winterson report surprisingly numerous sales of plants the past week, principally Rambler roses, lilies and spiræas. This firm has an immense stock of fancy ribbons for Easter, imported direct from Paris.

A. G. Prince states that business has been remarkably good with him throughout the entire season. He expects heavy trade at Easter, but has sufficient stock to meet all demands. His roses and lilies are especially good.

Wietor Bros. and George Reinberg have each considerable quantities of plants of American Beauty, each with from one to three or four blooms. They find them very salable.

They are planning a rose garden for Lincoln Park, rivaling the one on the Wooded Island, Jackson Park, which attracts so many visitors each spring.

C. J. Reardon is now temporarily located in this city, having resigned his position as head gardener to Mrs. S. W. Allerton, Lake Geneva, Wis., April 1.

Deamud is receiving large shipments of extra fine roses, lilies, carnations and violets. Some good daffodils are also coming to this house.

Gus Lange returned yesterday from a two weeks' trip east, visiting New York, Philadelphia, Utica, Buffalo and Detroit.

S. B. Winter underwent another surgical operation early this week. He has sat up just four times in eight months.

Emil Buettner is building two new houses, 25x150. Mr. Buettner's stock is particularly good this year.

E. C. Amling thinks that there will be much stock for Easter but that orders will consume it all with ease.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett are at home from a very pleasant outing at West Baden.

Vaughan's Seed Store has been thronged with customers the past week.

F. F. Benthey says that the prospects are for the best Easter on record.

Budlong is selling Beauty plants as fast as he can root the cuttings.

Peter Reinberg will have a very heavy cut on for Easter.

Visitors: H. Weber, Oakland, Md.; F. W. Lempke, Detroit; B. F. Vandervate, Galena, Ill.; Geo. A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; Mr. Brooks, of Brooks & Hause, Dwight, Ill.; L. E. Coleman, Belvidere, Ill.; W. P. Harvey, Geneva, Ill.

Beginning April 1st, Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, will pay all shippers on Monday of each week.

TRADE GOOD AND EASTER PROSPECTS EXCELLENT.—PLENTY OF STOCK ANTICIPATED.—MEETING OF THE STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.—VARIOUS TALES.

Business in this vicinity is regarded as very satisfactory and there are good prospects for an excellent Easter trade. Roses and carnations are very scarce at present, but with a fair amount of bright days, we may expect a good supply for Easter. The lily situation is pretty bad, disease everywhere and many blooms behind time. The extreme scarcity of roses in this city is generally regarded as due to the many benches of old roses that have been held over. The experiment has been a costly one for many growers and will not be repeated in a single instance this year. Smith & Young Company report the violet business as extremely satisfactory. The demand for potted violets is in excess of the supply. Lady Campbell is the variety grown for this purpose; 6-inch pot plants with twenty-five to thirty well developed flowers is the ordinary run.

Mr. Hasselman, who is busy rebuilding after the fire, will equip his place with all the latest improvements, especially regarding the heating apparatus.

The florists' meeting, April 3, was held at Garfield Park and was conducted by Vice-president Coles, of Kokomo. It was reported that with the first blooms of crocuses, flower thieves also appeared. The advisability of offering a reward for their arrest was discussed, but the general opinion was that the reward tails of its purpose, as in the two cases of last season the convicted thieves were released on suspended sentences, thus securing the reward for the patrolman without punishing the prisoner.

City Gardener McKeand, as usual, has his houses in "apple pie" condition; everything from bedding plants to the city monkey, which has his winter quarters in the greenhouse shed, is flourishing. "Mac" is a great hand in propagating; we should not be surprised to hear that he had made a successful effort to propagate the monkey by taking cuttings from its tail. At planting time this season Mr. McKeand will have 250,000 bedding plants. The florists will celebrate the occasion by a social gathering on May 6 at Garfield Park.

Bauer & Smith showed a vase of fine carnations at the club meeting; among them were several Pratt and some fine flowers of Flora Hill, which is still their favorite white. Charles Ney and Frank Hasselman were elected members of the association. H. J.

HALLIDAY HAS SOME EXCELLENT WINDOW DECORATIONS.—MUCH INTEREST IN THE CLUB.—MRS. HILL RECOVERING.

It is not common to decorate windows elaborately during Lent but the display of W. J. Halliday was quite a picture last week. One window was banked with ericas, bunches of the same being carried up the columns at the side by means of Kift hangers. Tartan ribbons were used here and there, the evident design being a Scotch effect, except in one corner where a tall cluster of American Beauties with a small bunch of red, white and blue ribbon gave the American touch. Back of all was a mass of genistas. The other window was massed with rhododendrons behind Bridesmaid roses. Lily of the valley and violets finished the front and a large but very slenderly built wreath of the same flowers was suspended midway above. The effect was most pleasing.

Mrs. Fannie Hill has almost recovered from her accident. The broken wrist is still encased in plaster and very painful, but she hopes to be able to use it in a week or so to answer the letters of inquiry and condolence which came from friends in other cities.

The last club meeting was well attended, the new president occupying the chair with ability. Eight new members were elected and a large number of names taken for the carnation society, owing to the exertions of F. G. Burger and R L. Graham, who have been appointed a committee to extend the membership of the national society.

DECORATIONS GIVE WAY TO FUNERAL WORK.— SOME HANDSOME DESIGNS. — SEEN IN THE WINDOWS.

Trade has been fair the past week. Funeral work is taking the place, to some extent, of reception decorations. Several of the retailers were quite busy Sunday and Monday on some large and fine pieces for the funeral of Harry P. Godwin, advertising manager of the Columbia Phonograph Company. The casket was covered with Bride roses and wreaths made by J. H. Small & Son. The American Rose Company made a large wreath five feet in diameter of Lilium longiflorum, Golden Gate roses and violets. They also made a large anchor.

The American Rose Company has shown some fine ixias, which have become so popular in London as the Transvaal flower.

Z. D. Blackstone made quite a show in his window this week with violets in pots and pans; they sell very readily.

Another week of Lent has passed with stock well cleared off and prices good for this time of the year. Roses are now in fine shape and quantities sufficient for the demand. Brides and Bridesmaids are best sellers among the teas. Meteor is harder to move. The present week opens with heavier supplies owing, no doubt, to a few warm sunny days. Of carnations the stock coming in is still short of the demand, especially in white, and prices are well maintained.

Good Easter trade is confidently predicted. Reports generally indicate a plentiful supply of flowers. Lilies, of course, are a prime factor, both cut and as pot plants, and most of those to come in will be longiflorums. There are some lots that will scarcely be ready even though Easter is late. G. GENEVIEVE LORD

The ideal pink carnation. Strictly speaking, a commercial variety, yet size and exhibition qualities are not lacking. The color is that happy shade called by the ladies "just right." Its stem is unequalled by any carnation. It is a prodigious grower and the most remarkable producer of high grade blooms we have ever grown. An easy, rapid grower; makes large plants from late cuttings. We can promise prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock for delivery prior to that date all sold. Cuttings positively free from rust and in other respects very hard to duplicate.

Price: Doz., $2; 100, $10; 1000, $75.

Our catatalogue is now ready, giving complete description of above, also all of the other big new ones at introducers' prices. Also comp ete list of standard varieties, all the best new and standard chrysanthemums. Catalogue sent for the asking.

BUSINESS GOOD.—ROSES MORE PLENTIFUL BUT CARNATIONS CONTINUE SCARCE.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

The retail dealers all report good business the past week, with just about enough good stock to supply the demand. American Beauties are more plentiful and fancy stock can be had at from $3 to $4 per dozen or in larger quantities at $20 to $25 per hundred. Bride and Bridesmaid roses vary in prices according to quality, some extra fancy stock bringing as high as $8 per hundred, while lower grades go at anywhere from $2 to $6. There is no quotation on Meteors; they can be had at your own price. In large quantities $5 per 1,000 is considered a good figure. Carnations still hold their own, fancy varieties bringing $3 to $3.50 per hundred. Bulbous stock is a little scarce and brings good prices.

Helpful Reminders.

If, in going around the greenhouses, you find a few plants that have a scum of green over the surface of the soil, the plant looking as though it was growing smaller, you may know that the trouble at the top is that the soil is too compact and not porous enough. Tip the plant out of the pot, break off the top of the ball, set back in pot and fill up with fresh soil containing more sand.

Shake out your poinsettias this month, put them into smaller pots and start into leaf. Wait for cuttings until a nice new growth is formed; hard wood cuttings are not so desirable.

See that your geraniums are not so close together as to shade one another; else they will grow too tall and spindly.

For your summer and fall work you want plenty of grass-like foliage for arranging such flowers as gladioli, lilies and tritomas. The eulalias and Arundo Donax do very nicely and add fifty per cent to the value of such flowers. Now is the time to procure the clumps for outside planting.

Well grown campanulas, white, light blue and delicate pink, sold like "hot cakes" last summer and fall.

Go over your heating pipes now and mark plainly with chalk every leak or troublesome joint, so you will not overlook any in July when making summer repairs. C. B. W.

HOMER, N. Y.—J. J. Arnold has a fine stock for spring and reports trade good. Last year he added two carnation houses, 26x40 and 26x60, and this season he expects to double them and also put up a house for violets.

Circulation which Circulates

The actual paid circulation of the American Florist is, we believe, the largest in its class. The contents are of real present value and are preserved for reference. Advertisers who use regularly our columns establish permanent business with the best trade in the United States.

Nashville, Tenn.

The bright weather has caused an abundance of flowers and the windows are masses of bloom. Roses are coming in splendidly. Brides and Bridesmaid, Kaiserin, Meteor and other varieties are showing up well. One dealer has an abundance of splendid Beauties, but he complains that there is not the call that such good stock should cause. There are many violets and some fine carnations.

Prospects point to a fine Easter trade. Plants will be abundant and in great demand. The Easter lily crop will come in just in time, and will be good, though there is some complaint of the stalks being short this year.

The retail merchants are having their spring openings this week and all the decorative plants available are being used. The openings are also making sales for a large quantity of southern smilax and cut palm leaves. Trade is quite brisk.

Growers have already begun preparations for planting in the field and are busy preparing their gardens.

M. C. DORRIS.

SO. FRAMINGHAM, MASS.—Geo. F. Arnold, who for twelve years has been gardener at the women's prison, has resigned.

NEVADA, MO.—It is reported that S. A. Weltmer has purchased six acres of land west of town and will establish greenhouses there.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting on March 29. There were twenty-eight members present. Wallace Odell and John Walquist were elected to membership. Spiræa grandiflora was exhibited by Wm. Scott in splendid form Imantophyllum (clivia) miniatum, also a seedling from it, a shade lighter in color, both being well grown, were exhibited by Louis A. Martin. A very interesting paper on the culture of chrysanthemums, by James T. Scott, was read in his absence by his brother, Wm. Scott. It was well received and a lively and interesting discussion followed.

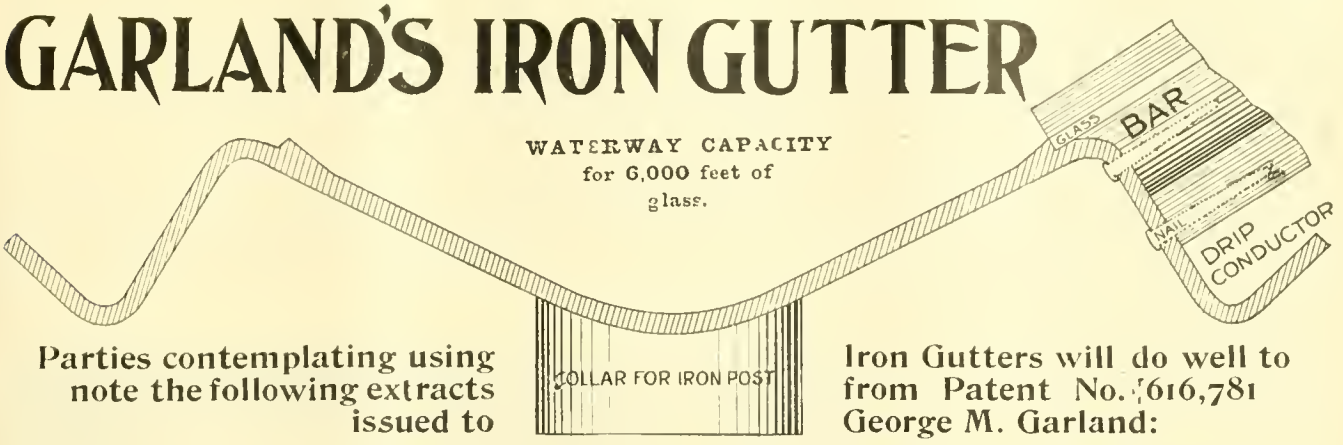
GARLAND'S IRON GUTTER



Parties contemplating using Iron Gutters will do well to note the following extracts from Patent No. 616,781 issued to George M. Garland:

The object of the invention is to provide a valley-gutter for greenhouses which will be so constructed as to combine a stop for the glass and a drip conductor.

Another object of the invention is to so construct the gutter that the devices for fastening the gutter to supports will be below the weather-face of the gutter, thus avoiding perforations of the weather-face and consequent liability to leakage.

The nails, screws, or other fastening devices are passed through the drop flanges and into the lower ends of the roof-beams, so that these fastening devices for connecting the valley-gutter to the roof structure are below the weather-faces of the valley-gutter, and consequently the weather-faces of the valley-gutter need not be perforated, insuring against leakage.

MESSRS. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I am highly gratified with the results I have obtained from your Sectional Boiler which you put in for me last October. Although you would only guarantee the six sections to heat 1620 feet of 4-in. pipe, I attached it to over 1,800 feet. It did it so well that I put on about 300 feet more, making in all 2 100 feet, and I am positive that I can add more to it. It is the best I have ever seen and a great coal saver. I have to keep the fire door open all the time.

I would be pleased to have anyone call and see it. Yours truly,

George Schubert

Port Chester, N. Y.

The chief attraction at the meeting of the Westchester County Gardeners' Association, Saturday, March 24, was the excellent exhibition of roses and violets. James Patience, gardener to Mrs. W. Hoyt, Stamford, Conn., captured the first prize in each class for Beauties, Bridesmaids and Brides. These exhibits were probably the finest roses of their class ever seen in Port Chester. The size of bloom, perfection of foliage and rigidity of stem all showed the grower to be a master of the art. They were all from budded stock in which Mr. Patience is a strong believer. Other exhibitors of roses were John Shore, Robert Williamson and Wm. Anderson. Jas. Wilson and Wm. Anderson were first for double and single violets, respectively. Robt. Allan exhibited some excellent tomatoes of the variety Sutton's Best of All.

How to Improve Present Methods of Landscape Gardening.

[Read by J. Franklin Meehan at the Farmers' Institute, Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, February 24, 1900.]

Landscape gardening in this country is yet largely in its infancy, and just as the human infant is taught to acquire its knowledge, step by step, so must the people be taught, step by step, the fundamental principles of the question involved. To appreciate any profession and improve thereon, we must first learn the foundation on which it is built, for if familiarity with the foundation is lacking, the building of the necessary knowledge is at least faulty and laborious.

To treat our subject properly, let us, therefore, get at the basis of landscape gardening, considering the following questions: What is landscape gardening? What is its object? How can we appropriate it to our pleasure? How can we improve upon the present methods? and what are these methods?

Landscape gardening is an art, not necessarily a study only. I care little how much a person may know about trees and flowers, their growth, foliage and habits, if he has not the appreciation for a purely natural piece of landscape, nor the feeling and instinct to construct similar effects, he can never hope to be successful in the higher art of landscape gardening. Do not understand me to say that study and knowledge of the character of plants are not necessary, far from it, for without this knowledge the construction of a pretty landscape would be impossible, as one of the most important things is that we must picture in our minds what the effect will be, not this year or the next, but when the trees shall have eventually come to maturity. This would, of necessity, be impossible without a thorough knowledge of every plant and tree used.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that landscape gardening is an art, and, like all other arts, a talent which must be exercised, not buried, to be brought to its highest state of perfection.

What is the object of landscape gardening? You may infer from what has been said that it may be practiced only in the country, where unlimited space abounds; therefore, what can it mean to those who may be within the limits of a large city or who simply own an acre or two?

In these days of progression, man stops at nothing. He has caged the lightning of the clouds and brought it to our cities for light and transportation. Even the mighty Niagara has been bridled to men's wants. So in landscape work we must try to bring nature's beauty right to our homes and cities. Of course, not in its entirety, any more than we could bring the waters of Niagara actually to our doors; but we must bring its powers, its summer combinations of color in foliage effect, and its berried effects of fall, not forgetting the warm and bright winter appearance of the various colored barks of many trees and shrubs. Take these powers and use them to relieve the monotony of bricks and mortar. In other words, let landscape gardening mean the reproduction of nature's work wherever possible.

As we proceed with the next thought—How shall we appropriate the beauties of landscape to our pleasure and comfort?—the subject begins to take on a more active form. If we take a stroll along the lovely drives and walks of our famous Fairmount Park, and especially by the Wissahickon, we can get no more forcible illustration of this thought.

I doubt very much if, before the land for this park was taken, there were more than a few hundred persons in Philadelphia who really supposed there was at command such a wealth of nature's most costly gifts. But the land was condemned, and in course of time roads laid and paths made to interesting points, and thus were opened to thousands the opportunity for examining the beauties of nature.

We may say, therefore, that the practical way to gain appreciation of the beauties of nature is to open up the natural gems so that they may be approached with comfort and please the eye.

We now come to the more serious part of the subject, the present methods and their improvement. As stated, landscape gardening in this country is yet in its infancy, and we must therefore be prepared to excuse, though not overlook, the present methods, or, speaking from a purely scientific or artistic standpoint, the lack of method.

Perhaps landscape gardeners generally may not agree on this point fully, but nevertheless my experience has shown it to be a fact. Of course, there are exceptions, and happy ones, too; but, as a rule, when there is anything to be done in the line of landscape work, there is absolutely no method in the undertaking.

Take for example, you who claim appreciation for a beautiful landscape or snatches of nature, when you bought land for your farm, did it occur to you to locate your house in such a way as to make the surroundings add to the beauty of the house? Did you so locate it that from your windows you could look down over yonder meadow just beyond that white oak, whose massive horizontal limbs stand out like individual trees, to that lazy stream where the cattle enjoy the cool of the waters and the shade from the trees by the water-side? Did you use the same care that you did when you considered the housing of the cattle, the land which you would put in wheat or that which you would clear for timber or fencing?

Take another illustration: A gentleman purchases ten acres to build a country home, a place where he may rest from the toil and tumult of city life and business. When he is contemplating the building of his house he has some idea of the style and character of the structure he intends to erect, so he instructs his architect to rough out plans on the line of his suggestions.

The architect, with due consideration and study, works these suggestions into such form that they will agree with one another to give convenience, comfort and beauty, and his sketches, with possibly some minor alterations, are adopted. Now mark the continuation of the method. Bids are requested and after healthy competition the work is awarded and the building begun. Let us suppose that in the course of construction the owner suggests some alterations that will materially interfere with the architectural beauty of the whole structure. Is it likely to be done? I venture to say no! The architect explains the results of such work as his experience foretells it, and the suggestions are most likely dropped. Now here we have a man who, having mastered his profession, apparently, is practically in authority, and his work is carried out according to well-laid plans—methodically.

What of the landscape work? What method here? As remarked, there are exceptions, but as a rule there is a confusion of ideas, including perhaps those of the owner, his friends, the gardener, the grader and the one supplying or planting the trees. Each may have good ideas regarding the parts of the landscape work with which he has to deal, and could possibly outline the whole to some degree, but it is hardly possible that each may have his ideas carried out, and yet make an harmonious landscape.

The roads and grading have a direct bearing on the rest of the grounds, yet ideas at variance may lead a road up to the residence with a startling directness, instead of gracefully and easily approaching by natural lines or curves. And the contours of the grading, will they appear as in beautiful nature, or as a bare, level plain, or in the other extreme like the fortifications of a battle field?

In planting, will there be any consideration to leave a long, open vista to that large and grand old apple tree down on the hillside, or to that pretty little pond with the willows dipping gracefully in the water? Then again, from the front of the place, looking toward the house, will there be appreciation of the possibilities of a long vista over the green lawn, with the limbs of that massive oak throwing shadows in the sun and inviting you to stroll over to that pretty summer house, whose roof may be seen peeping over the tops of the beech trees? Will there be method in considering these questions, a definite idea or harmonious collection of them from first to last?

Unless one has a great deal of leisure at command, the thought necessary for the details cannot be given, any more than the details of a house could be worked out. A man has a point of law, he takes it to his lawyer; when he desires medical advice he goes to a physician; when he is ready to build a house he seeks his architect; and so also when he purchases his land, he desires to lay it out properly and secures a landscape gardener. In each case, the ideas or advice should be carried to completion. The work of the architect and the work of the landscape gardener being similar, in that the work should fully accord, it is well that they should go over the land together to select a possible site for a house, the architect with a view to architectural beauty and the landscape gardener with a view to landscape effect, that the results of both may fully accord with the natural surroundings.

The site being selected and the plans of the house fully accepted, the landscape gardener turns his attention to the most natural way to secure access to the surrounding thoroughfares and conveniences of travel. Straight lines will be the shortest distances to these points, but will a straight road, in this particular case, make an easy approach? Will it accord with the architecture or will it necessitate an enormous amount of grading? Perhaps it will cut up the entire lawn in such a way that it will be impossible to make any other effect than a stiff, geometrical network of straight lines.

With limited time, it is impossible to point out but a very few suggestions that must be considered. While some reasons may exist for a curved road, such as an easy grade or the avoidance of some particular large tree, it may be just as far wrong as the straight one. At times it is even correct to make a curve without an immediate apparent reason, such as the directing of the eye to some particular view in the distance. It is here that the landscape gardener must make an excuse for the curve. Here in this spot is the place for some mass effect of foliage or flowering plants, or possibly a collection of some specimen and rare evergreens, as his fancy suggests.

The roadways being laid out, he turns his attention to such paths as may be necessary for convenience. Here again his art is called into play. Unsightly buildings, places of domestic work, etc, are to be screened. Effects are here to be constructed that will in a measure, turn these paths of necessity into pleasant and cheerful walks. At other times it is advisable to arrange walks other than those of convenience, to points of particular interest, the croquet and tennis courts and points looking out to views of interest and beauty off the ground, or possibly to a secluded spot where a summer house may be erected. But in such cases it is usually unwise to have other paths than the natural turf, as it is apparent that in bad weather there is no necessity or desire to reach these spots, and in favorable weather there will be no necessity for artificial walks.

In the planting and location of trees, he must naturally be guided by the character and location of the land under consideration. Here a knowledge of the nature, growth and habit of the tree is absolutely necessary. Few trees that grow naturally in a low, moist situation will grow well on high and dry land and the same may be said of those that grow on high lands, that they will not thrive in very wet situations, though even to this rule there are many exceptions. Trees of low growth and habit are not to be planted back of others that at maturity will be much larger, even though they are of the same size when planted.

In planting, the points of view, vistas, lawn surface and specimen trees must receive deep consideration to secure desirable effects. All these things are details, making up one harmonious subject. Is not method essential?

Passing rapidly over the planting, let us suppose that the original work is finished. The system does not end here. The ideas must be maintained. A practical man is secured to keep the roads in order, dead wood trimmed from the planting and to note and replace any tree or shrub that may have died. A new road after construction is not necessarily or usually perfect. No matter how well it may have been made, regular attention is necessary. A few loose stones here and there will eventually result in a bad spot in the road, unless it receives immediate attention. It must be kept well shaped and well rolled, and eventually the labor expended will be repaid by a good hard and clean driveway.

In the planting of trees it has been found necessary to prune them to a greater or less degree. And after they have made new growth, all the dead spurs and weak wood should be again pruned away. This care will frequently save the life of a tree that is somewhat backward, and is beneficial by lessening the demand on the roots, which have not yet recovered from the transplanting. And here it may be well to call your attention to the struggle a tree must make after transplanting. It may be well compared to an operation upon a human being. If it becomes necessary to amputate a person's arm, no matter how well and strong the person may be, the operation is attended with great danger. So with a tree, it is really an operation, removing temporarily the sustaining power.

It is reasonable to suppose that some of the stock will die, and as each tree and shrub was planted for some particular use or effect, care must be taken to have them replaced with exactly the same as those used at first, so that the trees will eventually work out the picture that was in the mind of the landscape gardener when he first planned the place.

There is great room for improvement in the planting along the city streets, and a practical knowledge of trees with a definite plan is of equally great importance, yet it is rarely met with. Trees are planted promiscuously, two or three here and several there, while a combined effort of property owners would bring beautiful, shaded streets, with trees of uniform or harmonious growth.

The choice of trees is important, as may be seen by the ill effects of the surface-rooting silver maple which usually, in course of time, raises the pavements; or by the short-lived poplar, the rapid growth of which tempts the tree pruner to offer his services year after year whether needed or not. And the pruning, such as it is, is nearly always open to criticism. The limbs are frequently improperly sawn away, leaving short stumps which decay and finally weaken and destroy the whole tree. Tall growing trees are planted on the sunny side of shorter ones, making one side of the latter weak and sickly. Many are left unguarded and have their bark stripped by horses. This, however, might not result fatally were the trees afterward cared for, the wounds regularly painted until healed over.

It is a grievous thing to have a weakness, but it is a blessing to know of that weakness so that we may profit by past experience and make such improvement as may lie in our power. Therefore, I repeat that with a few exceptions, which only prove the rule, we seldom see any positive method in our landscape work.

It may possibly appear that this discourse does not fully answer the question suggested by its title, but my endeavor has been to show that landscape work of all kinds must be put on a firm basis first of all, upon which everything will naturally develop by study and artistic instinct.

The tardy improvements in what are called "present methods" are solely due to the lack of system and broad conceptions, coupled with the absence of artistic instinct. When these obstacles are removed, landscape gardening will surely reach as high a plane in this country as in any other.

Alexander Klokner.

For some time it has been a practical certainty that Alexander Klokner would be the next superintendent of the Milwaukee park system and the appointment has now gone on record, with the result that Mr. Klokner will at once assume his manifold duties. The system is quite large, embracing many scattered areas, and while the road building and tree planting has been carried on after the general method adopted by Mr. Pettigrew about four years ago, the commissioners have performed various horticultural gymnastics in their attempt at floricultural embellishments. The amount of time and money wasted by unskilled advice and direction has been widely deplored and herein lies Mr. Klokner's opportunity to show his ability, which is unquestioned. He is in the prime of life and equipped with a thorough knowledge of his subject. He has had a wide experience, beginning in 1879, when he was connected with Count Cyrsky's gardens in Hungary. From 1882 to 1883 he was in the gardens of Count Karoly and was afterward foreman at the City Park of Budapest. In 1886 he became a graduate of the Botanical Gardens of Budapest. Subsequently he was employed at Vienna, was head gardener of the city parks of Zombor, Hungary, served in his profession at Erfurt and London and landed in New York in the autumn of 1889. He has built up a nice business at Milwaukee, but will sell the greenhouses, only retaining the retail store at 438 Milwaukee street. The salary of the superintendent of parks is $1,500 per annum. C. Gleichenia Dichotoma.

The beautiful specimen herewith illustrated was grown by Thos. Long, gardener to G. W. Childs Drexel, of Philadelphia, and was awarded a prize at the recent spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. It is a plant over six feet in diameter, perfect in every respect, and a great credit to Mr. Long's ability as a grower. K.

Crimson Ramblers in Three-inch Pots.

The little plants, an illustration of one of which appears herewith, were grown by Jackson Dawson, who has kindly furnished us with notes giving the very simple process followed. They are splice grafts of two and three-eye cuttings on multiflora roots. The grafting was done on January 4, 1900. The plants were then tied in bundles with damp moss and laid in a frame for one week until callused, then potted in 3-inch pots, put in the greenhouse and given ordinary care without any stimulant whatever. On March 20, about ten weeks after grafting, they were in full bloom. There is surely a valuable hint in this for the commercial florist. Such little gems as that pictured herewith could be sold by tens of thousands in the large cities, and they do not demand steel frame houses, 16x24 glass, or any of the other features of the "modern house." Mr. Dawson prefers the multiflora to Manetti because it is a more active stock; it unites quickly with the graft and responds more readily throughout.

PREPARATIONS FOR PLANTING OUT.

With Easter coming the middle of April and such unsettled weather as we had through the month of March, the planting out of carnations has no doubt been left by most growers for the third week in April. It is hardly possible to name an exact date for planting outside, as it is largely a matter of the weather and growers can best judge for themselves.

With the new style of growing carnations, bringing them in from the field between July 15 and August 15, their period of outdoor growth is too short to permit of any risk of check by late frosts. They will want as much of the good growing weather that we usually get in April as it is possible to give them without running the chance of a heavy frosting, and it is to be hoped that April 19 will be late enough in the month to avoid this danger.

Presuming that you are not going to plant out until after Easter, there has been a good opportunity to acclimate your young plants to cool weather by leaving the ventilation on them both day and night. This can be carried to the extreme of 32° if only for a brief while, for a healthy plant with sufficient water at its roots will not freeze at 32° unless kept there for some length of time.

This hardening off process could, of course, only be attempted where the young plants were in a separate house from the blooming stock, as just the opposite treatment is wanted for the flowering plants the week before Easter. Where the young plants were in with the forcing stock it has paid many growers to move them into a separate house or, if this was not available, to put them out into cold frames. This may seem like considerable labor for a few days treatment but it will be labor well expended.

If young plants are moved into frames the glass should be kept on them for a few days, even if the weather is warm, but give them plenty of ventilation right from the start, at the same time avoiding a strong wind blowing over them. This latter is especially injurious to plants brought from the houses, as the plants in the somewhat confined and moist air of the houses have the little stomata or breathing cells in the leaves in a lively and active condition and a strong wind blowing over them causes such a rapid evaporation and structural change in these cells as sometimes to be a great injury to the plant. For the same reason planting into the field direct from the houses should never be done on a windy day unless the wind happens to be from the east and laden with moisture.

With a little care in the ventilation, the plants in the frames can be inured to the action of the air and sun so that the glass can be taken off about the third day they are out and left off both day and night, excepting if there is danger of a heavy frost, and even then unless the frost threatens to be an actual freeze there can be plenty of ventilation left on the frames.

One is very apt to have overlooked some of these little points in the rush of work right before Easter, but it is the attention to the little details of carnation culture that brings success.

ALBERT M. HERR.

PLANTING IN THE FIELD.

Planting is so much a matter of land and weather conditions, that few rules can be laid down regarding it, and it is such a familiar subject that little which is new can be said of it, but some old facts may interest some of the new growers. Early planting usually produces the best results as the plants get well started and established before dry, hot weather strikes them. In my locality early planting means planting this week unless there is a decided change in the weather.

Those who have land in abundance should select a plot as level as possible and one that has been to grass for the past year or two. Grass land is practically new land and new land, like new houses, nearly always gives the best results, both in the size and the health of the plants produced on it. Plowing should be done as soon as the ground is dry enough to get into it. Have the soil harrowed deeply and go over it until it is in good condition at least as deep as the plants will be set; this may mean going over it twice in some soils and in others as many as a dozen times.

Unless the soil is very fertile it will want a good coat of stable manure and a light coat of lime. If the manure is fresh it should be put on before plowing, but if it is well rotted, it and the lime can be put on after plowing and before harrowing so as to get them well mixed in the soil and not too deep for the use of the roots, as it is not good policy to encourage your plants to send their roots too far into the ground, as half of them may be lost in taking them up for moving into the houses. Where the manure is turned down with the plowing it might be good management to not plow any deeper than seven to eight inches.

I am always an advocate of stable manure for outdoor and most of the indoor culture. Phosphates and chemical fertilizers are all right sometimes, and with some people handling them, but stable manures are all right all the time. Lime is also nearly always right for carnations and there are but few soils that are not benefited by using it.

After harrowing the plot well, go through it with a shovel plow and throw up ridges for your planting rows as far apart as your allowance of space will permit. This should be done in conjunction with the plowing and harrowing so as to have the soil in these ridges good and damp. When you are ready to plant, which may be the same day or in the next week, all you have to do is to take a rake and level these ridges down to within an inch or two of the level of the field and you have nice, moist, loose soil to plant in. If one man goes ahead with the rake and another follows dropping plants and a third planting and all of this is done carefully there is little or no danger of your young plants getting any check or not starting nicely.

The distance between the rows is a matter of choice and a matter of space. Where the grower has plenty of ground, thirty inches is none too much, for then they can be worked with a horse and harrow and, for some reason for which I cannot account, stock worked with a horse and harrow makes better plants than those that are planted fifteen inches apart and hand worked all the way through. Some argue that the amount of space required for planting so as to work with a horse takes so much extra manure and so much extra labor that it does not pay, but if you have the land to practice this method, try it and you will find that both the extra manure and the extra labor are well paid for in the improved quality of the plants produced.

There are many growers who do not have the land to select a specially favored plot for their carnations, and have to use what is available. The best thing to do in such a case is to use a plot that had not been planted to carnations the summer previous and thus alternate crops as much as possible. Soil that has been continually cultivated is usually pretty well filled with vegetable humus and in such cases it will be best not to apply any manure and instead give it a good coat of lime, which will help to sweeten the soil and to some extent prevent the attacks of stem rot, which often come in such soils. Where room is much of an object it is good policy to throw up beds that will hold four plants across. This can be done by the use of the shovel plow for making the paths between the beds and if the paths are run deeply the top soil from the bed can be raked off into them when you come to plant and thus get the benefit of the moist soil underneath in which to plant almost as well as in the ridges previously mentioned.

The planting itself should be given to the men on the place who will do it carefully and conscientiously, as both good plants and good preparation can all be made of no use by careless planting. Using a pot plant as an example, they should be planted as nearly as possible so that about one half inch of soil is covered over the top of the pot and this well pressed or tramped down so that a slight case of drought would not reach the pot and dry it out, as is sometimes the case if carelessly planted. If the plant happens to be branched right down to the top of the pot this young growth is not to be covered up; rather run the chances and plant even with the pot than to bury the plant and get stem rot into the field.

There is no secret in the preparation of the young plants; they should be as wet at the roots as it is possible to make them before planting so as to moisten the soil all around them by capillary attraction when they are planted and thus make a congenial soil in which to form young working roots right from the day they are planted. Do not plant when a high wind is blowing, as the rapid evaporation of moisture from the plants caused by high winds is very injurious. We pay little attention to the weather beyond avoiding a windy day, but where there are only a few thousand to be planted, a cloudy day right before a rain storm may be expected is worth waiting for if it does not carry one too late in the month for planting.

BAD WINTER WEATHER IN FRANCE —NURSERY STOCK AND WHEAT SUFFER SEVERELY.—SEED CROPS DAMAGED — WHOLESALE SEED TRADE GOOD, RETAIL SLOW —EXPOSITION NOTES.—FLOWERS AND PLANTS IN SEASON.

We have just passed through the most changeable winter which can be imagined. At certain dates of the last three months the thermometer readings were higher than seasonable and gave promise of an early spring. The succeeding days, however, would bring cold waves, with their consequences, followed again by spells of milder weather. We have had in Paris more than our share of the gloomy, wet days which tell so badly on weak lungs. But human nature has not had to suffer alone. Our early fruits, such as almonds, peaches, etc., are lost in many districts of central and southern France, and around Paris the trees are not in much better condition. A fortnight ago we had some bright, sunny days, which induced the early fruit trees to take on their white garb and to-day the snow vies with the flowers in whiteness. The frost of December made sad havoc in the nurseries of Angers and Ussy, especially with stock intended for the United States. Great difficulty, it is feared, will be again experienced in filling American orders.

Agriculture, too, lost heavily. The hard frost of the middle of December, when the thermometer read 0° Fahr. killed from one-third to three-fourths of the wheat sown in northern France. The early sowings, made before the middle of October, pulled through without much harm. The sowings effected between the latter date and the end of November were more or less injured, particularly on wet soils, where frost and thaw alternated and in which the roots of the plants were caught between two ices, as we say here. The wheat sown after All Saints day (November 1) had not yet appeared when the hard frost came and has thus been saved. Last winter corroborates again Mr. Vilmorin's experience, which tends to show that our winter wheats ought to be sown during the first fortnight of October, and that in case the work can not be done during that month it will be safer to deter it until February and sow spring wheats. It further illustrates the fact that the highly improved wheats are less hardy than the old, less productive varieties. It would therefore appear to be economical on the part of the growers to select the older kinds for cold districts.

What interests the seed growers and the seedsmen most at the present date is to know how the roots have withstood the winter. It is obvious that a great many of the carrots, beets, mangels, etc., which have not been sufficiently protected against the abnormal frost may be considered as lost. The roots which have been kept in silos seem to have suffered less than was apprehended and the fears which at one time were expressed regarding them may not be substantiated. It is difficult, however, to form a correct opinion at this early date, more especially as the planting will not be finished before the end of April.

What is beyond the least doubt is that the cabbages and turnips rank amongst the plants which have suffered most. Entire fields of the former have been destroyed. Kales are grown on a large scale in western France for cattle feeding and in that part of the country they take the same rank in importance as mangels in northern France. Their leaves, which are often over a yard in length, constitute the latest green fodder before winter and the earliest in spring when they survive the winter unhurt. Unfortunately they freeze easily and the snow which affords a good protection to many tender plants is deadly to the cabbage tribe. The earlier cabbages particularly will again be scarce and high priced next season and the seedsmen who will have some good growing seed left over need not be afraid that the money invested will bring no interest. The tender turnips like the Milan, and the tender celeries such as Paris Golden Yellow and White Plume suffered most and the crops of these will be quite small.

The wholesale demand for seeds has been very active in France and the stocks of the leading articles are running very low. It is possible that by the end of the season little seed will be left over for another year. The market gardeners and truckers are taking the necessary steps to raise enough vegetables to satisfy all demands during the exposition and therefore need a good deal more seeds. The retail orders come in slower than last year but the season is expected to last longer. When the months of February and March are bright and fine, as was the case in 1899, the orders come in with a rush which does not last very long but overworks the clerks, while with colder weather in the beginning of the year the demands are made in a gradual way and do not cause so much pressure of work.

Only a few weeks separate us now from the date set for the opening of the exposition, April 14. The delay in distributing the space to the nurserymen caused a good deal of uneasiness. The gardeners are only now enabled to make the plantations of the standard fruit trees along the Seine. Many of the trees are in bloom and as the soil in which they are planted may not be the best it will not be surprising if they fail to make good progress should the months of May and June prove to be very dry. Only part of the trees will be exhibited in Paris, where the room is very limited, the others going to Vincennes, about five miles from the central part of the city. There is no limit to room at Vincennes, and while any number of trees and shrubs may be planted there it is unfortunate that the fruit trees could not all have been planted near the exposition ground, as many will fail to inspect them, owing to the time required to do so. The trees and shrubs planted on the exposition grounds last year by the city of Paris are thriving well and the gardens of the Champs de Mars are in good shape.

The authorities assure us that the exposition will be ready for the date fixed for its opening. From what I have seen, however, I am rather inclined to be pessimistic in the matter. I fear that everything will not be in readiness before the middle of May. This is no exception to the rule. None of the five great expositions held in Paris has ever been finished at the date of opening, as may be seen from the following particulars: The exposition of 1855, inaugurated May 15, was not ready until June 30; that of 1867, opened April 1, was not completed until end of May; that of 1878 opened its doors to the public May 1, but was not finished before May 20; that of 1889 opened May 5, and was not entirely ready until June 5.

It may interest the readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST to learn that the areas of these five great expositions were as follows, one square meter being equal to 1,196 square yards or 10,764 square feet: That of 1855 measured 168,000 square meters, of which 120,000 were covered with buildings; 1867—687,000 square meters, 166,000 buildings; 1878—750,000 square meters, 280,000 buildings; 1889—960,000 square meters, 290,000 buildings; 1900—1,080,000 square meters, 460,000 buildings.

The flowers now reaching this market from southern France include Allium Neapolitanum, Anemone stellata, A. Pavoniana fl. pl., A. coronaria, A. fulgens (single and double), Gladiolus Colvillei, narcissi, Dutch hyacinths and tulips, marguerites, carnations, mignonette, mimosa, violets, and stocks. Our local florists supply lilacs, roses (Caroline Testout, Brunners and Paul Neyron), snowballs, violets hyacinths and tulips.

Plants offered for sale are spiræas, hydrangeas, azaleas, cinerarias, mignonette, stocks, ericas, carnations, cyclamens, violets, pelargoniums, rhododendrons, camellias, tulips, crocuses; hyacinths, genistas, imantophyllums, dwarf roses and lilacs (the Persian form) and still a few Chinese primulas.

Notwithstanding the atmospheric variations which prevailed up to the present date, the two "20th March" chestnut trees, so dear to the Parisians, and which grow in the Champs Elysees, did not disappoint us as messengers of spring, as they are already covered with leaves.

EVERYONE BUSY.—PREPARATORY WORK FOR EASTER VERY HEAVY.—WEATHER UNFAVORABLE.—WHOLESALERS HAVE ADDED PLANT DEPARTMENTS.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—SATISFACTORY CONDITION OF CONVENTION MATTERS.—NOTES HERE AND THERE.

The middle of the week preceding Easter finds everybody "up to their ears" in preparatory work, but with very little yet upon which to base calculations as to the outcome of the Easter business. The weather is sufficiently cold to make careful wrapping necessary on every plant sent out, the temperature having gone below the freezing point on several nights and several snow flurries having visited us on Tuesday, so the labor of the plant growers in getting their stock to the city has been greatly added to and the city stores are huddled full of plants that, with more seasonable weather, would be displayed on the sidewalks. All are hoping for better conditions during the balance of the week. The unavoidable overcrowding of store space makes artistic display impracticable in either store or window and much of the effect of the brilliant groups is thus spoiled. The variety is much the same as in previous years, excepting that Crimson Rambler roses are seen in greater profusion and azaleas are less abundant. Some of the wholesalers have gone heavily into the plant trade and their stores are filled with forests of lilies and their windows with banks of Campbell violets. Millang & Co. have taken a vacant store a few doors away for their plant department and M. A. Hart has made a similar venture in a location in Sixth avenue above Thirty-sixth street. J. K. Allen has erected a canvas awning over the yard in the rear of his place, which serves well for the same purpose. As usual many of the retailers have also taken extra stores for the week.

The meeting of the Florists' Club on Monday evening was well attended, considering the busy time. Matters connected with the approaching S. A. F. convention were the main topics for consideration. Reports of progress on the part of the various sub-committees were made and the situation appeared in a most favorable light from every standpoint. President O'Mara showed a preliminary drawing of the beautiful silver cup to be awarded in the bowling tournament by Lord & Burnham and it was announced that A. H. Hews & Co. had proffered a selection of any piece of pottery in their catalogue as a prize for a ladies' bowling contest. It was decided that the $100 premium to be given to the society whose members should win the largest number of prizes in the horticultural exhibition should be given in the form of cash. A special committee on the reinstatement of former members was appointed with instructions to report at the May meeting. Treasurer Weathered was absent in Philadelphia but sent a letter announcing great success in the advertising section of the souvenir programme volume which the club will present to every visitor next August. Mr. Maynard, former gardener at the F. L. Ames estate in North Easton, Mass., was a visitor. Seven new names were added to the membership roll.

A most interesting display of Japanese horticultural curios is now on exhibition at Cleary's auction rooms and is being visited by throngs of people.

ALL HANDS ARE BUSY.—EVERY BRANCH OF THE TRADE SHARES THE BUSINESS.—CERTAINTY OF A BIG EASTER.—MORE ABOUT DEULAH.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

This is a lively week with the Boston florists and preparations are made for the biggest Easter business on record. Other than the possibility of stormy weather there is no doubt and no guessing as to the result on the part of flower men or plant men, growers, wholesalers or retailers. No great surplus of anything is in sight and if disaster should befall any branch of the industry it will probably be directly traceable to attempted extortion somewhere. The plant growers' wagons have been at it from early morning until late at night transporting their fragile loads to the city. At the greenhouses the visitor finds himself a nonentity in the hustling to and fro, but has only to use his eyes and ears to realize the tremendous pressure from all sides that the plantsman is under these days.

In the city the wholesalers' places of business are almost impassable from the great tiers of boxes, large and small, that have been brought in anticipation of the shipping trade that they know will come their way. Everybody is on deck and attending strictly to business. Warren Ewell's emotional eloquence, David Welch's profound philosophy, with all that they suggest of congenial goodfellowship, are silenced for the present and the man with nothing to do has only to show himself and he is put at work forthwith. The windows of the retail stores are gay with Ramblers, lilies, acacias, hydrangeas, tulips and azaleas but by the time these notes see the light of Boston again it will be all over and every plant and every flower will have been turned, we trust, into their full value in good dollars.

A special committee visited David Monteith on April 5 for the purpose of getting further acquaintance with his carnation, Beulah. Imagine a Scott with flower of double size, stem and growth of Mrs. Lawson, three to four feet tall, and foliage of Daybreak and there you have it.

James Comley is in with a good lot of cool-grown Crimson Ramblers and a forest of forced rhododendrons for Easter, from the new place he started last fall.

T. J. Grey & Co. received a certificate of merit for mammoth white stocks at at Horticultural Hall on last Saturday. All were glad to see J. H. Woodford out again after his serious illness.

W Rosenthal has disposed of his Bosworth street place and will enlarge his facilities at 5 Bromfield street, taking a room on the second floor in addition.

COLD WEATHER MAKES TROUBLE IN DELIVERIES. — DEPARTMENT STORES TAKE A HAND IN THE EASTER BUSINESS.—LILIES AT ALL PRICES.—RETAILERS ANNEX ADJACENT VACANT STORES.—GROWERS ARE RUSHED.—NOTES.

April tenth and six degrees of frost do not, as a rule, keep company, but this year they were found together, working against the early trips of the growers and giving no end of trouble. When it was known that April 15 would be Easter the growers began to jog their memories and most of them, remembering the hot days that were likely to come the first two weeks of April, thought there would be lots of time, and "better a little behind than too soon" became their motto. There are, consequently, some late crops of lilies, hyacinths, etc., all because the hot wave failed to appear. There are plenty of lilies and stock of all kinds, however, and it promises to be a great Easter. How much the department stores are going to affect prices is a problem. Three or four of the largest are dipping in heavily and advertising lilies at 15 cents per flower. Their stock is, however, poor, as a rule, being bought cheap and looks it. Still, some carry higher-priced stock, Wanamaker having bougainvilleas at $15 and Ramblers at $20. The bad feature of their business is the advertising. Most of the stores try to get 25 cents per flower and bud for their selected stock, but the first answer to the quoted price is, "Why, the large stores only ask 15 cents," and it takes a lot of talking to satisfy the customers that they are worth the difference in price. The wholesale price is 10 cents to 12 cents per flower and bud. Hyacinths, one plant in a 4-inch pot, are $10 per hundred. These are about the only plants that have a universal price, all other kinds varying according to size and quality.

The stores have nearly all added largely to their capacity by renting vacant buildings as near by as possible and using them for storage purposes. Pennock Bros. have a large store a few doors below them. H. H Battles found a fine large store vacant just around the corner on Chestnut street and quickly engaged it for the week. George Craig is also fortunate in such a find almost next door, and the same plan has been adopted by nearly all who can find convenient places.

The growers' rush is at its very height today, Tuesday, but by tomorrow night most of their stock will have been moved, and on Thursday they will visit the stores, stepping in rather timidly, a little uncertain as to their reception. One of the large growers was heard to say that he had done well but does not believe he will grow as much Easter stock next season; the delivery makes so much work all at once, which, together with the uncertainty of getting the stock all ready and salable at one time, makes the business very hazardous and trying.

There is nothing especially new, but for effectiveness we believe that Harris's bougainvilleas can not be beaten. Pennock Bros. filled their window with some of these plants and they attracted a great deal of attention. Harris's hydrangeas were also of the peachy order, especially the specimens, which we have never seen done better.

Robert Craig had some tables of lilies of which he was very proud. They could not well have been done better. George Anderson is also right in it with his lilies Scott's Ramblers all went, all the stock being sold before the day of the first delivery. They are exceedingly fine.

BUSINESS GOOD AND STOCK EXCELLENT.—GUDES PUT UP A FINE WEDDING DECORATION.

Trade has continued fair for the week before the rush. Most of the market people were quite busy last Saturday. Lilies will be plentiful. Violets are coming in more heavily and are good. Roses and carnations are showing up finely. There are plenty of blooming plants in general. All the florists are busy getting their stores and windows in shape for Easter.

A. Gude & Bro. had the decoration for the Singer-Lansburgh wedding and reception at Concordia Hall. The walls and ceiling were covered with southern smilax and asparagus. Under an arch of palms and greens was suspended a double heart of La France roses pierced with an arrow. Covers were laid for 100 guests. The center piece was of Adiantum cuneatum, La France and Bridesmaid roses, 500 roses being used about the table. The bride carried a shower bouquet of Kaiserin roses and lily of the valley.

Minder Bros. will have most of their Lilium Harrisii in for Easter this year.

EASTER PRICES REASONABLE. — WHOLESALER INVESTS IN LILIES.—NOTES OF THE TRADE.

As predicted by your correspondent some time ago, the wholesale prices for Easter will not run as high as has been the case in former years. Carnations will run from $2 to $4 per hundred, while roses will fetch from $4 to $10. Harrisii lily plants are exceedingly scarce and are worth almost their weight in gold. There seems to be a fair supply of cut Harrisii, as one of our wholesale men has purchased all he could get his hands on at prices entirely satisfactory to the growers. The outlook now is that there will be a good business for Easter.

The treasurer was instructed to take some stock in the State Mutual Building and Loan Association.

Dr. Wittmore delivered one of his characteristic speeches, and here it may be said that this society is very fortunate in having as members such men as Dr. Wittmore, De Witt Williams, Rev. Dr. Kneipe, J. T. Barkulow and many others. There is never any lack of entertaining and instructive matters.

The president read a paper on adiantum culture which was listened to with great interest and was well discussed.

As we go to press we learn by telegraph that another frost has occurred in the south, causing injury to fruit and vegetable crops.

IN advance of the season for bedding out there is every indication of heavy business and a shortage of well-grown geraniums.

JOHN H. DUNLOP, of Toronto, writes under date of April 11 that strong representations on the part of the trade have resulted in the repeal of the San Jose scale act of the Dominion government, allowing the importation hereafter of rose plants grown under glass in the United States.

SOME of the big growers who have new ranges underway are having trouble over their glass contracts, at least two of the jobbers having failed to fill large orders accepted early in the season. In one instance the grower has secured his material from another source but at an advance of 40 cents a box on car lots.

FORGEOT, 21 Rue Pierre-Lescot, Paris, kindly writes offering readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST the free use of his offices and their accomodations during the exposition, which is to be formally opened April 14. WHOLESALERS AS BUSY AS CAN BE.—EASTER BUSINESS ON THE RUSH.—MANY BIG SHIPPING ORDERS.—THE CLOSE OF THE BEST LENTEN SEASON ON RECORD—SUMMARY OF THE FALL PREMIUMS.—FEW FLOWERING PLANTS IN THIS MARKET.—SHIPPERS ASK LUCID INSTRUCTIONS.—THE MATTER OF GLASS SUPPLY.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The vortex of the fray is no point of vantage from which to summarize the situation but the indications are on Friday that by the dawn of Easter morning the biggest week's business in the history of this market will have been transacted. Stock was coming in with a rush last week and, although the cold, bleak, windy, snowy weather of the greater part of this week retarded matters considerably, the cuts have been large, estimated by some as exceeding any previous Easter, except on carnations, of which only the bright colors have been in adequate supply. The week commenced with a big stock and fair trade and business has increased right along up to Thursday night without any great disparity between supply and demand and Friday is the big shipping day, but in the morning it was impossible to tell how the shippers would be fixed by nightfall; many of them have more orders on file than they ever had before for one day.

If the sum total of Easter business is found to have come up to expectations, when things have calmed down and reckonings are complete, it will only be what should follow a season like that just past. The period of abstinence has brought no depression this year; in fact, as one bright person remarked, it seems as though the only thing which has kept Lent is the extra dollar which one had hoped to lay away for a rainy day. It may be accepted as a fact that no previous Lenten season has seen so general a use of flowers in this city and the points for which it is the distributing center, and neither has there been such a period of good prices. The ordinary Lent is a season of periodical gluts; this year it has seen several floral famines.

The preliminary premium list of the Horticultural Society of Chicago carries a total of $2482 in cash prizes and provides for the bestowal of silver and cut glass to the value of $215, a silver cup and twelve silver medals. The distribution is as follows: Cut chrysanthemums, $264; cut orchids, $60; chrysanthemum plants, $455; miscellaneous plants, $825; retail florists' displays, $170; cut roses, $148; table arragements, silver service, cut glass and $100; carnations, silver cup and $190; growers' floral displays, $65; floral arrangements, $120; special competitions, $25; cut violets, $25; violet plants, $35; seedling chrysanthemums, six silver medals; seedling carnations, six silver medals.

Chicago affords no comparison with the east in the matter of flowering plants for Easter. Of course the retailers who have some glass have more or less in this line, but the growers have not yet come to an appreciation of the possibilities in blooming plants and very little is obtainable aside from lilies and azaleas and of these there were only meager supplies. Pearce, Dressel, Jurgens and the Garfield Park Flower Company had the principal stocks but, while they sold well, they afforded little variety.

If buyers realized how busy wholesalers are upon such weeks as this they would exercise more care in making out their orders and, if it was found necessary to make a change after the order had been placed, they would mention the day the order was to be shipped and be very plain in stating their wants; wholesalers have no leisure at Easter to puzzle out involved instructions. In wiring always use the code of the Chicago Florists' Club.

Mr. Bridgeford, better known as "Cash," who conducts a very attractive retail place on Jackson boulevard, where he keeps the windows constantly massed with cut blooms, rented the adjoining store, stocked it with potted lilies, hyacinths and primulas and did a big business this week. "Cash" is seldom to be found at his store; he says that's not where the money is made; that it's in the buying.

For some unknown reason pansies cannot be moved at any price. On Tuesday one of the haviest buyers refused to make an offer for a few hundred bunches of good stock and declined to invest when he was told that he could have the lot at a figure which would permit retailing at a nickel a bunch.

It develops that one of the local commission men has settled up with all his growers weekly ever since he started in business without realizing that it was a point of great interest to the sources of supply, and has never said a word about it.

Buyers are discovering that glass is no longer so very cheap. The best quotation a large grower was able to obtain this week was $3 55 for 16x24 double strength B and $3.85 for the same size in A grade.

There was a considerable floral display at the council meeting Monday night, when the new members were installed, but not so large as a year ago, when Mayor Harrison was the principal recipient.

Myer Heller, of the South Park Floral Co., was up from New Castle, Ind., early this week in search of glass and boilers for their new range.

On Monday E. C. Amling received 190 five and six-foot Beauties from the South Park Floral Co.

BAD WEATHER PRECEDES EASTER.—MOST OF THE GROWERS HAVE GOOD STOCKS READY. — KASTING HAS AN ANNEX.—NOTES.

Quiet trade, a raw wind and snow storm are not what is wanted four days before Easter but a visit to a number of places on Sunday found stock generally good and most all lilies ready. Scott and Rebstock have fine shows. Zimmerman's store shows the effect of a good greenhouse stock. Palmer, Adams and Anderson will exhibit later. J. G. Pickelman's stock is good but warmer and brighter weather than to-day is wanted to get his lilies in. Mrs. Newland's stock is good and will be ready for delivery.

Kasting's annex is well stocked. Crimson Ramblers are going to be good and in demand. Carnations will, I think, be scarce. The different stores are doing considerable decorating, which calls for a number of lilies.

Kasting and Anderson are on the sick list. W. A.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres ; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres ; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED NEW YORK: Jesse B. Agnew, seed grower of Agnew, Cal.

DWARF ESSEX rape seed is in good demand at $5.50 per 100 pounds.

ONION sets are pretty well cleaned out, prices now ranging from $2.50 to $3.

OUR Paris letter, which appears on page 1149, contains much information of interest to seedsmen.

THE supply of Early Dwarf wrinkled peas is being exhausted; Nott's Excelsior and Wonders are stiff in price.

VISITED CHICAGO: James McHutchison, representing Aug. Rhotert, of New York; W. R Roach, representing Jerome B. Rice, of Cambridge, N. Y.

CLUCAS & BODDINGTON Co., New York, report the mail trade this season as more than double that for the same period last year, especially in the line of flower seeds.

THE past two months have been very busy ones in the mail seed trade. The demand for onion seed has been strong with a good supply, except possibly of White Portugal.

VAUGHAN'S twenty-sheet lawn grass seed poster, 8x20 feet, and in four colors, is perhaps the largest advertisement of the kind ever given general display by a seedsman. The design was furnished by a New York Journal artist and Wall was the lithographer.

THE Seedsmen's League held a meeting at the Astor House, New York, April 10. There were present W. Atlee Burpee, Herbert Johnson (of Johnson & Stokes) and Mr. Landreth (of D. Landreth & Sons) Philadelphia; S. M. Pease (of the Cleveland Seed Co), Cape Vincent, N Y ; Mr. Breck (of Jos. Breck & Sons), Boston; Mr. Griffith (of Griffith & Turner Co.), Baltimore; Jerome B. Rice, Cambridge, N. Y ; F. W. Bruggerhof (of J. M. Thorburn & Co.) New York.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—S. Y. Haines & Co. report that up to January 20 mail seed trade was very poor. From that date to March 1 there was a gain of 40 to 50 per cent over same date last season The first three weeks of March there was a big slump and a loss against February receipts, but a gain over same dates last season. Since March 23, with the exception of one day, it has taken another upward jump. It has been a very peculiar season, and unless we have more cold weather the chances of a profitable year's business seem slim.

Florida Seed Law Void.

PENSACOLA, FLA., April 6—As a test case, County Solicitor Parkhill recently filed information in the criminal court of this county against W. A. D'Alemberke, charging him with selling seeds not labeled with a guaranty showing where and by whom grown, as required by an act of the Florida legislature of 1899. Judge A. C. Blount took the case under advisement and to-day rendered a decision that the act is unconstitutional, because it seeks to regulate inter-state commerce.—Savannah News, April 7, 1900.

GENEVIEVE LORD

The ideal pink carnation. Strictly speaking, a commercial variety, yet size and exhibition qualities are not lacking. The color is that happy shade called by the ladies "just right." Its stem is unequalled by any carnation. It is a prodigious grower and the most remarkable producer of high grade blooms we have ever grown. An easy, rapid grower; makes large plants from late cuttings. We can promise prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock for delivery prior to that date all sold. Cuttings positively free from rust and in other respects very hard to duplicate.

Price: Doz., $2; 100, $10; 1000, $75.

Our catatalogue is now ready, giving complete description of above, also all of the other big new ones at introducers' prices. Also comp ete list of standard varieties, all the best new and standard chrysanthemums. Catalogue sent for the asking.

The Nursery Trade.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

SCARCELY a word of root killing is heard this year.

THE American Association of Nurserymen has received $1,629 80, the amount of its claim upon N. A. Whitney, Franklin Grove, Ill., its former treasurer.

RICHARD W. KENNEDY, nurseryman, of Dansville, N. Y., has made an assignment to James H. Baker of that city; the liabilities do not exceed $7,000. Mr. Kennedy's troubles date back nine years, beginning with the day upon which a hail storm inflicted a loss of $9,000.

LAST fall Richman & Mills, of Fullerton, Cal., bought 33,000 fruit trees for $2,367.50 of S. L. Watkins, of Folsom, who failed to make deliveries as agreed, thereby inflicting a loss which the purchasers claim amounted to $5,572.50. They instituted suit for damages and were awarded a judgment for $2,750.

Fined Under San Jose Scale Law.

The first case under the San Jose scale law, which was enacted in April, 1899, was prosecuted in Justice Hoglund's court yesterday, and M. E. Markel, a nurseryman at Bowen and Cottage Grove avenues, was fined $10 for selling to Mrs. Ida F. Perry, 319 Bowen avenue, some trees which had not been examined and certified by the state entomologist. The law provides that nurseries shall be inspected each year for evidences of the presence of destructive insects.—Chicago Record, April 13, 1900.

Points to Remember in the Fumigation of Nursery Stock.

Prof. W. G. Johnson, of the Maryland Agricultural College, offers the following suggestions in a bulletin recently published by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture:

1. Never let a tree grown by you get out of your hands unless you have fumigated it.
2. Never fumigate a tree on which you know there is a San Jose scale. The furnace and not the fumigating house is the place for such trees. A dead scale on a tree is just as demoralizing to your business as a live one, if seen by the buyer.
3. Never use the gas stronger than .25 gramme cyanide per cubic foot on any kind of nursery stock.
4. Never leave the trees exposed to the gas longer than an hour.
5. Never fumigate trees, especially peach, a second time.
6. Never fumigate trees in a car after it is packed.
7. Never fumigate trees when they are drenching wet. They may be moist, even quite damp.
8. Never puddle the roots of trees before they are fumigated.
9. Never fumigate cedars and evergreen trees, unless there is some special cause for it.
10. Never fumigate trees until the wood is well matured and the buds thoroughly dormant.
11. Never fumigate after the buds have begun to open in the spring.
12. Never fumigate June buds and peach under three feet, with gas stronger than .18 gramme cyanide per cubic foot. Better use .16 gramme.
13. Never fumigate buds, grafts or cions with gas stronger than .16 gramme.
14. Never leave the cyanide can where children can reach it.
15. Never let the cyanide can be without a conspicuous label "poison."
16. Never leave the cyanide can exposed to air. It will absorb moisture and ruin it.
17. Never take a bag of cyanide out of a can, until you are all ready to use it.
18. Never leave the door of the fumigating room open a moment after the cyanide has been dropped in the jar.
19. Never allow a person to go near or open the door when fumigating.
20. Never allow anybody to enter a room under ten to fifteen minutes after the door and ventilators are opened.
21. Never empty residue of jar where children would play in it.
22. Never allow residue to remain long in the jar.
23. Never put a new charge in a jar containing the old residue.
24. Never put sulphuric acid in tin or iron vessels; it will eat them up. Always use glass or earthenware.
25. Never lose an opportunity to caution persons in your employ or on your place about the danger attending the inhalation of this gas.

Owing to the Easter rush the boys have not yet played the remaining four games to determine the team which is to meet St. Louis; quite likely this will be done some evening next week. Following are scores of Degnan and "Joliet."

Five games were bowled in the afternoon preceding the regular Florists' Club meeting last Monday evening. The scores made were not phenomenal but the noise was. If it were possible to adequately illustrate the latter in print this page would make a sensation. The scores, as recorded, follow:

Bowling is at fever heat in this staid, quiet city. Just think of it; 1500 games were bowled last month, an average of sixty games per weekday. Many of the scores are made by the associate members who play in the afternoon and on "off nights." Of the following list five florists are in the first seven. Messrs. Hamilton and Johnson are crackerjacks and their averages seldom fall below those of last month. The list includes all who have bowled ten games or over during the past month:

Toronto.

The approach of Easter is making a great rush in business, all the florists having their hands full. Flowers of all kinds except carnations are plentiful and good, especially bulbous stock. There is considerable demand for sweet peas, which are scarce, and Harry Dale quotes a limited quantity at $6 per one hundred flowers.

At the horticultural society's meeting Thomas Manton read an instructive essay on palms. An informality having been discovered in the election of two of the directors, creating two vacancies, an election to fill these will take place at the next meeting.

Wm. Jay, Sr., has been under the weather with grippe for several weeks, but is getting better. S. P.

St. Paul.

SPRING COMES IN A DAY.—PLANTSMEN HAVE FAIR SUCCESS.—CUT FLOWERS SCARCE —HANSEN'S LOSS THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS.

Spring came in with a rush last week, melting the snow and ice and changing mud into dust in a twinkling Such sudden changes keep everybody busy shifting stock, most of which is in prime condition for retailing. Still some growers have missed it again and their lilies will not be in on time, but I think there will be enough good plants for the demand, with the possible exception of azaleas.

In cut flowers there will be a shortage in everything save violets, of which there seems to be a bountiful supply. Carnations are off crop, while roses are short in number. Wholesale prices are well maintained and unless all signs fail this Easter will be the best on record.

Christ. Hansen, who lost nearly all of his stock owing to a leaky gas pipe in front of his premises, thinks he has a good claim against the gas company for his loss, which will reach thousands of dollars.

All of the traveling fraternity report good sales. A wonderful impetus has been given trade the past year. FELIX.

VINCENNES, IND.—The greenhouse property on the corner of First and Shelby streets, has been disposed of by J. A. Balmer to C. Schultz.

THE EASTER TRADE.

In comparing the Easter trade with that of a year ago it should be borne in mind that the Easter of 1899 was very generally the best ever known. Viewed in this light the reports which have come in this week, covering, as they do, the principal cities of the United States and Canada, show the flower trade to be in the most flourishing condition in its history. There are many points upon which the reports are practically unanimous. In the first place few fail to show the heaviest sales on record; then they practically agree upon the increasing popularity of flowering plants; in the matter of prices they show that the time is ripe for an advance, which in many localities, has already been made with success.

It is worthy of note that throughout almost the whole country the supply of Easter lilies was inadequate to meet the demand and that the call for carnations very generally exceeded the supply, with roses and violets moving as second choices and bulbous stock more salable than heretofore.

Outside the large cities, the centers of wealth, the demand for flowering plants of moderate price was very marked and every indication is that for next Easter there can be no more profitable investment. Lilies, azaleas and hyacinths were most in evidence but Crimson Ramblers, rhododendrons and hydrangeas were appreciated by the better trade.

A number of the reports are herewith presented:

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—J. G Heinl reports trade eclipsing even last Easter. There were enough plants but cut flowers were all short of the demand.

BANGOR, ME.—Adam Sekenger says cash sales increased one-third and that prices were higher. Every one was short of azaleas, lilies and pinks.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—J. A. Creelman says Easter was the best on record. Everything sold, especially plants, and lilies were far short of demand.

OMAHA, NEB.—Hess & Swoboda estimate the increase as six per cent. There was enough stock. Lilies sold extra well. Carnations were in strong demand.

BRATTLEBORO, VT.—Sales were fifteen per cent greater than a year ago with prices slightly higher on lilies and roses. The shortages were lily plants and carnations.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—There was a slight increase according to the estimate of Serveau Bros. There were enough cut flowers and plenty of plants except lilies and violets.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Trade was a fourth heavier than last year and prices that much higher. There was a slight shortage all along the line. Carnations sold best of all.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Farquhar Macrae says this was the best season on record, sales being ten per cent larger, with prices advanced one-third. Carnations were very scarce and of plants everything sold. Potted Harrisii were plentiful but there was a shortage of tulips and narcissi.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—L. E. Marquisee says trade was fifty per cent ahead of last year, with prices higher. There were not enough plants but sufficient cut flowers except carnations.

TRENTON, N. J.—C. Ribsam & Son estimate Easter trade at an increase of one-fourth; prices were better; there was not enough of anything. Lilies showed the greatest shortage.

OTTAWA, ONT.—John Graham says trade showed a thirty per cent increase. There were plants and sufficient cut stock except carnations and smilax. Lilies led the plant sales.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Wm. Blackman says trade increased twenty per cent without an advance of prices. All cut flowers were short of demand but there were enough plants except lilies.

LONDON, ONT.—Trade was one-fifth heavier than at any previous Easter. There was enough stock. Every flowering plant had friends. Cut lilies and carnations were most in favor.

ADRIAN, MICH.—Nathan Smith & Son report the usual Easter experience. There were enough flowering plants except lilies and enough cut flowers other than carnations. Tulips were least salable.

ST. JOHNS, N. B.—H. S. Cruikshank found Easter about like its predecessor. Plant sales were rather slow and there were enough cut flowers except carnations. Lilies were the popular flower.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The South Side Floral Company reports sales fifty per cent ahead of last year but at the same prices. The supply of cut flowers was inadequate but there were plants enough.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—John Spaulding says there was a slight increase over last Easter. Carnations were scarce and higher; lilies and azaleas were most in demand, but all cheap plants went quick.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—W. H. Murdock reports sales ahead of last year. More flowering plants might have been sold. All cut flowers went well. His new flowering begonias attracted much attention.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—C. Hansen found trade ten per cent better than last year, with stock enough of all kinds. Lilies were most in demand among plants and carnations among cut flowers. Azaleas sold slowly.

FAIRBURY, ILL.—John Milne & Son say sales increased thirty per cent and prices were much better. The greatest call was for Easter lilies but carnations, especially fancies, were in high favor. Violets were least salable.

BUCKSPORT, ME.—F. H. Moses says the Easter trade was greatly ahead of previous years and that supplies of cut flowers were inadequate, although prices did not advance. Pinks and roses were first choices.

WAVERLY, MD.—R. L. Graham states that there was stock enough for a fifteen per cent increase in sales with no rise of prices. Everything worth having was sold, however, roses and carnations being favored.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—E. S. Haskell says Easter was very like last year, prices better and not enough of anything. Azaleas and Harrisii were principally called for. Pinks were wanted, so were roses and violets.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—J. B. Keller estimates sales as ahead of last year. The supply of cut flowers was rather ahead of demand except carnations and there were great numbers of flowering plants which sold clean.

NORFOLK, VA.—O. C. Ports says he sold everything at a twenty-five per cent advance over last year. There were not enough plants and not near enough cut blooms. Lilies and carnations were most in demand.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—M. J. Lynch reports that retail trade showed a ten per cent increase There were plenty of plants except lilies and of cut flowers except carnations. Choice American Beauties sold slowly.

DAYTON, O.—J. B. Heiss reports everything about as usual at Easter except that Harrisii were very late with most growers, consequently very scarce and not nearly equal to the demand, either potted or as cut flowers.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—M. C. Dorris reports that Easter week was much larger than a year ago and that prices were considerably higher. Many more cut flowers could have been sold, especially American Beauties. There were a great many flowering plants and they all sold, but many buyers would have preferred lilies had they been obtainable. The tardy spring prevented the competition of outdoor flowers.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—W. A. Challant says that sales were about as heavy as a year ago but would have been larger had stock held out. All plants were scarce, lilies and palms being most in demand. Of cut flowers lilies and roses were shortest.

RACINE, WIS.—A. J. Fidler says that his trade was three times that of a year ago and all the dealers report increased sales. Prices were higher but the demand for first-class stock exceeded the supply at all times. There were enough plants except ferns.

NASHUA, N. H.—Trade was thirty-five per cent ahead of last Easter by the estimate of August Gaedeke & Co. Prices were about as usual. There was a fine supply of flowering plants, all of which sold well, and cut flowers were just equal to the demand.

ATLANTA, GA.—The Brookwood Floral Company found trade sixty per cent ahead of last year without an increase of prices. There were plenty of plants but not enough cut flowers. Of the former lilies sold best, of the latter, carnations and roses.

TOLEDO, O.—The Easter increase is estimated at one-third by Geo. A. Heinl. Prices did not run high and there were enough cut flowers, carnations being most in demand. Of plants there were not enough of the leaders, lilies, Crimson Rambles and azaleas.

DESMOINES, IA.—There were cut flowers enough but all blooming plants were short of the supply, according to W. L. Morris, who estimates the increase of sales at twenty-five per cent. Pot plants of lilies were in particular demand but azaleas did not go as well as usual.

WATERBURY, CONN.—A. Dallas reports business and prices the same as last year with adequate stock for all calls. Azaleas and lilies sold best of plants and of cut flowers all lines were in demand, but there was the same old complaint of wholesalers sending out overkept stock.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Samuel Smith reports the supply of both plants and cut flowers adequate for a twenty-five per cent increase in the volume of sales without an increase in prices, which he thinks would, however, have been justified by the rise in price of all other commodities.

OSWEGO, N. Y.—W. N. Mattoon says that sales were about the same as last Easter but that prices were slightly higher on cut flowers. There were plenty of roses and violets but not enough carnations. Nearly all flowering plants sold readily and there was a shortage of salable Harrisii.

KOKOMO, IND.—Trade was heavier than at any previous Easter, W. W. Coles reporting an increase of 115 per cent. Prices were not advanced but cut flowers were scarce. Carnations were most in demand. There were enough plants except lilies; azaleas sold fairly well but spiræas were a drug.

LINCOLN, ILL.—W. H. Gullett & Son estimate the Easter business as exceeding last year's by thirty per cent. Prices were higher than usual on carnations and potted lilies, which were the shortages. In cut flowers there was little call for bulbous stock but potted hyacinths sold second only to lilies.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—E. Nagel says that Easter sales were the heaviest ever known here and that prices on lilies and cut flowers were fifteen per cent higher than a year ago. Lilies, violets and carnations were all scarce. Of plants lilies and small hydrangeas were in greatest favor, azaleas going rather slowly.

LINCOLN, NEB.—C. H. Frey found sales thirty-five per cent greater than last year, with prices advanced twenty per cent. There were enough plants except lilies and azaleas and enough flowers except lilies and violets. The weather was so bad that longiflorums were backward and the Harrisii we so badly diseased that few were salable as pot plants.

WORCESTER, MASS.—There was increased sale for plants and less call for cut flowers, except carnations and violets. There were enough flowering plants except lilies. There was a light call for the best roses, but cheaper grades sold well. A. H. Lange says sales were twenty per cent ahead of last year.

PONTIAC, ILL.—The Easter sales are estimated, by W. J. Miller, as one-fourth heavier than a year ago. There were enough cut flowers although carnations were in particular demand. Decorative plants did not sell but all flowering stock moved, there bring a decided shortage of Easter lilies. Prices were better as a rule.

WHEELING, W. VA.—Max Hess says that for the best plants and cut flowers one could get his own price at Easter. Trade was one-fifth heavier than a year ago. There were plenty of cut flowers, carnations and roses being the only items in great demand, but of blooming plants the supply was short, everything selling well.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—This was the best Easter the trade ever had, Markey Bros. estimating the sales as twenty-five per cent ahead of last year, with prices at the same level. Of cut flowers carnations were short and among plants there were not enough Harrisii, but everything with a bloom sold. It was noticed that violets were not so much in demand as at last Easter.

TOPEKA, KANS.—The Bates Floral Company reports that, if anything, Easter sales were less than a year ago, owing to bad weather and decreased call for plants; prices were, however, higher on some lines. There was enough of everything, Easter lilies being about the only plants called for. Carnations led the cut flowers.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—James Horan & Son report that sales were greater than a year ago but that prices were lower and fewer cut flowers were used, the increase being on flowering plants. They say there was a plenty of everything, the principal call being for violet plants and hyacinths, and among cut stock for violets, pinks and roses.

UTICA, N. Y.—There was fifteen per cent increase in Easter sales as estimated by Wm. Mathews but prices were no higher than usual. There were enough plants except lilies, of which many were poor. Carnations were scarce, but there was enough in most other lines. The demand for orchids far exceeded the supply. Poor stock of any kind was not wanted.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—The money value of sales was equal to last year, according to John White, who says carnations were the only item which brought higher prices, as they were the only shortage. Azaleas were most in demand of flowering plants. The number of longiflorums grown each year increases as Harrisii decreases and the ratio between pot plants and cut lilies follows the same scale.

BUTTE, MONT.—Law Bros. report that there was enough funeral work to exhaust the supply of cut flowers, to say nothing of supplying the Easter demand. As a result prices were higher and sales showed an increase of twenty-five per cent. Harrisii sold at $5 per dozen as against $4 last year and Beauties, which were $5 a year ago, brought double. Harrisii and azaleas were most in demand among plants.

ROSES.

GRUSS AN TEPLITZ RENAMED.

The new rose, Gruss an Teplitz, which has been noticed this season chiefly from a rumor that it was being foisted on the trade in place of Liberty, has been renamed. Dingee & Conard have purchased the stock from Lambert and will send it out under the name of Virginia R. Coxe. G. C. W.

TEMPERATURE FOR AMERICAN BEAUTY.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Being a grower of American Beauty, I was naturally interested in the comments of "C. B. W." on the growing of that rose, which appeared in your columns a few weeks ago, and would like to ask him for figures as to the average night and day temperatures maintained by the leading growers of American Beauty, also what he considers the proper temperatures for it? Any light that can be thrown on the growing of this variety will be greatly appreciated by many florists. SUBSCRIBER.

In asking what I would consider the proper temperature for American Beauty, the correspondent evidently wishes a formula that will enable him to grow first-class Beauties without considering the matter in the light of varying conditions. If I were to give him such a formula it would be accompanied with the caution that he must read it carefully and not follow it too closely. The requirements are readable on the plants and are changeable.

The nearest that I can come to answering the question outlined above, and be consistent with my ideas, is to advise that the temperature should not be raised by artificial means above 50° from sunset to sunrise, unless one knows exactly why a slight rise would be beneficial. From sunrise to sunset the houses may be run about 10° higher than the night temperature, unless it is a cloudy day. The effect of the sun may be considered correct because it increases temperature when it gives the strongest light.

The sap which goes to build up the plant is obliged to rise from the roots to the foliage, where it undergoes a change caused by the action of light, and in its changed condition goes back to the stem and is distributed where needed.

The American Beauty's marked profusion of foliage, all along the stem up to and around the flower, is a fair indication that liberal supplies of such elaborated sap are necessary. It a temperature is maintained out of proportion to the light the canes must be more slender, the foliage less perfect; the plant cannot stand still in the heat or build strongly without sufficient material. Another matter for consideration is that each cane produces a flower, leaving but little foliage besides that required by each individual stem. The canes are cut long, so that cutting two or three flowers from a plant within a few days is giving the plant a severe pruning, leaving the working power of the roots overbalancing the capacity of the foliage. This causes the new shoots to develop on the "water-spout" or "sucker" order. This is always the result when the foliage of a healthy plant is reduced too greatly. Then come the long, slender shoots, with scarcely any leaves, and things go from bad to worse until the sun becomes so powerful as to accomplish the necessary changes through the lessened amount of foliage.

This matter of light seems to be too little considered by growers and the results of their labor must be largely a matter of chance until it is thought as much of as are heat and water. The change in the power of light is forcibly illustrated by practice in photography. A plate that requires one second exposure at noon-time in July may require five seconds at the same hour in December in order to get the same quality of picture; you can see that the average time would never make a perfect picture; averages will not do. C. B. W.

CARNATIONS.

SLEEPY CARNATIONS.

Some time ago I noticed an article in one of the trade papers, from a St. Louis correspondent, in reference to some carnations that had been sent to Texas, the receiver writing that they were asleep when the box was opened. The commission dealer seemed to doubt the man's word, stating it was fresh stock and that these complaints came from men who had open accounts and not from C. O. D. parties. We want to say a word in favor of the Texas man. We have been receiving carnations for years from a reliable Chicago firm, and up to this year they have given entire satisfaction; but this year every shipment either comes in asleep or the blooms go that way in six or eight hours. Our loss has been so heavy that we have had to discontinue our regular shipments and only buy when we have orders that will move the flowers as soon as received. In no case are they salable the next morning. The fault must be with the growers, and if there is not a remedy the carnation will cease to be a shipping flower for any long distance.

Little Rock, Ark. D. M. TIPTON.

BURSTED CALYXES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please advise me as to the cause of bursted carnation calyxes, also remedy. My plants have been kept at a night temperature of 45° to 50°, and 65° to 75° by day. The soil has been kept moist but not "soggy." The plants look well and, with the exception of the above trouble, they are doing well, the only variety not effected being Daybreak. McGowan, Scott and Emily Pierson are doing the worst, from fifty to seventy-five per cent bursting. A. G.

Bursted calyxes and rust seem to be evils constantly recurring with all carnation growers and the only remedy for either is good culture and as even a temperature as it is possible to maintain. Daybreak with many growers, shows a decided tendency to burst and the only reason why it does well for the correspondent is that the temperature given is about right for it, while it is not quite high enough for McGowan and Scott, both of which will be all the better for 55° of heat. Pierson I have never had experience with.

Allowing the plants to go without disbudding for a month or six weeks and then disbudding them closely will, in some instances, induce bursted calyxes, and not disbudding at all will also have a tendency that way. Another cause at this season of the year is that the sun is so much stronger than heretofore that the houses heat up, during the day, to 80° or 90° and the night temperature is not kept up in proportion. The result is that instead of the difference between night and day temperature being about 10°, which is the proper relation, it will be from 20° to 30° and almost any carnation will burst.

From the same cause, the bright sun, the growth of the plants is much more vigorous now than in the winter months and unless the watering and fertilizing is properly managed to meet the changed condition it will cause weak calyxes. Too much food in the soil, either in the shape of water or fertilizer, or too little, will have much the same effect, and this will have to be regulated and watched by each grower for himself.

ALBERT M. HERR.

EASTER PATRONAGE FAVORS PLANTS.—CUT FLOWERS OF SECONDARY VALUE.—LARGE VARIETY OF FLOWERING MATERIAL.—CUT FLOWERS ABUNDANT.—SHIPPING TRADE LIGHT.—VARYING REPORTS AS TO THE EASTER SALES.—A FINE WEDDING DECORATION.—OTHER NOTES OF INTEREST.

As anticipated, the Easter patronage went strongly to plants in this city and flowers had to take second place. Regarding the plant trade, however, the reports from the leading retail stores are quite conflicting in comparing this year's experience with that of last year, some claiming a substantial increase, the majority stating that no difference had been noted, and a few recording an actual decrease. This latter condition is accounted for, in part, by the lateness of Easter this year and the absence abroad of many of the best buyers, which looks reasonable enough, as the adverse reports come from establishments catering to the higher class of society. Then, again, many more stores were devoted to the plant trade than heretofore, thus subdividing the business and cutting down selling prices, and the older establishments felt the effect. It was further noted, and quite generally, that the very large and costly plants were not called for and that small specimens and moderate priced arrangements were much more popular, even with buyers of abundant means. The plant growers feel jubilant over their success, having been all cleared out, in advance, of everything that was ready and the stock left unsold is not their loss. There did not appear to be any shortage in any special line excepting that azaleas in the smaller sizes were disposed of early and a good many more could have been sold. One observant retailer expressed the opinion that the popularity of azaleas and rhododendrons as Easter plants had been seriously impaired by their abundance all through the season, the florists' windows having displayed them continuously since Christmas.

Contrary to general predictions there were fully as many lilies as this market could assimilate and the higher advance prices were not maintained. While hardly up to the high grade indicated by stock inspected two weeks before Easter, it is yet true that the average quality of the lilies offered was above the ordinary. The plants were uniform and of moderate height throughout. Hydrangeas were superb, stocky and with noble trusses of bloom. Crimson Ramblers made a great run but will never again bring the top prices which the growers got this year. Nothing in the market could compare with the boronias for graceful beauty. They were in the new fashioned, short pots, as were also some of the ericas, primulas, etc., and were greatly admired. The cool weather favored the violets; they were Lady Campbell variety invariably and sent in mostly in paper pots. Hyacinths were quite abundant and sold well. Genistas were well done everywhere but not very abundant. Acacias were better than ever before. Bougainvilleas, hybrid roses, cinerarias, deutzias and primulas were seen occasionally and a few Dendrobium nobile in bloom were an acceptable novelty. Pot covers of various material were universally used and ribbons were put upon almost every plant sent out, usually in good taste. Very little tissue paper was used and that mostly in establishments of the second class. Hampers, zinc-lined, were made use of more than ever before, being of all sizes from the diminutive violet hamper up to the receptacle big enough to accommodate half a dozen good sized azalea plants. The lower priced ones, however, sold most readily. Ferns and foliage plants were conspicuously absent from the Easter displays and were not called for.

The cut flower trade was decidely slow until Saturday, and up to that time the wholesalers were very despondent. The smaller retail stores report a very satisfactory cut flower demand, better in fact, than for some years past, but in some of the large, fashionable establishments a slight falling off was reported. The retailers speak favorably, as a rule, of the quality of the cut flowers as received by them. Those wholesalers who have been accustomed to do a large shipping trade, found this branch of their business seriously diminished this year. Those who cater more to suburban and short distance shipping, report a very satisfactory demand. Pickled stock was not in evidence as much as formerly, most of the material coming in fresh and clean. Whatever there was of aged stock was promptly discovered and treated accordingly. Roses, as usual, were the worst aggressors.

The retail stores refrained from ordering many cut flowers in advance, depending upon getting all they would require at short notice, and this they had no trouble in doing, although at the finish there developed a moderate pinch on special Bridesmaids, Brunners, Jacqs and high grade Beauties. Carnations sold well all through, all grades being disposed of readily and at top figures, Daybreak, whites and some varieties of red only showing any weakness. Bulbous stock, with the exception of lily of the valley, moved with exasperating slowness and at prices that a few years ago would have been declared ruinous. On Brides of all grades, on some classes of Beauty, on mignonette, low grade violets and lilies, and asparagus there was also much difficulty to find buyers at any price, and low grade roses of all varieties had a similar experience. The quantity of violets received exceeded all past holiday records, but owing to the reasonable figures quoted on them and the favorable weather for wearing them, they sold out satisfactorily when the quality justified. The selling qualities of Beauty were seriously obstructed by the presence of so many good Brunners in the market. Callas brought better figures than lilies, for once. A few handsome larkspurs were the only cut flower novelty noted.

Alex. McConnell had a fine wedding decoration last Tuesday at Delmonico's. The ceremony was performed under a canopy of Bride roses and lily of the valley. The same flowers were used on the bride's table, while on the twenty-four guests' tables 500 Beauties were displayed.

The vases and little garden plots in front of hotels and many other buildings, are brilliant with hyacinths and pansies just now.

M. J. Lynch came down from Poughkeepsie the other day, minus his mustache, and had lots of fun with his friends, none of whom recognized him.

Bobbink & Atkins received a shipment of 400 bay trees on the steamship Westernland.

Forty thousand trees are being set out this spring in Riverside Park.

John Young had a consignment of cypripediums for Easter, the only ones in town.

STORY OF THE BUSIEST EASTER NEW ENGLAND EVER EXPERIENCED.—PLANTSMEN AND CUT FLOWER GROWERS ARM IN ARM IN PROSPERITY.—VAST NUMBERS OF LILIES SOLD.—CARNATIONS NOT SO SCARCE AS PREDICTED.—SPRING APPARENT IN THE SHRUBBERIES.—NOTES OF THE EARLY BLOOMERS.—DAWSONS GO TO ITALY.

The first decisive returns from the great Easter campaign began to materialize early in the week preceding Sunday, from the plant growers, who, as orders came pouring in and shipments went out, were then commencing to realize the sweeping success they had made, and as, day after day, the demand kept increasing until finally everything was exhausted and it was impossible to supply any more, then the feelings of anxiety which, throughout the long weeks of preparation, had been the plant growers' constant companion, vanished and gave way to an elation such as is seldom witnessed in conservative Boston floriculture. To the retailer and the wholesale cut flower dealer the assurance of a prosperous outcome came later. Their task it was to shoulder, for the time being, the burden of responsibility which the grower had so exultantly cast off and it was well along towards the close of Saturday when the confidence inspired by the glorious weather matured finally to the full assurance of an unprecedented Easter triumph. It was a memorable occasion for the Boston and all New England florists and fully bore out the predictions of the most sanguine. The public responded to the Easter sentiment as never before, the outgoing trains and trolley cars on Saturday night reminding one of Thanksgiving eve, with the substitution of lily plants for turkeys! But, be it remembered, the Boston florists had sense enough to refrain from stuffing the local press reporters with the time-honored, inane yarns about the great scarcity of flowers and the frightfully high prices to be exacted by the florists at Easter. Let us hope we have seen the last of that stupid folly!

The plants offered in this market were of the usual Easter variety, lilies, Rambler roses, azaleas and astilbes predominating. There were no novelties worth enumerating and the average quality of everything was good. Lilies were available in vast numbers, the greater part being longiflorums of moderate height and bloomed to a nicety. The receipts of these were so enormous that it seemed on Friday and Saturday morning as though it would not be possible to market them all, but these fears proved to be groundless. A tour through the leading retail stores in this city failed to reveal the use of a single ribbon, fancy hamper or tissue paper wrapper and very few pot covers, plain flower pots being the almost invariable rule. Some growers had, however, adopted the low, wide shaped pots for primroses, violets and such subjects, with pleasing effect.

The supply of cut flowers was fairly equal to the demand. Of some sorts more might have been sold, could they have been obtained; with some other things the prices realized by the wholesalers would have been better had the growers sent them in as fast as ready instead of hoarding them up for Saturday's shipments, and at the close a few lots of various things, principally white, were left unsold, but all this represents such a trifling proportion in the grand total of the stock handled satisfactorily that it is hardly worth recording except for the purpose of warning the growers of these goods against the forcing for future Easter occasions of quantities of white stock and astilbe, which people are glad to get at Decoration day but have no use for at Easter. It can be stated without fear of contradiction that the number of violets sold here exceeded by far that of any previous occasion, the perfect weather accelerating their demand for street wear. Carnations did not quite hold up to the high figures anticipated by many, neither were they as scarce at the end of the week as they were for several days previous and a good many white ones of "so-so" quality were unloaded at about one-half quoted prices, at the market on Saturday morning, by growers who had been accumulating them in the antiquated way, who will probably continue to do so as long as they live and upon whom sympathy and advice are alike wasted.

The warm spring days are starting the bushes into growth and the nursery rows and plantations at the Arnold Arboretum begin once more to be a potent attraction to tree lovers. Cornus Mas is a cloud of yellow and the bees are holding a carnival among the bloom. Cornus officinalis from Japan is already nearly gone, being the earliest to bloom. Dirca palustris is just opening its yellow tassels and Erica carnea is covered with pink bells. This is the hardiest of the heaths. Others, ordinarily hardy, such as Calluna vulgaris, have suffered very severely from the past winter, which, although classed as a mild season, seems to have done great damage to late growing varieties that failed to get thoroughly ripened up in the fall. Pyrus Japonica will have but few flowers this spring, the warm weather in December having thrown it almost into bloom and left the buds powerless to resist the subsequent cold. Prunus Davidiana is also a failure this year, showing only an occasional scattering flower among the blackened buds. Mr. Dawson has succeeded in striking a lot of fine grafts of Hale's paper shell hickory.

Walter Dawson has been given a leave of absence from his duties at the University of Pennsylvania and sails for Italy on Saturday of this week, where he will be joined by his brother, Fred., in June, who goes to study Italian landscape gardening.

McCarthy's importation of nursery stock is superb, certainly the finest ever seen here and worthy of inspection before the sales of next Tuesday and Friday.

EASTER THE GREATEST OF THE FLOWER FESTIVALS —THE WIDE USE OF MATERIAL IN THE CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE.—AN ESTIMATE OF THE VOLUME OF BUSINESS. —NOTES ON THE STOCK IN MARKET.— LILIES STILL THE LEADER.—FEW PLANTS LEFT OVER.—PLENTY OF CUT FLOWERS. —A TRICK WITH CARNATIONS —WITH THE GROWERS —PERSONAL JOTTINGS.

Easter is undoubtedly the supreme flower festival of the year. All the world and his wife, Christian and pagan, just and unjust, unite in celebrating it, and in Philadelphia this year's observance has been more pronounced and enthusiastic than ever. The business done by the florists was enormous. In addition to the regular flower shops, annexes innumerable appeared as if by magic, the farmers' markets blossomed out, and the highways and byways of the city were gay with flowering plants.

Out the Ridge Road was almost a continual flower show. The street was lined with stands, one might say, for nearly every block had its patch of color, and some of them half a dozen. Every other man or woman carried a pot or two of flowering plants—a glorious procession of beauty and fragrance extending for miles and reaching its climax at the gates of Laurel Hill, where the Westcott brothers, their sons and satellites held forth. When I looked in there on Saturday afternoon customers were six deep in all directions and the big establishment was being taxed to its utmost to supply their wants. There was no sign of the redoubtable Commodore himself. Someone pointed in the direction of a crowd at the far end of the biggest greenhouse. That indicated that the fish were biting and in danger of swamping the boat if the Commodore didn't watch out. I took a hurried look through the houses. It seemed as if a cyclone had struck their contents and blown much fine gold and silver into the treasury. I did finally get a glimpse of the Commodore. He was talking to a fine lady in her carriage, the footman obligingly holding the door open. When such a cool wind blows, the place for one's hat is on the top of one's head. That's what you would naturally think, but one old gallant we know would catch pneumonia or any other old thing rather than fail in due observance of the rules of polite society. I admire the courage and the fine disregard of consequences but, like the coward who ran away, I would rather have people say "there he is," than "there he goes."

The Ridge Road is mentioned as typical of the situation on all the main thoroughfares of the city. Easter week was certainly the florists' harvest. I have heard several guesses at the gross amount of business done, ranging all the way from a hundred thousand to a million, but there's no getting anywhere near the truth in that connection. If I ventured a guess myself I should say a quarter million. Take your choice. Wouldn't it be interesting to know what the amount will be one hundred years from now? I can imagine the smile of some antiquarian of the next century when he looks over his file of the AMERICAN FLORIST and finds how big we thought we were when we figured using a million dollars' worth of flowers at Easter!

I do not remember noticing any decided novelties this year. Easter lilies were as popular as ever and sold out pretty clean. Several growers had batches about a week behind time. These would all have sold at good figures had they been in. There were also some lots of the "sawed-off" strain that held fire a bit but they mostly all found homes in the end. One of the big department stores had to withdraw lilies from their advertisement for want of stock and one of the principal up-town florists told me he sent all over for more lilies Saturday afternoon and couldn't find any.

The big plants of azaleas did not sell quite so well this year, but the medium and smaller plants had a fine run. Harris's stock of these was exceptionally well done this year, among it being some plants of Flambeau three to four feet in diameter that were simply glorious! Vander Cruysen is still the most popular of all the azaleas, about eight to every ten sold being of that variety.

Crimson Ramblers sold well, there being but few good plants of these left over. Craig & Son sent in a grand lot of shapely, well-foliaged plants with flowers of a fine, deep color that indicated much intelligent care in cultivation. I did not see any of the Pink, White or Yellow Ramblers this year. Presumably they have proved disappointing as an Easter plant and have been discarded. Hybrid roses in pots were in good demand. One of the best lots I saw came from Jacob Becker's and another well done batch was credited to Robert Scott & Son.

Bougainvillea Sanderiana made a fine show in all the first-class stores and sold moderately well. I saw some Sunday morning at Fox's Broad street establishment that had dropped their leaves badly. A plant that would go to pieces so quickly as that is not fit to sell. To send out such stock is an outrage on a customer, and is little better than robbery. Like the hydrangea it needs lots of water and that might account for some of the trouble, although undue forcing is most likely the main defect. Hydrangeas were more in favor this year. Big specimens had the call even in preference to azaleas of the same size. They seem to be regaining some of their lost popularity, as is also the genista, the latter having gone much better this season.

Pots and pans of hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, lily of the valley, etc., had an enormous sale and were of excellent quality, notwithstanding the unpromising look of the bulbs last fall. This class of stock is indispensable in supplying the immense demand for small-priced Easter plants, and their popularity this year is as great if not greater than ever. Some very pretty effects were observed where these subjects were used in made up baskets in conjunction with ferns, small palms, heaths, etc.

The sale of cut flowers did not rise above the normal Easter tide. There was plenty of everything, excepting carnations. That divine flower doubled and trebled in price and yet when the rush was over on Sunday morning there were lots of carnation flowers left over. The commission men who control this item worked the scare very shrewdly and unloaded at high prices on some of the smart young men who do the buying for the retail shops. Some of these alleged "smart" young buyers do not seem to have tumbled to the idea that it is best to buy sparingly when fireworks are on. Customers are liable to switch off on something else rather than be robbed.

George Anderson had a dandy house of Brunners ready on the nick of time and these sold well. They would probably have brought more money if there hadn't been others around, but John Burton came in with a house and Myers, of Glenside, with another and there were rumors of consignments from New York, so the situation had to be faced with moderate prices. Anderson's lilies were the best lot I have seen in my travels this Easter, all Japanese stock. George is still as adamantine as ever that it's all the growers' fault that the lilies don't come right. Bulbs have nothing to do with it. I suppose the only thing to convince him will be a failure on his part some fine day. However, he persists with singular pertinacity in getting them in all right every year.

On the whole I think the nearest approach to an Easter plant novelty this year is the erica. Of course it is not really a novelty but to many or most of the flower buying public it has all the attributes of a novelty. Heretofore the supply has been limited. This year there has been a big increase in the supply and twenty-five-cent plants were snapped up eagerly at a dollar, with other grades in proportion. The daintiest of all is the cupressina and it was picked up first, but all sold well, fragrans, Cavendishiana, persoluta, Mediterranea and translucens being the sorts most seen. Yes, they were sold as "the real Scottish heather" of course. Not such a heinous sin that, however, when you consider how many kilties there are in Bloomfontein at present. One of the stores had the good taste to say "Heather from South Africa" on the card in the window. That's better and just as effective as a catchword.

Why hasn't Mr. Grigg thought of this, "Good Queen Bess's favorite flower," for the genista? The broom was the emblem of the Plantagents. I expect a sprig of his genuine fragrant English wallflower for my buttonhole for that suggestion the next time I pass the Century Flower Shop. Its many a long day since I had a whiff of that delightful spring-time odor and it pleased me much when I came on a batch of it there on Saturday night.

They tell me it's the country florists mostly, who read the city notes in these columns. If that's the case I want to ask them if they know how the big growers in a large city put in their time Easter week? Probably they imagine they work like beavers until 2 a. m. and get up again at six, just as is done in the country; not them! If you see an oak-leaf you can imagine what an oak tree is like so I will give you just one little leaflet. I met four of the big nabobs at a quarter to eleven Saturday night; one was from West Philadelphia, one from Germantown, one from Chestnut Hill, the other from out Darby way. It seems they had occupied a box at the opera house all to themselves and had listened with huge delight to a blood-curdling tragedy of Nero's time, gloating particularly over the scenes where the wild beasts tore their human victims to pieces in the Roman arena until the place was swamped with blood and the walls spattered with gore. That sounds awful and yet what more natural place to find these cold blooded nabobs and pirates who had wrung the souls of the poor storemen in the early part of the week with blood curdling prices for their stock. I suggested some such reflection to the group and they had the audacity to pretend that they were all the most tender hearted of men. One of them pointed as proof to the fact that he had stopped shooting live pigeons because he reflected that he wouldn't like it himself if he were the pigeon. Another put forward the plea that he must also be tender because his early years were spent in a religious book store. The West Philadelphia man was a philosophic savage and he claimed it was all in the point of view. If a man was up in a balloon and fell down in the forest and was torn to pieces by tigers we would say what a calamity, but the the tigers would say what a godsend! From that point they proceeded to predestination, fore-knowledge, Darwin, Herbert Spencer, Burns and general goodness. But the pirate and the savage was there all the same, although hidden under this philosophic cloak. So take warning, my trusting country friends, and be on your guard when you come to town on buying bent.

R. A. Stewart has moved to a temporary location on Thirteenth street. He will return to his old stand, Thirteenth and Walnut, as soon as the new building is completed, where he will have more room and enlarged facilities generally. Mr. Stewart has been a success as a retail florist and has built up a snug little business in a quiet way. He has hosts of well wishers in the trade who are glad to see him prosper.

We had a call this week from John M. Hughes, well known as the superintendent at Wooton when Mr. Childs was alive. He is now occupying a similar position in Montour county, this state. Other callers this week were Mr. Koster, Boskoop, and Mr. Hughenholtz, Haarlem.

The wife of James M. Thoirs, the popular Camden florist, and their three children sail on the 21st inst. for a European trip. They will be gone six months.

By next week the wreck will be cleared away and you may look for his weekly letter as usual. It will of course be a mirror of purity, a meridian blaze of prudence and full moon of discretion, as "R. RESUME OF THE EASTER SUPPLY AND DEMAND.—MANY MISCALCULATIONS ON THE CUT AVAILABLE.—LILIES FAR SHORT OF THE CALL.—REMARKABLE LACK OF GOOD FLOWERING PLANTS—SEEN AT THE PRINCIPAL RETAIL STORES—REINBERG'S BUILDING OPERATIONS.—FUCHS SELLS OUT.—JOTTINGS.

There can be no argument; the lily's the thing at Easter. Those who predicted an abundant supply for this year, and the opinion was very generaal, as witness the low early quotations, were far amiss in their calculations and usually out of pocket. There were nowhere near enough, either of pot plants or cut flowers. A week before Easter it was possible to place orders at $90 per thousand; the day before Easter it was hard work to find lilies at $2 a dozen and a few small lots brought $2.50. The demand was never heavier. Undoubtedly the miserable weather of the week had some influence upon the supply, as it did on all other lines, but there were other miscalculations in this truly remarkable season. Nearly everyone figured on fair cuts of roses and a considerable shortage of carnations, but it turned out to be just the other way. As a matter of fact there was not stock enough of any kind and nearly every wholesaler was obliged to cut orders more or less, at least on some lines. It is generally conceded that there was not as much material available as a year ago but at the same time business was heavier than ever, the increase in sales bring due to the higher prices, which extended all along the line because of the scarcity of the items most in demand, the low grades being decidedly the gainer. There is less than the usual complaint of pickled stock. This week matters have quieted down to a considerable degree but the big houses are still selling $400 and $500 a day, with stock scarce and prices fairly well maintained in spite of the bad weather of the beginning of the week.

A tour of the principal retail places revealed some big stocks of bulbous plants but a remarkable lack of variety and of well-grown flowering plants of the better class. By far the finest of the Easter showings was that of C. A. Samuelson. His big window was curtained at the back and side with asparagus, while suspended from the ceiling were a dozen doves, swinging in the breezes of an invisable electric fan, each attached by narrow white satin ribbons to a chariot of white and gold loaded down with lilies. In the center and left of the window were fancy and birch-bark, egg-shaped baskets, the latter filled with baby primroses. The store was full of fine azaleas and exceptionally well-grown hydrangeas and the work room next door was crowded with potted lilies and bulbous stock, while the show case was overrunning with the best that the cut flower market affords. One of Mangel's windows was banked with exceptionally good azaleas and hydrangeas, with the potted hyacinths and lilies in the spare spaces. In the other window he made a fine show of his specialty, long Beauties, and bright colored carnations. Smythe's store was full of potted plants, mostly bulbous stock, in all sorts of receptacles, baskets, pots and pans. He had, of course, a great many lilies and a nice showing of the usual run of cut material. Wienhoeber as usual had a large display, which included hyacinths in pots and pans, tulips, daffodils, daisies and some fine azaleas and lilies, the latter from Buettner. At Wittbold's the principal attraction was a display of egg-shaped receptacles made of birch bark, containing either tulips and ferns; red geraniums, pterises and ageratum, or hyacinths, lilies and several kinds of small ferns. Lange had his place as full as could be of potted Harrisii, hydrangeas and hyacinths, the latter predominating. He also had numerous handsome baskets of potted plants. Kreitling had an exceptionally fine lot of callas and they made a good showing in his window. Phil. Hauswirth and all his assistants were kept unusually busy, having been unable to move into the new store on Michigan avenue until Saturday. Plants were conspicuous at Friedman's, some rhododendrons being particularly good. Baby primroses in miniature hampers were attractive, as also were the novelties in birch-bark receptacles of varied design. Halle had Harrisii, two 9-11 bulbs in a pot, which were among the finest plants seen in this market. Schubert showed a nice lot of azaleas, and a variety of pots of daffodills and tulips besides lilies and the everyday cut flowers. The Central Floral Company did not go deeply into the flowering plant business but did a big trade with a fine line of cut flowers. Mosconesotes, in the Masonic Temple, sold azaleas and lilies and cut flowers. All the retailers report a satisfactory trade. Anoteworthyfeature was the large number of fairly good plants, including azaleas, lilies and Dutch bulbs, handled by the sidewalk florists on Saturday and Sunday.

Albert Fuchs has sold his greenhouses, their contents and his business to Walter Retzer and Alfred Everett, who will hereafter conduct the establishment under the name of Retzer & Co. Mr. Retzer is an energetic young man, a graduate of Shaw Botanic Gardens at St. Louis, and has spent the past year with O. C. Simonds at Graceland Cemetery. There is no better location in Chicago for such a business as Mr. Retzer proposes to conduct and his success is in his own hands. Mr. Fuchs is now talking of a trip to Paris.

Peter Reinberg is now putting all his energies into the erection of his sixteen new houses 25x265, the largest addition he has ever put up in a single year. Last year such houses cost him $2,800 apiece and this season it is thought that the increased cost of material will make the investment a little greater. Mr. Reinberg will bench 6,000 Liberty plants this spring, 1000 of which will be grafted stock.

Brant & Noe, who are wholesale rose growers, shipping all their cut direct from the greenhouses to retailers in the principal cities, expect to be able to double their business with the new range of houses they are erecting.

C. S. Stewart who was with Benthey & Co., surprised his friends by the suddenness with which he threw up his job and left for Omaha.

John Thorpe is contributing to the Sunday Times-Herald, of this city, a series of articles on horticultural subjects.

C. W. Erne, who is with E. H. Hunt has gone to his old home at Terre Haute, to spend the summer.

The growers of this locality are now talking of combining for the purchase of coal.

BUSIEST EASTER IN THE HISTORY OF THE TRADE.—SALES DOUBLE LAST YEAR'S.—PRICES VERY GOOD.—A VISIT TO DUNLOP'S.—BUILDING OPERATIONS PLANNED.—WITH OTHER GROWERS.—JOTTINGS.

I do not think the Toronto florists ever had such a busy time as they had Easter week. Wm. Jay & Son sold double the quantity of flowers they ever sold at Easter before. Jno. H. Dunlop does not claim quite so large an increase as that but his business has been very much in excess of former years. From the pile of "empties" at C. Tidy's, labeled "ginger ale," "sarsaparilla," etc., you would have thought he had been "treating" a detachment of the volunteers going to Africa, but it was only the remains of the soft refreshment found necessary to relieve the drooping spirits of the tired workmen on Friday and Saturday. I just caught him making up a deposit for the bank. Oh! such a wad! There was a large supply of flowers of good quality and apparently a ready sale for everything. Pots of lilac and Rambler roses were in great demand, the latter bringing $2 to $3 each. Some of Dale's enormous sweet peas retailed, I am told, for $1.50 a dozen.

Dunlop had some fine azaleas and sold the bulk of them. A trip to his greenhouses disclosed the fact that notwithstanding the close cutting for the festival, he had some fine blooms coming on rapidly. His roses are now in prime condition. There are long benches of Beauty with grand flowers and the sturdiest stems, four to five feet long; houses of Bride, Bridesmaid, Lady Dorothea, Mrs. Morgan, etc., in perfect condition. I could not help noticing how few the varieties are now being grown, to what were grown ten or twelve years ago. The public taste seems to have settled down to certain standards, such as I have named and a few others. He has a very large stock of young carnations of all the latest and best varieties, ready for the ground as soon as that is ready. His greenhouses have encroached so much upon his land that to make room for these carnations he has recently purchased another couple of acres adjoining him to the west and intends this summer putting up four new houses each 18x137 feet.

Miller & Sons, Bracondale, are also going to build this summer and put up a new carnation house 38x300. Here I saw some benches of carnations which for quantity of bloom, and very good bloom, too, would be hard to beat. A house of the pink seedling, Lady Van Horne, was a mass of flowers and Fred. Miller told me it had been in the same condition since October. He stated that the sale of plants and flowers for Easter had been enormous and gave me figures, but the latter were too much for my poor brain, and they slipped away. They have the contract to supply the Toronto public school gardens and are consequently growing large quantities of geraniums and other bedding plants, which are all in excellent condition. They are growing large quantities of ferns from spores and appear to be meeting with considerable success at this somewhat difficult task. A propagating bench full of the Boston fern promises to give him a very large stock. He is going to grow ferns much more extensively in future, and has disposed of nearly all his stock of palms. His grand new white seedling chrysanthemum, Timothy Eaton, is being propagated and, although he has received an offer of a considerable sum for the stock, he intends to retain it himself and put the flowers on the market next year. He will have a house especially for this variety.

Geo. Mills, of Ossington avenue, is about to build an addition to his greenhouses; I do not know the size. John Gard will also put up another greenhouse.

J. Butterworth has dropped very much out of the floricultural business and has most of his houses devoted to vegetables. He says he makes more money out of them, in fact he appears to have made his pile and proposes to sell out and retire next year.

ANOTHER SEASON OF DROUGHT.—THE THIRD DRY YEAR IN SUCCESSION.—DISASTER LIKELY TO BE THE CONSEQUENCE.—PLENTY OF STOCK EXCEPT LILIES AND VIOLETS.—A VISIT TO SIEVERS'.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

Your correspondent at this point has always been an optimist and expressed faith in southern California and is still hoping for the best, but we are nearing the end of the rainy season and the record up to date shows a rainfall of less than six inches since September 1, 1899, which is considerably less than one-half the amount in an ordinary season. This will be the third "dry" year in succession, something heretofore unknown, and the result will be disastrous. While much water has been developed, many artesian wells have ceased to flow and ordinary wells have failed to supply the usual quantity. Many of the water companies have materially advanced the rates to consumers already, while usually no irrigating is done so early in the season. While we have had less than one inch of rain since January 3, but few of the growers have suffered, as most of them have water from some irrigating system, but several have been obliged to wait a considerable time to have their order filled for "a day's run of water" and in these cases some stock has suffered.

The outlook for the Easter trade is very good. There will be plenty of flowers to fill all orders except for lilies and violets. The violet season is rapidly drawing to a close and the Bermuda lilies are badly diseased, even where they have been grown comparatively cold to keep them back for the Easter trade. The very high winds from the Pacific ocean, which have prevailed for a week past, have damaged the carnations that were in bloom, but a few days of comparatively calm weather will give many thousands of blooms at this season of the year. Sweet peas are here in all their beauty and are in great demand. Capt. Melville Walker makes a specialty of sweet peas, growing the finest varieties by the acre, and he now has them by the wagon-load.

On a recent visit to San Francisco your correspondent very much regretted to find Carl Kruger, of Sievers & Co., on the sick list. While scarcely able to do so Mr. Kruger showed us over the establishment, including the new carnation houses, where a number of famous carnations have been produced by this skillful hybridizer. We were permitted to view and examine the seedlings as well as some named sorts not yet in commence. We dare not tell all we saw, but there are some world-beaters hidden away that will surprise the florists within five years, and then we shall have to raise our standard of an ideal carnation.

Miss Harriet Goodin, who has been identified with the florists' trade for a number of years, recently with the Inglenside Floral Co., is building an office and store room on Broadway, where she will engage in the business for herself.

W. A. Peschelt, head gardener for Senator Jones, at Santa Monica, will soon leave for the east on his way to Europe. Mr. Peschelt will leave New York on the Kaiser Frederick, sailing May 10. He will spend three months in Europe visiting the leading trade establishments as well as seeing the show at Paris before returning to his duties here.

The Chase Nursery Company, at Riverside, has been unable to propagate a sufficient quantity of roses to supply their trade. Having overcome a number of difficulties they are now propagating very successfully and are planting a large acreage to supply the eastern nursery trade.

Edmund Germain, a member of the Germain Fruit Co., and for several years its manager, has retired from the firm and will soon embark in the dried fruit business, handling all such California products in car load lots only.

Howard & Smith report a splendid catalogue trade. They find a good demand for all novelties listed, but especially for the new canna, Mrs. Kate Gray. D. R. W.

BUSIEST EASTER ON RECORD.—PLANT SALES UNPRECEDENTED BUT DONE IN A DAY.—PURCHASERS OBJECT TO HIGH PRICES FOR CUT FLOWERS.—THE CLUB MEETING.—NEW RETAIL STORES.

A review of the Easter trade shows the ever increasing popularity of flowering plants for this festive season. The weather the whole week up to Saturday morning was miserable, snow and rain alternating with cloudy and windy periods which deterred people from even visiting the florists' stores and markets. This unfavorable condition of the weather was alone responsible for the slow sales of plants during the greater part of the week. Saturday, however, it cleared and, while it was not the ideal Easter weather, it was such a vast improvement over the first days of the week that people came out in great numbers and crowded the stores from early morning till late at night. And thus it might be said that the plant trade of the week was done on the one day, Saturday. The trade on Sunday ran principally to cut flowers, but high priced cut flowers on either Saturday or Sunday stood no show alongside of flowering plants, even when the latter were priced fairly high. There was a good supply of cut flowers of all kinds except carnations, which were very scarce, but when the necessary high price was attached to them they, too, moved slowly enough to clearly show that the public will not even at Easter pay what seems to be an extraordinary price, and so much more than is ordinarily charged for the same stock. Easter lilies were the most popular of flowering plants and there were not nearly enough to meet the demand. Every dealer reports an increase of trade over last season, in some cases as much 100 per cent, but fifteen per cent would represent a fair average.

Our club meeting Wednesday night was well attended. Two new candidates were admitted to membership. The principal feature of the meeting was a paper on tree planting by S. Taplin, whose wide and varied experience in that line enabled him to treat the subject in a thorough and practical manner. The discussion which followed also brought out some very valuable points not generally known. The club has designated the meetings of the third Wednesday of each month to make exhibits of novelties or well grown specimens of plants or cut flowers and extends an invitation to the trade generally, irrespective of membership in the club, to make use of this facility to place on exhibition anything of special interest or merit. Such stock can be consigned to J. F. Sullivan, who will properly stage and care for it.

J. A. Briscoe, a member of our club, has established the Wildemere Gardens, corner of Grand River avenue and the Boulevard, dealing in ornamental trees and shrubbery. He has engaged Robert B. Buck as manager, who is a practical landscape gardener and will give particular attention to such work.

Asman & Dunn suffered the loss of a horse and wagon by colliding with an electric car on Palm Sunday.

C. H. Plumb is building two houses, one 28x128 for roses, the other 20x117 for carnations, using cypress and 16x16 glass, hutted.

BIGGEST EASTER ON RECORD.—TREMENDOUS SALES OF FLOWERING PLANTS.—CARNATION PRICES CONSIDERED HIGH.—RETAILERS CALLED ON PHILADELPHIA FOR PLANTS AND CUT FLOWERS.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—DISCUSSIONS AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Easter weather was perfect and sales unprecedented. Everybody connected with the trade is jubilant and flush except the man who held on to mignonette till Saturday, the man who held on to single and double narcissi, and his fellow citizen who bought up asparagus and smilax on Saturday, each having a lot of his product left over to reproach himself with. It may be questioned whether the prices received for carnations during the week at wholesale were not excessive, and will not eventually injure the sale of that flower. When very ordinary stock brings $3 50 one conservative wholesale dealer thinks the limit has not only been reached but passed. Roses hardly brought the prices of last year, but were in sharp demand. Bulbous stock paid very well, too, except hyacinths, which seemed slightly in excess of demand. The sale of flowering plants, lilies, azaleas, hydrangeas and Crimson Rambler roses, was something to be remembered. The supply was exceptionally fine and seemed excessive, but it all went and at good prices. Charles street never looked brighter, along where the florists have their stores. It would be hard to select any special window decoration for remark, where all were so excellent. Halliday Bros. were fortunate in securing a vacant store next them, which they crowded with lilies, azaleas and roses. The markets did a thriving business, owing to the fine weather.

Indications were that the Easter supply would be shorter than usual, and most of our heavy dealers took trips to the neighboring village of Philadelphia to see about replenishing. Judging from the specimens brought back there was no lack of good plants and cut flowers there.

The last club meeting was well attended, two new members being admitted. The total number of new members for the carnation society is thirty-seven, as reported by the committee. After discussing the Sunday laws and the sales of plants in department stores, the question of the best putty came up and various opinions were expressed. G. O. Brown promised to prepare a paper for the club and said it would be a great help to the trade if papers were read more frequently. Mr. Flitton announced that either Wm. P. Craig or Robert Craig would be at the next meeting of the club and would read a paper on some interesting subject. A committee of three was appointed to take charge of the meeting. Some very fine Farquhar violets were shown by Thos. Stevenson.

The Nestor of the trade, Jas. Pentland, was out on Monday accompanied by "Rix." Age does not seem to lessen Mr. Pentland's vitality, and he was fully as bright and cheerful in his eightieth year as his much younger companion.

Ed. Kress, to the pleasure of his numerous friends, is able to be about again, having quite recovered from an attack of pneumonia. MACK.

St. Louis.

UNANIMOUS DECISION THAT THIS EASTER BROKE ALL RECORDS.—ROSES SHORT AND LILIES BEYOND PRICE.—WHAT THE RETAILERS SAY OF IT.

The Easter trade in cut flowers was the heaviest ever experienced in St. Louis. The scarcity of Harrisii lily plants created a demand for cut flowers. Those who in former years were in the habit of buying plants could not get them this year and took cut flowers in their place. Roses were scarce, there not being half enough to go around. The retail stores which had placed their orders with the wholesale houses in advance got most of their orders filled, while those who waited till the last minute had to take what they could get. Consequently on Saturday prices advanced; roses jumped to $6 to $12 per hundred. American Beauties were scarce and in great demand. Carnations sold on Saturday for $4 to $5, per hundred, and extra fancy stock brought as high as $6 per hundred. There were no Roman hyacinths or narcissi in market. The wholesale men could have easily disposed of more stock had they received it, and as it was everything was cleaned up without any waste. One retail store on Saturday morning refused to deliver any orders for less than $5.

Fred Weber, of 4326 Olive street, has been sick for the past two weeks but is somewhat improved and expects to be up and able to attend to business in about a week or ten days. Fred Weber, Jr., who has looked after the business, says they had a continuous rush of business for Easter.

Charlie Connon says Easter business was far beyond expectations, and Miss Newman, who succeeded Luther Armstrong at his Olive street store, reports a heavy demand.

George Waldbart says he thought he would never get through with the Easter rush, as all his time was taken in waiting on customers, and orders had to be neglected.

John W. Kunz, at 506 Olive street, says he is well satisfied with his first Easter in business for himself.

Fred Foster, at Eighth and Olive streets, says last year was not in it with this. J. M. H.

SATISFACTION THE RESULT OF EASTER BUSINESS.—PLANT TRADE SHOWS GREAT GAINS OVER LAST YEAR.—LILIES IN SHORT SUPPLY.—HIGH PRICES FOR CARNATIONS.—SEEN AT THE STORES.

Everyone seems to be fully satisfied with Easter business, considering the weather, which was very disagreeable all week with the exception of Saturday. Plant trade is reported by all the dealers as having made a great gain over that of former years. There was a fine stock of plants in general assortment at all the stores and especially at the Sixth Street Market. Hybrid roses were never seen better and were eagerly bought up at good prices. Ramblers were also in good demand; plants in 6-inch pots, well flowered, sold for from $1 to $2, but for the specimen plants in 8-inch pots, measuring two to three feet across, only $5 could be realized. Azaleas had a phenomenal call and lilies proved to be in short supply for the enormous demand, although the receipts were much larger than had been anticipated. Hydrangeas were not in brisk demand. Among other favorites were daisies, cinerarias, deutzias, spiræas, genistas and bulbous stock. The cut flower market saw a great rush on Saturday morning. Carnations were the most sought after and there was considerable complaint among buyers because of the sharp advance in prices. Enquirer sold at the top notch of $2 per dozen at the market. This is, to my knowledge, the highest price ever paid in this market. Bradt, Jubilee and other fancy sorts sold quickly at $1 per dozen, while the average went at from 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen. Taking it all in all, however, it can be said to have been a good Easter, with a slight increase in the volume of business over that of a year ago.

J. Peterson had a special Easter display of choice azaleas and bulbous stock. Critchell's Sons were also well supplied with lilies and blooming plants. Sunderbruch's Sons made the best show, using a lot of ribbons among their window plants. The Hoffmeister Floral Co. had their usual display of choice plants and an exceptionally fine trade.

In the rush at the Sixth Street Market a pickpocket "touched" Mrs. W. Cunningham and got away with about $12. H. SCHWARZ.

Milwaukee.

All florists report Easter trade better than ever before. The city retailers wanted more plants than they were able to find, while the out-of-town trade made the largest drafts on the cut stock. Carnations were scarce, and bulbous stock went well. In one of the wholesale establishments Monday morning, after a very large trade Saturday, there was a beautiful lot of long-stemmed clivias, begonias and pansies; they were offered at low prices but would not sell. This market was very short of lily plants, and the Crimson Ramblers we read about made no appearance.

Pohl & Kraus, who have rented the ground on which they have grown carnations for two years, have purchased the premises and will make further improvements at once.

JOHN G. ESLER informs us that the Florists' Hail Association is now doing a very large volume of business. So far this year there has been only one storm, which occurred at Omaha, Neb., doing no damage.

NOW that there is talk of repealing the the war tax law requiring a revenue stamp on each express shipment it is worthy of note that the supreme court has just definitely determined that the shipper has to pay the penny.

IT should be noted that New York and Boston wholesale market quotations given on pages 1156 and 1157 of our issue of April 14 do not necessarily represent prices obtainable on Wednesday or prevalent on Saturday of last week.

WE understand that some of our enterprising commission men are importing the leaves of Berberis Aquifolium (Mahonia aquifolia) from England in large quantity for decorative work. Can not some of our equally enterprising nurserymen of the Virginias, Carolinas or the northwest induce this shrub to produce serviceable leaves in sufficient quantity for the uses of our retail florists?

Breach of Water Contract.

"Breach by a water company of a contract to supply a city with water sufficient to protect its inhabitants against loss is held," says a contemporary, "in Gorrell vs. Greensboro Water Supply Company (North Carolina), 46, L. R. A. 513, to entitle a citizen whose property is burned in consequence thereof to sue as a party in interest."

This ruling, it seems to us, should apply with equal force where the contents of greenhouses—entirely dependent for their successful cultivation on the water artificially supplied under contract by any corporation—are injured or destroyed through breach of contract.

Selaginellas for Florists.

Certain species of selaginellas possessing long-stalked fronds, says Mr. Bayer, of Vienna, according to the Gardeners' Chronicle, are as well adapted for use in the finer kinds of bouquet work as the adiantums. These are S. erythropus major, S. amœna, a variety of S. caulescens, native of Japan and China, S. bellula = S. inæquilifolia perelegans; S. Lobbi, a Bornean species with half-climbing stems from 1—1.20 metre in length. Besides these there are S. dichroas, S. Vogeli, and the rare S. Victoriæ. This last was discovered in Borneo in 1879, and produces fronds of 1—1.20 metre in length, and a breadth of one-fourth their length.

Dividing Asparagus.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please state whether large plants of Asparagus Sprengerii and A. plumosus can be safely divided and how? W. S. H.

Large plants of Asparagus Sprengerii and A. plumosus may be safely divided during the spring and summer months with the probability that the divided portions will grow away without great delay or loss, but as a method of increasing stock this process is usually not so satisfactory as that of raising seedlings. Before dividing either species of asparagus it is best to give the plants a partial rest by keeping them somewhat drier and cooler for a few weeks. Then shake or wash out the roots and divide the crowns with a knife; pot the divided crowns into as small pots as their roots will permit, at the same time trimming off the broken roots and shortening the top growths. The newly potted roots should then be placed in a warm and partly shaded house, and watered somewhat sparingly until a fresh start is made, for should the soil become sodden it is probable that some of the plants would fail. W. H. TAPLIN.

More Independent Glass.

A monster addition to the independent window glass production comes to light this week, says the Commoner and Glassworker. The immense paint and glass firm of John Lucas & Co., of Philadelphia, are building a fifty-four blower tank factory about three miles from Camden, N. J., on the main line of the Reading and Atlantic City R. R. The plant is said to be well under way but will hardly be ready to operate before next fire, though there is a possibility that it may be able to operate for a short time before the close of this fire.

The erection of this big plant has been kept a close secret up to now. John Lucas & Co. are one of the strongest firms in the country and anything they undertake will be carried to a successful conclusion. They have an immense paint factory at Lucaston, about twelve miles out of Camden. They are among the largest handlers of window glass in the east and will easily be able to dispose of the entire product of their window plant. They are in shape to manufacture window glass in the east to the best advantage and will be a big factor in the business from now on. This is but one of several big tanks likely to be built by the big jobbing firms for next fire.

Hardwood Ashes.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—You will greatly oblige by stating how I can derive the most benefit from hardwood ashes which I can secure in quantity at a nearby bakery? In the greenhouses and hotbeds I grow a general line of pot and bedding plants and in the open ground a variety of vegetables. My soil is very sandy. H. F. R.

Unleached hardwood ashes should be an especially valuable fertilizer for a sandy soil. It should be remembered that they are not a complete fertilizer, as they contain no nitrogen. They are chiefly valuable for the potash and lime they contain. It is advisable to use nitrogenous manures, such as good stable manure, in connection with them. We do not like to apply the two together, however, as the lime in the ashes tends to free the ammonia in the manure, causing a waste. The ashes are best broad-casted and harrowed under in the fall, the manure to be applied in the spring. If this has not been done, however, they can be applied together now and immediately plowed under. We have never seen any ill effects from the ashes, though often using them in large quantities.

In mixing bench soil we often use two shovelfuls to the barrow, but again like to apply it in advance of the other manures and have it thoroughly mixed in. During the winter, in the houses, ashes applied as a top dressing, enough to give the soil a strong gray color, and watered in have given excellent results. W. N. R.

TRADE HEAVIER THAN EVER BEFORE.—PLENTY OF STOCK WITH WHICH TO DO A BIG BUSINESS.—PLANTS IN ESPECIAL DEMAND WITH THE RETAIL DEALERS.

Easter trade was extraordinarily good this year. There were plenty of first-class flowers and choice plants in great variety, azaleas, rhododendrons, syringas, Bougianvillea Sanderiana, hydrangeas, ericas, Astilbe Japonica and tulips in pans; but the bulk of the stock was Lilium Harrisii and L. longiflorum, which were fine and had ready sale. All the florists made good showings in their stores and windows. Especially notable were those of J. H. Small & Sons. In the large window was a specimen bougainvillea which was a great attraction. The novelty this year was well grown Boronia elatior covered with flowers. They had quite a run on baskets of plants in pots, such as violets, ericas, azaleas and Crimson Rambler roses.

J. R. Freeman made a fine display, showing some fine specimens of azaleas, rhododendrons, Crimson Ramblers, cypripediums and primulas.

Z. D. Blackstone had the use of a vacant store adjoining his, and he had a large stock of plants on hand, including a number of fine specimen azaleas.

A. Gude & Bro. had a very fine stock of plants, very fine American Beauties, and sweet peas. They had as much as they could do with extra help.

J. Louis Loose made a fine showing at his F street store, and also at his branch store. W. W. Kimmel also found a vacant store adjoining his, filled it with plants and had very few left Monday.

P. G.

Davenport, Ia.

Easter trade was the best ever known in the history of this city. Plants and flowers sold out clean all around, and in not a few instances customers clamored for more than were to be had. The prospects for continued good business throughout the year are very encouraging.

J. T. Temple considers ivy-leaved pelargoniums ideal plants for Easter trade, and the fact that he quickly disposed of a large number of excellent plants, shows that he is not mistaken. Mr. Temple found callas a good substitute for lilies.

Chas. Dannacher had by long odds the cream of the lilies in this city. Mr. Dannacher is building a fine new frame residence on the Dubuque road, to cost $5,000.

F. L. Bills had fine azaleas and lilies in quantity. Unfortunately, however, a considerable number of the latter were not fully in bloom.

The wedding of Miss Louise Dannacher and Joseph Boland is announced for April 25, at St. Margaret's Cathedral.

Otto Klingbiel will take possession of the Dannacher establishment, under the new lease, June 15.

Located in central part of city of about 20,000 population makes the property quite high priced. Any live florist with small capital can purchase a fine range of glass very reasonably; doing a fine business. Can give long lease of ground with privilege of buying or will sell part of ground. Everything is as good as new and a bargain—a chance you won't often get. Good reasons for selling. Don't inquire unless you mean business. Ad's Florist, care Am. Florist.

FOR SALE OR RENT.

15,000 square feet of glass, all new houses with modern improvements, heated by steam. House and barn and one acre of land, best retail stand outside of city limits, right opposite Woodmere cemetery entrance, one of the largest cemeteries in the state of Michigan, two blocks from railroad depot. This place can be rented for fifty dollars per month without stock. Reason for selling out, I have too much other business to attend to. Addresss

ANTON KAIER, Woodmere, Mich.

FOR SALE.

Excellent establishment of 7000 square feet of glass in Chicago suburb. Stocked with carnations, smilax and miscellaneous plants; 1½ acres of good land; 8 room dwelling. Would like to dispose of place by May 1, if possible, as I am not able to give it my attention.. Address

MRS. P. F. LAW, RIVER GROVE, ILL.

FOR SALE

240 acres of land on Isthmus of Tehauntepec, state of Vera Cruz, Mexico. For full particulars write

ROLAND HUGHES,
846 New York Life Bldg. KANSAS CITY, MO.

FOR SALE

A fine farm of 439 acres of rolling land under cultivation, a flue dwelling, good water, plenty of fruit trees. An excellent opportunity. Write for particulars. Price, $5,500.

A large plant situated in a large town in Ohio, 60,000 ft. of glass. A modern place, fully equipped and stocked. Three dwellings. City store, furniture and equipments. Reasons for selling and price will be furnished on application.

Any of the above named properties is a flue bargain, and those desiring to purchase will do well to communicate with us. These are only a few of the properties that we have for sale and leasing.

The Seed Trade.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED CHICAGO:—S. Y. Haines, of Minneapolis.

THE American Seed Trade Association will meet in Chicago June 12-14.

ONION sets of all kinds are now pretty well cleaned out. Tops have been out of the market most of the season.

SPRING bulbs have been selling well; tuberoses and Japan lilies are being cleaned up, while gladioli are scarce.

AVON, N. Y.—The Cleveland Seed Company has purchased twenty-six acres of land bordering the Erie railroad tracks and will erect a large warehouse, making Avon the distributing point for this section of the state.

The Wholesale Seed Merchants' League.

At the meeting of the Wholesale Seed Merchants' League, held in New York April 10, protest was made against the action of European wholesale seed houses for soliciting trade from the smaller American firms, also against the action of seed farmers for selling to the same class of trade and to consumers.

The second annual meeting of the league will be held in Chicago June 14 or 15.

Bangor, Me.

Easter sales here have been surprisingly good, surpassing those of late years. Lilies, of course, took the lead. Harrisii were very scarce, but longiflorums were good and brought excellent returns. Azaleas did not sell so briskly as usual, the demand being for plants averaging $1. In cut flowers violets had the lead, one grower alone having picked some 16,000 blooms in three days, and at the same time selling a large number of potted plants. Carnations and tulips, lily of the valley and Romans also sold well. A large number of Crimson Ramblers were to be seen and sold well.

A garden has been opened in Houlton, Aroostook county, by Carl Beers and greenhouses are to be built there this year. The place is a new thing, and although supplied from here, sales have been extremely good. C. B.

W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

T. R. WATSON, the nurseryman of Plymouth, Mass., is seriously ill.

THE call for dormant, field grown rose plants is reported heavy, one private planter having included in his order 1,500 of this stock.

EAST MOORESTOWN, N. J.—The dwelling house of A. J. Collins, together with the packing and storage warehouse, barns and out buildings connected with the Pleasant Valley Nurseries, of which Mr. Collins is proprietor, were totally destroyed by fire on the afternoon of April 6. The loss, including several thousand dollars worth of trees and plants, is estimated at $15,000. There was an insurance of $10,000 on the buildings, which are to be immediately rebuilt.

Buffalo.

ALL THAT COULD HAVE BEEN EXPECTED MATERIALIZED AT EASTER.—ALL THE DEALERS DID GOOD BUSINESS.—KASTING PROPOSED FOR PARK COMMISSIONER.—NOTES.

Easter trade was all that could be expected and showed a healthy increase over last year. Plants, particularly lilies and azaleas, found a good sale, the former being sold out early. The Crimson Rambler rose has come to stay; with us they sold well; the masses of buds and blooms quickly caught the buyer. It is very easy to overdo the paper business. When you decorate a lily plant from the pot up to the flower you might as well get paper lilies and sprinkle with cologne. Still I strongly advocate decorated pots.

In one of our papers the other day the name of W. F. Kasting was suggested as a park commissioner. The florists have not been represented on our park board in twenty years, and with such men as Wm. Scott, W. J. Palmer, J. H. Rebstock W. F. Kasting and a number of others, it does seem strange.

The busiest man in the trade was Kasting. Everything, from a toothpick to a Rambler rose, was to be had of him. His annex was groaning with the load of stock it held, but all was cleared out by Saturday and "Billy" was happy.

Wm. Scott says no money could get him into a store again; he had more business than he could take care of, wholesale and retail, and all at one place.

Miss Reinhard and Mrs. Nussbaum said trade was fine, while Buddenborg's South Side store was rushed, as was also Mrs. Hinman.

Neubeck & Meyers and Wm. Belsey have what might be termed choice and select greenhouse trade and were busy.

Rebstock's store and two annexes did a large business. His plant trade was large.

Anderson and Adams had fine trade and Zimmerman had his first Easter and is happy.

Palmer's display and business were fine.

Prices I think were satisfactory to most of the customers. This was a good year for market men.

Harry Balsley, of Detroit, is with us, as is also Jos. Rolker. W. A.

is absolutely the best pink Carnation ever offered the trade. This is none too emphatic, and there are many others who think as we do. It will grow with you because it grows anywhere. This year it has been grown equally successfully by Hill, Herr and ourselves. It will grow in any soil or location. In color, size, fragrance, stem and keeping qualities it is just what the "storemen" want. In habit, constitution and freedom of bloom it is just what the grower wants; never out of crop from September until July. We have 6000 plants, 3000 of which we are growing for cuttings alone.

Below are a few expressions of opinions from the knowing ones. After reading them there will be, we think, no doubt in your mind as to which is THE ONE to grow for pink next season.

Winner of Certificates at New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, Boston and Indianapolis.

ITS KEEPING QUALITIES.

The undersigned Committee having examined the vases of the new carnation "Ethel Crocker," report as follows: "There are two vases which contain seventy-five flowers. The water in the vases has not been changed for four days, nor have any flowers been renewed, and after being on exhibition the above length of time, we find fully ninety per cent of the blooms salable; none of them show any disposition to go to sleep and only five or six are commencing to fade, and under these conditions we cheerfully recommend it as a wonderful keeper."

BALTIMORE, MD., Dec. 27, 1899.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON,

Gentlemen: We had, however, the pleasure of seeing "Ethel Crocker" in all her glory. We wish you would book our order for 2000 rooted cuttings of this variety and would be pleased to receive the stock out of the first batch sent off. We feel sure this variety will enjoy a large sale and predict for it a most brilliant future. For size, length of stem, color and fragrance it surpasses ANYTHING we have SEEN GROWING.

Yours very truly, HALLIDAY BROS.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3, 1899.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON,

Gentlemen: The new pink carnation "Ethel Crocker" which you have been sending us is most satisfactory. At this early date the flowers are up to the midwinter standard of the old favorites, in fact it is larger, the form is perfect and the color, almost exactly that of the Bridesmaid rose, is ideal. The stem supports the flower admirably. We believe it will become very popular as the few we have been receiving have been snapped up at once. We congratulate you on having such a good stock of this variety. Yours respectfully,

JOS. KIFT & SON.

FLATBUSH, BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 21, 1899.

MESSRS. ROBERT CRAIG & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.,

Gentlemen: After viewing your new carnation "Ethel Crocker" we feel justified in ordering 2500. The color seems excellent and promises to be a free bloomer; the variety has apparently an exceptionally good constitution and stem, and the calyx is all that could be desired up to this date. The dozen plants we have growing are all that could be expected, having received them too late for comparison with other varieties, which we regret.

Yours very truly, BAILLEDOUZE BROS.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Nov. 23, 1899.

Gentlemen: Kindly book my order for 500 rooted cuttings of "Ethel Crocker," as I think it is one of the finest fancy carnations for commercial purposes. Very truly yours, WM. NICHOLSON.

ROBERT CRAIG & SON, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18, 1899.

Gentlemen: Your new carnation "Ethel Crocker" is without doubt by far the finest pink carnation for fall use we have handled yet, in fact, the finest we have seen on the market anywhere.

Very truly yours, PENNOCK BROS.

Extract from American Florist, Phila. Notes, Oct. 14, 1899.

I neglected, in my report of the Florists' Club meeting, to speak of a vase of "Ethel Crocker" carnation exhibited by Robert Craig & Son. It attracted a great deal of attention and all the carnation experts present seemed to be of one mind in declaring it to be the finest pink they had ever seen. It was quite the equal of any of the present favorites in their best midwinter stage, which, when one considers the early date, Oct. 3, speaks volumes in its favor.

From Florists' Exchange, Phila Notes, Oct. 7, 1899.

Robert Craig & Son exhibited a vase of the new California carnation "Ethel Crocker," which created quite a sensation. The flowers are 2½ to 3 inches in diameter, stems stiff; in fact the flowers are remarkable for so early in the season. The above firm has a house of this variety for flowering this season and it certainly should take well.

From American Florist, New York Notes, Oct. 14, 1899.

On the exhibition table Mr. Craig had a vase of the beautiful new pink carnation, "Ethel Crocker" which was highly commended by the exhibition committee and duly admired by all, the carnation giving every promise of being a winner.

From Florists' Exchange, New York Notes, Oct. 14, 1899.

The following exhibit was made by Robert Craig & Son, to whom a vote of thanks was tendered:

Vase of the new California carnation "Ethel Crocker." The color of the flowers showed up very prettily under artificial light, being a deep, salmon pink. The stems were of good length and held the blooms up well. The exhibition committee awarded the variety honorable mention, and expressed a desire to see it again later in the season.

EASTER WAS GOOD FOR ALL KINDS OF DEALERS.—MARKED SCARCITY OF CARNATIONS.—LILIES NOT PLENTIFUL.—PLANT SALES WERE HEAVY.

From the reports of various florists, retail, wholesale and market, it would appear that all enjoyed a very good Easter trade. One of the most noteworthy features would appear to be the scarcity of carnations, although this condition was foreshadowed some time before in the appearance of the crop with various growers. As a result carnations ruled much higher, both wholesale and retail, than usual in other years, even when Easter fell upon a much earlier date than it did this year. Lilies were short with some retailers; others had enough to see them through, but there was no surplus. Really good lilies were sold out early. Aside from carnations, there does not seem to have been any shortage in the cut flower supply. Dutch bulb stock was less seen than in other years but there seems to have been a greatly diminished call for them, which is a very good thing for the American growers. Violets are variously reported, but in general the supply was equal to the demand, a condition with which the late spring doubtless had much to do.

When one begins to ask questions relative to the sale for plants it does not take long to develop the fact that this was more of a plant Easter than any previous one. All kinds of plant stock, when good, sold well, lilies, azaleas and Crimson Rambler roses being among the leaders in this line. In the matter of prices, there was not much change from the normal. The general report would seem to indicate an increase of from ten to fifteen per cent in sales. The very bad weather that prevailed up to Saturday undoubtedly had considerable effect in curtailing the receipts in the stores. Probably from this circumstance the market men reaped considerable advantage on Saturday, as great numbers of people who had not bought previously, went there to see the display and, being there, bought. A.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. J. Miller sees a bright prospect for spring and has provided a big stock of bedding plants.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—Greene & Underhill have filed a claim against the city for $1500 damages caused by the overflow of a sewer which flooded a portion of their establishment on February 9.

Easter trade was lively but came with a rush at the last moment, for the weather was rough and unfavorable up to Saturday. There was a decided shortage of lilies and carnations. Bermuda grown lilies are more and more unsatisfactory for forcing. Forty to fifty per cent are more or less diseased and the balance have an irregular blooming season. White and light colored flowers and blooming plants were preferred last season, while this Easter bright colors sold best. Violets were of unusual quality for so late in the season and sold well. Carnations were fine but not enough to go around. Golden Gate was the favorite rose. White and yellow marguerites, sweet peas and double white lilac were in great demand. The best mignonette was the Imperial, a hybrid Machet. Pans of blooming pansies sold ahead of bulbous stock. Daffodils outsold tulips four to one. Hyacinths were less called for than usual at Easter. Sales exceeded last Easter, probably twenty-five per cent. GROVE P. RAWSON.

Richmond, Ind.

Trade was about the same as last year, with little call for plants outside of Easter lilies, which were short of the demand. Roses were plentiful at $1.50 to $2. Carnations were in good demand at 75 cents for common. Fancy Flora Hill sold at $1 (by keeping stock out of sight and supply limited to one good vase). Violets were in fair demand and daffodils and hyacinths cleaned up just right at 75 cents and $1 per dozen for best. Church decorations of any note seem to be lost to this city for Easter, except as done by the individual members. B.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

The violet growers of this place sent 1,000,000 flowers to New York for Easter, keeping up their express shipments until 2 a. m. on Sunday. The number of separate boxes was so great that it makes the arms of the expressmen ache to even think of the returning "empties." Mrs. M. J. Moore, of Highland, supplied 100,000 violets to Ford Bros. and from Rhinebeck went other thousands. The cuts were so heavy and the sales so satisfactory that a great deal of building is contemplated for this season.

All the retail florists had extra wagons delivering for Easter and if the rush would only last a couple of weeks longer I think some of them could retire. There was an unprecedented demand for good lilies, azaleas and cinerarias in 8-inch to 10-inch pots. L.

GRAND FORKS, N. D.—M. V. Williams has opened a flower store here, deriving his supplies from the North Dakota Nursery, of Hillsboro.

WYOMING, N. Y.—Sometimes we hear of persons who combine the florist business with various incongruous and unrelated trades but no associations are more strange than those of Wm. Roberts & Son who have been established as blacksmiths for thirty years and who have done a successful florist trade for a long time.

GENEVIEVE LORD

The ideal pink carnation. Strictly speaking, a commercial variety, yet size and exhibition qualities are not lacking. The color is that happy shade called by the ladies "just right." Its stem is unequalled by any carnation. It is a prodigious grower and the most remarkable producer of high grade blooms we have ever grown. An easy, rapid grower; makes large plants from late cuttings. We can promise prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock for delivery prior to that date all sold. Cuttings positively free from rust and in other respects very hard to duplicate.

Price: Doz., $2; 100, $10; 1000, $75.

Our catatalogue is now ready, giving complete description of above, also all of the other big new ones at introducers' prices. Also comp ete list of standard varieties, all the best new and standard chrysanthemums. Catalogue sent for the asking.

Easter trade was excellent. Pot lilies, spiræas, Rambler roses and cinerarias were fairly abundant. J. C. Murray had the largest display, renting an extra store for the purpose. There were some fine tea roses at Kuhl's. Cole Bros. did not get in all their lilies, but did well, and on the whole everyone is satisfied. Harrisii plants with ten to fourteen buds and flowers brought $2.50; smaller plants, $1 50. Cut roses were $1 to $2, carnations, 35 cents to 60 cents. Saturday was a fine day and many more one-dollar lilies could have been sold had not the supply run out. PEORIAN.

TAUNTON, MASS.—Capt. S. H. Walker has brought suit against Mrs. J. L. Briggs for $1,000. The greenhouses belonging to the former have been leased by Mrs. Briggs for the past five years, one of the provisions in the lease being that the houses should be left in as good order as they were when the lease became operative. Capt. Walker claims that this is not the case and the matter has been referred to an auditor, and if the auditor's finding is satisfactory to both parties, the case will be settled without further court proceedings.

STORMS SADLY INTERFERE WITH EASTER BUSINESS.—SALES GOOD.—SOME STOCK SCARCE.—CLARK SUSTAINS A SEVERE LOSS.—NOTES.

The volume of Easter sales was about the same as in previous years, and prices were somewhat higher. Roses and white flowers were plentiful, but carnations, lilies and bulbous stock were scarce. Potted Easter lilies were not to be obtained in quantity here, and the larger retailers went to Omaha and Lincoln for their supplies.

Easter trade was not quite as good as it might have been. Rain, snow, sleet and mud ushered in and bid farewell to by far the stormiest Easter in the entire history of Denver. The precipitation breaks the record for April since the establishment of the United States Weather Bureau here in 1872, a total for the half month of 5.11 inches.

Wm Clark, of Colorado Springs, sustained quite a serious loss, the weight of the snow breaking through the glass in the houses and destroying his violets.

Mr. Hanselman, of the city park, is down with pneumonia.

The Gallup Floral Company reports the biggest Easter plant business for years.

The Park Floral Company made a splendid display of both cut flowers and plants, and report they had all they could do.

Violets were unusually fine for this time of year and sold well; the same may be said of the sweet peas.

The bowling club is talking of laying off until after the spring rush.

DENVER.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—George S. Belding opened a down town store for Easter and did well.

OAKDALE, N. Y.—Seymour Burr was the victim of a runaway accident April 10, being thrown from his wagon and having two ribs broken.

Easter business was excellent. Prices were from fifteen to twenty per cent higher and the amount of goods sold far surpassed that of last year. The increase, which is slightly more with pot plants than with cut flowers, was with some of the market men as high as forty per cent.

Crimson Rambler seems in much favor as an Easter plant. Lilies were very valuable property; they sold at the rate of 25 cents a bud.

In cut flowers roses were of very good quality and supply equal to the demand. Carnations of good quality were short. Violets were plentiful and found ready sale. H. J.

Notes on Aquatics.

The tardiness of the season will in many ways facilitate general operations on the ground and afford more time to be spent in cleaning up, making roads, walks, draining and preparing for planting. All repairs necessary to banks of ponds, streams and margins should be pushed to completion at an early date and every thing put in readiness for planting. Artificial ponds will demand our first attention in this respect.

The shrubbery, where there is such, should be looked over and if thinning or transplanting is necessary such work should be done without delay. Pruning of a few shrubs, such as Hydrangea paniculata and those which flower on the new season's growth should be attended to, but the bulk of flowering shrubs should be pruned in summer, after the flowering season; all that is necessary now is to cut out any misplaced branches, or where thinning is absolutely necessary. The shears should never be used on flowering shrubs, yet in almost every section are to be seen evidences of this barbaric practice of the man with the shears. Perennial plants should now be planted and others thinned out, where too thick.

Tubs and boxes used for growing nymphæas and other aquatic plants should be filled with new soil, though in some cases this may not be necessary, but unless the boxes are of extra size it is better to renew the soil. Presuming the boxes are about three feet square and one foot deep, in the case of hardy nymphæas it is best to thin out the plants to at least three good crowns and to partly renew the soil, but if the preceding season's growth was strong and vigorous I would renew all the soil and replant. In the case of a tender nymphæa, renew the soil and plant one single plant in such sized box. Although plants will grow in tubs and boxes of smaller dimensions and even in pots and pans and produce flowers, the results attained by higher grade methods will always compensate for any additional care or labor.

As to soil for growing nymphæas and other aquatics, good turfy loam, sod from a pasture, composted in the fall with one-third its bulk of cow manure, makes excellent material. No bone or artificial fertilizer is needed and if the soil is inclined to be stiff or of a clayey nature so much the better.

Hardy nymphæas may be planted in most sections now but it is best to wait until conditions are such as will excite growth at once; some varieties are very liable to rot if dug and transplanted before active growth takes place; better err on the other side, and wait for future results. There are some varieties that give the best results the first year, especially in artificial ponds, but the majority of them are better the second season.

In the case of nelumbiums in artificial ponds, these are best undisturbed unless they are overcrowded, which is sometimes the case. The divisions or sections where these are grown may receive a a top dressing of rich compost, first taking off three or four inches of the old soil. This should be done before the new growth appears. Where new plantings are to be made of nelumbiums it is very important not to be too rash and plant a few days too early. The advice given for planting nymphæas must be emphasized in this case. Regardless of the fact that every season many complaints are heard that nelumbiums are a failure, yet as soon as the season opens numerous orders are placed for these plants; the result must be failure and disappointment if planted in the open pond. Nelumbiums may be dug and shipped in April to southern districts or to be started indoors but if planted under ordinary conditions and the weather similar to what we have experienced so far this April it will be disastrous. To succeed in planting and establishing nelumbiums do not dig or plant before new leaves are produced and growth all around is active and nature fully alive. The indications are that it will be the end of the month before this is the case and in northern and western sections certainly not before the first week in May.

In natural ponds and lakes it will be well to look over the stock, for where established plants have wintered without the ravages of rats it may be necessary to thin them out. The results of overcrowding are sometimes very perceptible. I saw large ponds last season that were sadly crowded. The large, succulent leaves, standing out of the water, were all bronzed and disfigured by the ravages of red spider. Overcrowding not only results in attacks of insects, but the flowers are hid from view; they are also undersized, as is the case with other plants. In planting new ponds it is often the desire of the planter to have immediate effect, but if this is attained the first season, crowding is sure to result the following season. In large ponds leave ample space between the clumps, and plant from three to twenty plants in a clump, the plants three feet apart. In small ponds and where it is desirable to have several varieties of different color it is best to plant but one of a kind.

WM. TRICKER.

Dahlia Notes.

When to plant dahlias is a debatable question. Planted from early spring until midsummer they will grow, flourish and blossom, so that much depends upon the object in view. Early planting will give early flowering, subject, of course, to the natural difference of varieties in earliness. With good treatment roots planted so that the plants will appear above the surface of the ground as soon as danger of frost is past will bloom soon after July 4. Perhaps more will depend upon the treatment than upon the extreme earliness of setting. If the sole object in view is garden display, a long flowering period is thereby secured and a mass of color can be depended on for the entire season.

If flowers for cutting purposes and perfection of individual bloom are required, other considerations become of great importance. One of these is that flowers which open in the height of summer very frequently show serious imperfections which render a considerable portion unfit for use for cutting. A second difficulty is that these early flowering plants at a later date produce blooms of a very inferior quality, even though the quantity may be liberal enough. If one needs early flowers for his work, he will find it desirable and necessary to make early planting, but wise precaution will suggest that room be left and preparations made to set other plants at a later date, which shall be at their best when flowers from the earlier settings have become poor and undesirable.

By making successive plantings a good amount of both quantity and quality can be depended on from the first commencement of bloom. With plants well cared for a term of three months is sufficient to produce a reasonable amount of bloom, so that plants set June 1 ought to flower liberally about September 1, and those set June 14 by the middle of September. Late plantings will show flowers in a shorter period than early ones. A term of six weeks will fully cover the length of time during which a combination of quantity and quality can be expected. The grower who allows for about that length of time previous to the average period of killing frosts will secure about as good general results as are obtainable. Where frosts do not occur before the middle of October, August blooming should be considered very early. If the middle of September brings danger, a good showing of flowers in early August is desirable. Of course if one has the opportunity to cover plants the season may be prolonged in either case. A term of six weeks of abundant bloom of high average quality ought to satisfy the most greedy.

A very general misconception exists as to the desirability of early planting. The writer has transplanted good-sized plants from sprouting beds into the open field as late as the first week of August and secured a fair amount of flowers and moderate sized roots before the tops were killed by frost, and is inclined to regard May 10 as an early date for places north of the latitude of Washington and May 20 to June 1 as a fair average time for setting in the open ground, green plants or roots which are well started into growth.

Primula Sieboldii.

Very few hardy plants are so dainty and bright as the beautiful Japanese primroses, varieties of Primula Sieboldii (P. cortusoides amœna). They somewhat resemble the varieties of the tender Primula Sinensis, but are much more graceful in habit. They are well worth the attention of florists for outdoor decoration as well as for forcing. With a little care they will increase readily in an ordinary border. The plants should be given a partially shaded situation, where water can be readily applied during dry weather. In weeding care must be taken not to injure the crowns, which are usually found near the surface of the soil. A covering of leaves is necessary for protection in winter, but before this is applied the plants, owing to the proximity of their roots to the surface of the ground, will be benefited by a dressing of soil half an inch in depth.

Although quite hardy and generally grown as border plants, these primulas force well and may be had in bloom quite early in February. Placed in a cool greenhouse when two or three of the flowers are fully developed, they retain their attractiveness from four to six weeks. The plants should be divided about the last week in August and the strongest crowns potted, one crown to a four-inch pot or a number of crowns in larger pots or pans. After potting plunge in a cold frame where they can be kept covered with shutters during hard frost. Six weeks before they are needed the plants may be placed in slight heat. When growth commences they can have a night temperature of from 45° to 50°. A position near the glass is necessary to insure short, stout stems, and up to the end of March they will stand plenty of sun if kept well watered. An application of weak liquid manure about twice a week, after the flower stems are well up, brightens the colors of the flowers and increases their size.

With the protection of shutters in winter, and the aid of sash as soon as growth commences, flowers can be had from the beginning to the end of May, and even earlier in sheltered, sunny situations. In the open border the time of flowering is from about the middle of May to the middle of June. The height of the flower stems is from six to nine inches. Any crowns not strong enough to pot for forcing can be planted out for growing on. It is safer to mix some sand with the soil and to plant about an inch deep, giving a little extra covering for the winter.

The varieties here described have proved to be good growers: Dentelle, bright rose exterior, white tinged rose interior, fringed edge; Giant, light rose purple, white center, very free; Lilacina, lilac, white center, fringed edge; Lilacina Perfecta, exterior lilac, interior white, veined lilac; Reggiana, light lavender exterior, white interior; Rosea Alba, rose exterior, white interior; Sirius, bright purple, white center; Tolla, lilac, white center, very free, one of the best; Werther, purple, white center, strong grower; Violacea, violet-purple, very free.

Pan-American Notes.

The long continued cold weather kept surface work on the grounds in abeyance till nearly the middle of April. The past week's warm weather has produced great activity, and R. Ulrich has now five or six hundred men busy in many parts of the grounds, besides many hundreds on contract work. In spite of the frost, hundreds of large trees have been planted this winter, including many Lombardy poplars, which will be in keeping with the architecture of some of the buildings.

Work on the lagoons and canals has progressed all winter, and is nearing completion. The contracts for several of the largest buildings have been assigned and the foundations are going in. The winter has been favorable for the poplars and willows planted last fall, and by the summer of 1901 the whole place will be encircled with a pleasing belt of trees and shrubs entirely hiding from view unsightly fences. The southern one hundred acres of the grounds is the beautiful lake region of Delaware Park. Few, if any, points in the public parks of this country surpass in true landscape beauty our "Gala Water," and its wooded banks and magnificent drives.

In this portion of the grounds, on a commanding site, will be situated the art gallery to be used during the exposition, a magnificent permanent building, the noble gift of our truly public spirited citizen, J. J. Albright. Mr. Albright's gift in round figures will reach half a million. On the north of the lake will be the New York State Building, which at the close of the exposition will be given for their perpetual use to the Buffalo Historical Society. The Pan-American, including as it does, some of the handsomest portions of the park, has necessitated some costly improvements, chief of which is a commodious and handsome bridge spanning the lake at its western end. It is thus early very evident that in the adornment and embellishment of the grounds and planting in harmony with the style of architecture, the bright tinting of the buildings, and gayness of the flower beds, that the Pan-American in horticultural taste and beauty will surpass any previous effort in this country.

The writer thinks he knows a good thing when he sees it, and of all good things connected with this great undertaking, there is nothing inspires confidence combined with encouragement more than the personality of the director general, Hon. William I. Buchanan. With marvelous executive ability and a world wide knowledge of men and affairs, his intimate knowledge of the South

PRIMULA SIEBOLDII IN THE BORDER.

American countries, his splendid diplomatic career, and his great record from the World's Fair, make him pre-eminently the man to carry the Pan-American to a glorious consumation.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

GULF COAST NOTES.

In order to attain success with chrysanthemums in this part of the world it is very necessary to have some knowledge of varieties. It does not follow that the kinds most desirable farther north will amount to anything with us. For years I have kept up with the novelties of each season, and it is the isolated case when I meet one that will do well under our conditions. I find that those which develop the flower quickly after the bud shows color are apt to do best. Flowers of the old Golden Gate type are the ideals for us.

As to the manner of cultivation, we can learn little from the experience and teaching of our northern friends. We have our long, hot summer and periodical deluge of rain to contend with at one and the same time. So I find it simply out of the question to keep plants under glass all summer without cooking them, and at the same time, as impossible to have perfect flowers in the fall without glass protection. I have never found artificial heat necessary, even as late as Christmas. A house with glass sides that can be kept open, except in windy weather, and on an occasional severe night, will suffice. My house is simply a frame with heavy sash bars and sufficient pitch to guard against drip or leaks, without the use of putty. The glass is laid on, concave side up, with a short lap and held in position by a small brad. The planting is done in solid beds raised a foot above the ground. Eight inches of the space is filled in with coal cinders, with four inches of old rose sod tramped firmly down on top of this. The drainage must be perfect and quick, or the rains of August will simply strangle the plants. Six or eight inches of rain in a week is most too much of a good thing.

The glass is put on about September first, and taken off in February, when I am ready for the old stools to make stock. It would be a sight for some of my northern friends to gaze upon my stock. The suckers come right out of the ground in size and vigor about like asparagus. I use cuttings in preference to suckers in order to avoid the short joints, and plant no varieties earlier than June 15. Early planting is the cause of most failures with us. Dailledouze planted June 15 last season grew to nine feet by flowering time. One of my guests asked for a ladder to go up and have a look at the flower. I have some difficulty in rooting my cuttings so late, as my plants are taken from the cutting bench to the beds, without potting, but by careful watching, shading and spraying the glass on the outside, to keep down temperature on all sunny days, I manage to strike a fair percentage. They require little attention other than careful watching and tieing up until they show bud.

The enemies we have to contend with are so entirely different from those farther north that they may be of interest, and I propose at some later date to give the readers of the AMERICAN FLORIST an introduction to them. F. P. D.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CUTTINGS.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the best treatment for chrysanthemum plants when they have ceased flowering, both in pots and in solid beds, to make them produce plenty of cuttings? I have tried many ways but have been unsuccessful and must buy new plants every year.

H. J. H.

It is hard to believe that chrysanthemums could be treated so badly as not to produce cuttings. There are some, but not many, shy varieties. They will "go off" if kept in warm houses under the benches. It is presumed that the space will be wanted as soon as benched plants are past blooming and they should be lifted carefully and kept in good light in a cool house such as would suit violets. I keep my stock plants of all kinds in a well-protected frame. They get a touch of frost occasionally but still grow, producing cuttings all winter and an abundance now. Some planted out in a cold frame, froze up and all green parts were killed level with the ground. The frost has been out only a few days, as they were kept covered, when frozen, for the most of the winter. Now they are making an abundance of strong cuttings and as we do not take cuttings until May, they will be early enough.

ROSES.

TRANSPLANTING ROSES.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a large quantity of rose cuttings in sand in the open ground and wish to know the best stage at which to replant, whether in the callused state or when rooted? J. H. T.

Alabama.

The stock should certainly be left in the cutting stage until it has made roots at least one-half inch to one inch long, then choose a cloudy, moist day, lift the plants very carefully so as not to break any of the young roots, and plant again as quickly as possible in soil well pulverized; water thoroughly as soon as planted and, should the sun come out very hot, a light shading with evergreen branches or similar material will greatly help them to get a fresh start. JOHN N. MAY.

BLOOMS WITH GREEN CENTERS.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please tell me the cause of our Brides and Bridesmaids coming with green centers. The leaves of the plants are very yellow. We have kept them rather on the dry side, as the temperature was very irregular, sometimes going as low as 43°. What is the best temperature for these varieties in order to have continuous success with them? J. C.

Green centers in Bride and Bridesmaid roses are often caused by disbudding too early, though in the present case I should hardly think this could be the cause as the yellow leaves would not indicate a vigorous growth and I should be inclined to attribute the trouble to the irregular temperatures. To secure the best class of flowers and a uniform production of them, an average night temperature between 54° and 56° should be maintained with plenty of air on all favorable days; water carefully as required and keep the house and plants clean. JOHN N. MAY.

BLIND WOOD IN BRIDE AND BRIDESMAID.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a house of Bride and Bridesmaid roses, in perfect health, that during the entire winter have shown a decided tendency to throw out blind wood, some of the bushes not making a flower for a whole month. I have tried pruning in different ways, taking all the blind wood from a plant and nothing from the plant next to it, and cannot see that either course has done any good. Can you suggest a cause and remedy? F.

Replying to "F.", also "G. R.", I would state that these varieties always produce a considerable number of blind shoots under the very best management, but if the plants are healthy they should at the same time produce plenty of shoots with buds; if they fail to do this it is plain evidence that something is wrong. In the cases under consideration it is probable that the plants do not have sufficient stimulant at the roots to induce them to throw flowering shoots, or else the general treatment is not quite right. Too much moisture at the roots in cloudy weather will sometimes prevent the buds maturing; in that case if the ends of the strongest shoots are carefully examined when quite young, the small bud will be found turned a dark brown, and as soon as the leaves unfold this small bud will fall out, leaving a blind shoot. A sudden chill from the regular temperature carried will also have the same effect on the buds when setting. All this time the foliage and plants generally will appear quite healthy.

Regarding pruning of these and other roses during their growing season, which means from the time they are planted till the following summer, every healthy leaf they produce should be left on the plant, except what is absolutely necessary to cut with the flowers or for propagating purposes. The leaves of a plant are essentially its lungs and healthy leaves cut from a plant deprive it of breathing organs to that extent, hence the more healthy leaves there are the better the plant will thrive. At this season of the year roses that are growing vigorously should have liberal applications of liquid fertilizer, but care must be exercised in making the same not to have it too strong or the result will be the reverse of beneficial. Some of the chemical fertilizers are also useful with careful judgment as to their application. In making liquid fertilizer one peck of fresh horse manure to fifty gallons of water is ample; if made of the offal of the sheep pen or chicken guano two quarts to fifty gallons will be strong enough for ordinary applications. These can be used every ten to fourteen days. Of chemical fertilizers there are so many on the market that to enumerate them would be superfluous here, only be careful with them till you know their strength. JOHN N. MAY.

PRIMULA SIEBOLDII AS A POT PLANT.

Belated Easter Trade Reports.

FREMONT, NEB.—C. H. Green says that all kinds of material sold well at Easter, the total being forty per cent ahead of last year.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—R. E. Evans says there was stock enough and sales about equal to last year; prices were a little better. Lilies had the call.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—James Pont says sales were one-fourth ahead of last year and at the same prices. There were lilies enough but other stock was scarce.

AUGUSTA, GA.—H. W. T. Balk reports trade ten per cent ahead of last year with a shortage of material, particularly lilies. Spiræas, hydrangeas, callas and azaleas also sold well.

OAKLAND, CAL.—H. M. Sanborn says Easter trade showed a forty per cent increase. There was enough of everything except lilies, of which extra fine plants, four feet high, with from four to seven flowers and several buds, in 7-inch pots, brought 75 cents each. Callas brought $1 per hundred wholesale and $2 retail.

PORTLAND, ORE.—George Otten says that Easter sales were no larger than last year, the reason being that outdoor flowers were too abundant, the season being six weeks advanced.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—U. J. Virgin says Easter was about as usual, with stock enough and no advance in prices. Harrisii were most in demand and Mr. Virgin drew on Chicago for 700 cut blooms.

CHATHAM, ONT.—Fannie Tissiman reports this the best Easter on record, with plenty of plants but a scarcity of roses. The plants which were wanted were azaleas, cyclamens and bulbous stock.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—H. A. Lindsay says business was double that of last Easter with a great sale for all cut flowers except bulbous material and practically enough stock, other than roses, to go around.

BURLINGTON, VT.—C. E. Cove says trade showed a twenty per cent increase with prices a little better than a year ago. There were enough plants but cut flowers were scarce, lilies being the favorite in each line.

HAMILTON, ONT.—E. G. Brown says that sales were fifty per cent ahead of last year but that they were only half what they might have been had the right kind of material been available. The demand was for lilies in pots, and for roses, carnations and violets as cut flowers.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—F. Edward Gray reports a forty per cent increase in sales with prices a little stiffer than a year ago. There was just stock enough to make a good clean up. Lilies in pots, cut Harrisii and sweet peas were most in demand. Capt. Gray says that it is more than ever evident that flower buyers know a good thing when they see it and that good material can be sold at a fair price without effort.

MARKET UNDERGOES A RADICAL CHANGE.—PRICES ARE EVEN LOWER THAN AVERAGE QUALITIES —VIOLETS DOING REMARKABLY WELL.—PLANT GROWERS LEARN BY EXPERIENCE. — SMALL FLOWERING PLANTS MOST SALABLE.—VARIOUS ITEMS HERE AND THERE.

Conditions in the wholesale cut flower trade have changed greatly within the space of a week, the demand being discouragingly slow and the receipts enormous. The effect has been the breaking down all at once of values on roses to the lowest level. From $5 to $7.50 per thousand is the prevailing selling price for large quantities of unselected stock in Brides and Bridesmaids and anything over $15 per hundred for the finest Beauties is rarely obtainable. The quality of the roses coming in has deteriorated as the quantity has increased. Beginning with the day following Easter the unfavorable change was noticeable and the average of receipts has been growing worse from day to day, many of the Bridesmaids presenting that faded, parboiled aspect which is apt to follow very hot and humid weather, although no very high temperatures have yet been experienced. The invoices figure up big as to the cut but it does not look as though the aggregate figures in the money columns when returns are made for last week and this week will convey to any rose grower the impression that he is growing rapidly wealthy. Carnations have also taken a drop in quality as well as in price. Violets are holding out remarkably as to quantity and quality for so late a date and indications are that most of the violet growers will have both the money and the disposition to put up another house or two the coming summer.

The plant growers have been studying the Easter results with careful scrutiny and the concensus of opinion seems to be that it will be good policy to go light on very large plants for next Easter and to devote more space to quantities of smaller and less expensive stock. There appears to have been altogether more large azaleas and Crimson Ramblers left over this year than was generally supposed, although the demand for small sizes in both these lines was far from being supplied. Large palms appear to be scarce generally this season. The demand for bay trees is heavier than ever before experienced.

Julius Roehrs has just received another consignment of bay trees, some giants among them, and a further shipment is on the water. Mr. Roehrs has a house of calceolarias in bloom worth going to see. The variety of colors shown is remarkable. Cattleya Gaskelliana and C. Mossiæ are full of bud and opening rapidly and there will be some handsome Lælia purpurata soon. This is the largest commercial orchid collection in the country, some fifteen houses being devoted exclusively to them for cut flower purposes.

Bobbink & Atkins are rapidly getting their new nursery grounds at Rutherford into shape. This comprises twenty acres of land and is being stocked with trees, shrubs and herbaceous plants in large variety. Many frames are filled with young herbaceous stock and in the greenhouses are fine blocks of grafted tea rose stock. The call for Holland and Belgium material has been good and the store houses are already well emptied.

On Saturday, April 21, about thirty gentlemen met in response to a request, at the Museum building at the New York Botanic Garden for the purpose of organizing a society of horticulture. James Wood, president of the Eastern New York Horticultural Society, presided and Leonard Barron served as secretary. A committee of twenty-five was appointed to frame a constitution and nominate officers and the next meeting will be at Berkeley Lyceum on May 9.

When the good steamer St. Paul left her dock on Wednesday she carried among her passengers Mr. Harry Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia. Harry will search the continent of Europe for novelties to delight the eye and unloose the purse strings of his American florist friends during the coming season.

"Jimmie," the colored janitor of the Thirty-fourth street market, well known to the frequenters of this place for many years, died suddenly on the morning of Wednesday, April 25.

August Rolker & Sons have moved from the first to the second and third floor of 52 Dey street.

Sander & Co. had a big spring sale at Cleary's auction rooms last week.

Visitors: J. W. E. Ebbinge, Boskoop, Holland; Wm. Mathews, Utica, N. Y.; Robt. Craig and H. G. Faust, Philadelphia; W. H. Long and Arthur Newman, Boston.

BALTIMORE, MD.—G. C. Personette has sued the trustees of St. Peter's Evangelical church to recover $300, the value of plants rented for decorative purposes and allowed to freeze in the church.

STORE OF WM. JAY & SON, TORONTO, ONT., AT EASTER.

Boston.

A PERIOD OF TRANSITION IN GREENHOUSES.—SPRING STOCK MOVES INTO THE VACANT PLACES—GREAT RUSH OF ORDERS FOR ENGAGEMENT GIFTS.—HYMEN'S HAPPY HOUR HERE.—PRICES GOOD BUT BELOW EASTER LEVEL.—MEMORIAL DAY NEXT IN MIND.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

Since Easter a transformation has taken place in the plant houses. Spring bedding plants have taken possession of many of the benches recently occupied by lilies and azaleas; astilbes in training for Memorial day have taken up their position where the Crimson Ramblers blossomed, and over-crowded Boston ferns, palms and rubbers have been hauled out from the out-of-the-way corners, where they have been suffocating for the past three months, and given a chance at free light and air once more. In the city retail stores, however, little time or opportunity has yet been given for overhauling or rearranging. Promptly with the opening hours of the Monday after Easter came the orders for engagement gifts in rapid succession and in such abundance as to astonish the natives. Never before has this feature of the florists' trade shown so much vigor and it looks as though engagements and weddings were to be a leading fad in Boston this season. The few Ramblers, azaleas, hydrangeas and lilies that survived the Easter rush did not have to wait long before being given an opportunity to go to work and, instead of being a misfortune to those who had them left on hand, they came in as a very timely blessing. The same may be said regarding the flowers left over, which, if of presentable quality, found a good use on Monday, but, of course, at prices reduced considerably from the Easter level. The same conditions have prevailed, in the main, all through the week, giving a very hopeful complexion to the market and a pleasant assurance of a busy and profitable spring season.

Decoration day is the next great objective point. This is always, in this section, a big event for the florist, scarcely second in importance and profit to Christmas or Easter, and far outranking any other annual event. Astilbe, stocks, white carnations and bulbous flowers, all of which are hard sellers at Easter, stand at the top of the list on May 30 and lilies are good for as big a price as Easter affords. The meantime will be filled in with spring trade in its many features and an idle florist or gardener in the vicinity of Boston before June 1 will be a hard person to find. If found, it will be his own fault, alone. After that date there may be time to go a-fishing.

On Saturday, April 21, E. O. Orpet exhibited at Horticultural Hall his seedling Cattleya Thaveriana, in bloom, for the prospective prize of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. J. E. Rothwell showed a plant of Lælia Joungeana bearing three fine flowers and received a silver medal therefor.

MORE SPECULATION AS TO THE TOTAL OF EASTER SALES.—GUESSES VARY TWENTY TIMES.—GROWERS BUSY WITH SPRING STOCK.—LITTLE TIME AFFORDED AFTER A LATE EASTER.—RETAIL TRADE GOOD BUT SUPPLY AHEAD OF DEMAND.—COMPETITION FOR MICHELL PRIZES.—ROBERT CRAIG TO ADDRESS THE CLUB.

Your scribe has recovered; 'twasn't quite so bad with him as Brother Watson put it; simply a tussle with a good, big Easter trade. This Easter tussle seems about the same with grower and dealer alike. The immense amount of work that is crowded into a few days' business tries the most perfect system to the utmost. This is particularly true of the store trade, which is crowded into forty-eight hours or at best seventy-two. The grower's anxiety begins when his stock gets well under way and from that time until it is finally delivered and he views the beautiful empty benches, he is kept in a continual ferment and adds more or less to his stock of gray hair, according to his temperament. Brother

Watson's "guess" as to the amount of business is high; an estimate made with one of the large growers puts the wholesale trade in plants at less than $60,000. This was arrived at by giving every grower of Easter plants a most liberal estimate as to the amount of his business. The cut flower figures would not amount to more than one-fifth this sum. By doubling this total amount, which is probably more than the actual volume, the total retail sales would not amount to more than $150,000. If any one has a better way of arriving at an estimate we should like to hear of the plan. The newspapers declared that from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 was the amount, and gave the growers immense profits; in fact, one firm was said to have made $100,000 as the result of the week's work.

Easter coming so late did not give the growers the advantage an earlier date does to work up their spring stock, but a visit to some of the large growers shows their houses already full, or nearly so, of salable spring plants, or of palms and other material coming on for the summer's growth. Robert Craig has two large houses of crotons where lilies and hydrangeas held sway and three other empty houses were being filled with a large importation just arriving from Europe, consisting of palms, araucarias, dracænas, etc. We must not forget noticing among them a lot of small rubbers. It seems with all the ficuses propagated here there is not enough as yet to supply the demand. When will our growers catch up? America must be a most profitable field for foreign growers, as a small army of hustlers are now about, prospecting, and say they are well satisfied with what orders they have picked up.

Trade since Easter has been very good. There have been many spring weddings and other gala occasions that have used up quantities of flowers. Prices are softening, however, as the bright weather is bringing the stock along even a little ahead of the demand. Long Beauties are now not one dozen, but two, for $5, and lucky is the man known to have a large order, as prices most enticing and away below the market are confidentially laid before him. Very fair pinks are now to be had for $1 50 per hundred, with the extras at $2 and the fancies $3 to $4. Violets, sweet violets, are about done; just a few small doubles left and a couple of hot days will shelve them for the season. Lily of the valley keeps the boys guessing these days. The ice house stock, or rather only the all-the-year-around growers, are now to be depended on and they have to adjust their stocks every season for a week or two about this time, before they can strike the proper quantity for the demand.

At the April meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society there were some pretty shrubby calceolarias, some choice pansies, a few seedling amaryllises, the latter from John Thatcher, and some mushrooms. The calceolarias, pansies and mushrooms competed for prizes offered by H. F. Michell. The Queen of Edgely, the Floral Exchange's new pink Beauty, was also exhibited and received the society's silver medal. Large orders have already been received for this new favorite and its prospects are very rosy indeed.

Robert Craig is to read a paper on "The Lessons of the Past Easter" at the next meeting of the club, which will be held Tuesday, May 1. It should prove very entertaining as every recurring season teaches something new. Mr. Craig is also a past master in this particular branch of the business, while his diction is without fault and his conclusions those of a mind ripe with years of experience.

Harry Bayersdorfer has started on his annual European trip for novelties, sailing from New York on Wednesday. He intends spending some time at the Paris exposition. K.

SERIOUS OVER PRODUCTION OF LOW GRADE MATERIAL. — FIRST CLASS SHIPPING STOCK STILL NO MORE THAN THE DEMAND.—PRICES RANGE FROM FAIR TO RIDICULOUS.—DETAILS OF THE FUCHS TRANSFER.—FERNS IN VERITABLE COLD STORAGE. — AMERICAN HYACINTHS IN BLOOM. — CUT FLOWERS LOST GOING SOUTH.—COAL PRICES ARE UP.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

At last it is here; the glut is on. Not since the opening of the season last fall has the market been in such a state of over-supply as has prevailed this week, and yet, true to the precedent of this most peculiar year, stock of the shipping grade is still scarce enough to command fair figures. Not in months have there been so many poor roses in the market and the carnation crop seems at its height, with the result that all except the first-class stock finds a very slow sale and at prices which look ridiculous in the light of the rates which have prevailed for months. One of the leading commission men states that in his opinion the tea roses coming to this market this week will not average better than $1.50 per hundred. Carnations will do almost that well for, while pot after pot is sold for 75 cents a hundred, the fancies are still bringing 3 cents and 4 cents. There are now quantities of what the rose and carnation growers call "garden truck" and it sells as well as anything else. The daffodils have seen their finish, the tulips are almost gone and good lily of the valley is not plentiful, but there are so many callas and belated Harrisii that the early weddings are being cheaply supplied. Despite the unfavorable condition few complaints are heard, most of the growers and commission men expressing satisfaction that the season of prosperity and high prices has been so prolonged, rather than regret that it did not continue until Memorial day and school closing.

Apropos of the retirement of Albert Fuchs the Evening Post says: A. Holinger & Co. have sold to Walter Retzer for $40,000 193 by 252 31 feet on North Halsted street, in Lake View, occupied by Albert Fuchs' greenhouses. The consideration includes all the growing plants and stock of the establishment, among which is a large collection of palms consisting of 170,000 plants. In connection with this sale A. Holinger & Co. have also negotiated for Albert Fuchs a ninety-nine-year lease of the land covered by greenhouses and dwelling-houses at the rate of $150 a month, with the privilege of buying the ground for $25,000 any time hereafter.

The success which has this season attended Bassett & Washburn's efforts at holding ferns in cold storage causes them to believe that after some high priced experience they have come upon the right method. They now have 600,000 in the Western Cold Storage Company's warehouse in a temperature between 10° and 12°. When these ferns were received last fall they were put in storage at 28° but after two weeks it was found that the centers of the cases were as warm as from 35° to 40°. Then the whole lot was moved into the next coldest room where they have remained ever since, frozen solid. Mr. Washburn says that care, or rather time, is necessary to thaw them. The ferns are put into the ice box, covered with moss, and allowed to remain for a week in a temperature of 45°. With this process practically none have been lost this season.

The Washington grown hyacinths will be at their best at Lincoln Park next week and are well worth inspection Mr. Stromhach says they beat any Dutch hyacinths he ever saw. There are six varieties in the bed, King of Blues, Gen. Pelissier, Robt. Steiger, Marie, Norma and Gertrude and all show a surprising number of strong flower spikes, one bulb of Marie, blue, having no less than seven. The bed of Washington tulips is apparently on the way to a good showing but the bulbs forced during the winter, while producing as good blooms as any Dutch stock, did not come up to expectations, as the bulbs were much larger than the best Dutch product. It is thought they might not have been thoroughly ripened.

Shipments of cut flowers to New Orleans on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week were delayed by wash outs on the Illinois Central until the stock was worthless. Claims upon the express company were met with reference to the clause in the shipping receipt which reads: "This company is not to be held liable for any loss or damage by fire, by the dangers of navigation, by the act of God or of the enemies of the government, etc."

The matter of coal for next season promises to be a considerable item, some of the largest growers having already found it expedient to sign contracts for their supply at an advance of 55 cents a ton, or about thirty per cent, over last year's price.

Peter Reinberg expresses great satisfaction with the sale for rose and carnation cuttings and rose plants. He has found an active market and has booked orders enough to exhaust his stock.

Witterstaetter has been exhibiting Enquirer in Chicago again, this time at Kennicotts', where it has scored 100 points in comparison with the bulk of the cut and has sold for the top market price.

A. L. Randall has been enjoying his annual outing at West Baden and reports himself as "feeling fit"; he will be home tomorrow.

Kennicott Bros. Co. took advantage of the recent break in the price of wire to lay in a supply which they expect to last them more than two years.

The Beauty crop is at its height with the South Park Floral Company. On Tuesday they sent in 309 of the best buds.

Mayflowers came in from Wisconsin on Wednesday and Thursday's consignment was slow sale.

Flint Kennicott is preparing to take up his residence in the country again next week.

WEATHER VERY FAVORABLE FOR FORWARDING SPRING STOCK.—NOTES OF A VISIT TO A PAIR OF GOOD GROWERS.—MANY FINE THINGS IN SIGHT.—A WEDDING.—GRAFTING ROSES.

The weather is very mild, with occasional showers, and the large quantities of bedding stock being grown by the gardeners is coming along at a great rate. I took advantage of the fine weather to drive out to Mimico and visit the greenhouses of Grobba & Wandrey, and the cordial reception I received will be an inducement for a repetition of the call at an early date. These two young Germans only started here a few years ago, but I should judge from the work they have done and the stock they are growing they are already on the high road to success. Mr. Grobba explained to me that they were adopting the methods in vogue in the "Vaterland," with which, having been at the business from early childhood, they are both thoroughly acquainted. They have a number of even-span houses and large hotbeds, heated by hot water. They grow great numbers of cyclamens from seed in these hotbeds, and succeed in producing, from seed sown the latter part of December and early in January, fine, large, blooming plants early in the fall. I know the plants they produced last fall were of the best. They had some fine plants of the white crested variety in flower, which they were growing on for seed. The flowers of this variety are even more beautiful than the pictures of them in the catalogues, which is something unusual. One of their specialties is ferns, and of these they have several houses in various stages, nearly all grown from sporcs. They have no large plants, which is accounted for by the fact that the demand is so great they can not keep them long enough to get any size. Benches with hundreds of hydrangeas loaded with buds, many of them specimen plants, were deserving of note. They are about to put up another house 16x80 and two houses 13x150 specially for ferns. Under the benches were hundreds of amaryllises, of which they make a specialty, growing them for cut flowers. They have large quantities of geraniums, petunias, asters, coleus, verbenas, all very forward and in excellent condition. There are also many hundreds of tomato plants in pots, almost in bloom, which they will put in the ground the moment it is safe to do so. Their aim is to grow the best of everything and to be the earliest on the market if possible.

An interesting event took place at F. C. Miller's, at Bracondale, on Wednesday, April 18, when his eldest daughter, Agnes, was united in marriage to George Anderson, of Fairbank. As this is not a ladies' magazine I need not trouble you with a description of the bride's dress, but I understand that upwards of 250 guests were present on the occasion, and that Mr. Miller put up an addition to his house 20x80 feet for their accommodation at the breakfast, and that the festivities were kept up till about four o'clock Thursday morning.

Jno. H. Dunlop has been grafting large quantities of Bride, Bridesmaid and Beauty roses with much success and has a fine lot of these ready for the benches. Business continues good. S. P.

SHOW OF HORTICULTURAL PRODUCTS AT THE STATE FAIR.—LITTLE VARIETY IN THE DISPLAY.—PECULIAR METHODS OF JUDGING AND AWARDING MENTION.

The exhibition of the New Orleans Horticultural Society in connection with the Louisiana State Fair was opened last week. The weather was bad and the attendance very poor. Foliage plants were quite in evidence but flowering beds were less in evidence than before. New Orleans is the happy possessor of one or two private collections of large and beautiful foliage plants, and these seem to be the only foundation of our shows. But as a matter of fact they form a very stale exhibit. People are tired of looking at them. They want something new, something gay with bloom and rich in colors.

As usual the best prizes went to H. Papworth. Among the regular florists, prizes were equally divided between E. Valdejo, H. Menard and Abele Bros., one or two other florists having cut only a small figure in the exhibition. Two sweepstake medals are to be given by the society. As there are yet some competitions for cut flowers and flower work to be decided nothing has been determined as to who will be the winner, although it seems to be between E. Valdejo and H. Menard.

Complaints have been made about the way prizes have been awarded. It seems that the judges have been remiss. First prize for the best six roses was given to a collection of only four. In the class for hanging baskets one exhibitor was entirely overlooked. Special mention was given to imported palms and evergreen northern stock when very acceptable young palms grown in Louisiana received no notice, and this by the very men who tell you that the south can beat the north raising plants.

CUT FLOWER TRADE IN A STATE OF DEMORALIZATION.—NO BOTTOM TO WHOLESALE PRICES —STOCK GOES AT FAKIRS' RATES.—NOTES.

The bottom has completely dropped out of the cut flower business in St. Louis this week and the market is thoroughly overstocked. Everything goes at the buyer's price and quality does not cut any figure. Pretty much everything is sold in job lots and the street fakir is in his glory. Roses that sold last week for $4 to $6 per hundred can be had this week at $10 per thousand. Carnations go as low as $5 per thousand in large lots. The only demand is for white stock for funeral work. Those florists who have greenhouses are doing quite a business in plants and out-of-door work.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club, held April 19, it was decided to give a flower show this fall. Messrs. Beneke, Meinhardt and Kunz were appointed upon the committee of arrangements.

Luther Armstrong, who has been quite ill, is able to be out again and Fred. Weber is reported improving.

The St. Louis bowling team has decided to visit Chicago on May 6.

MEETING AND MONTHLY EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY.—MANY SPRING FLOWERS SHOWN.—THE PRIZE WINNERS.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—MUCH STOCK.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held April 21 but was not as well attended as usual. The exhibition brought out a goodly number of visitors during the afternoon. This was a decided spring show, bulbous flowers predominating. A table containing about fifty vases of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and lilies of the valley staged by George & Allan was a glorious sight, and captured first on all of these items. Henry Schwarz was first for twenty-five geraniums in variety, also for Lilium Harrisii. A vase of fifty blooms of Enquirer carnations caught the eye of every visitor and was awarded honorable mention, the variety having received a certificate and gold medal at the March meeting. Mr. Witterstaetter contemplates sending a box of Enquirer to England next month.

Bright sunshine the past week had a remarkable effect on the supply of cut flowers. Carnations are now plentiful and roses are sufficient to meet all demands. Sweet peas have made their appearance but have met with slow sale. Violets are about done now and Harrisii are plentiful enough to supply the ash barrel. Geo. Bruner's Sons are bringing in choice hybrid roses in pots. Robert Murphy's Sons are distinctly in it with Jacqs.

H. SCHWARZ.

Lynn and Thereabouts.

A third better trade is the concensus of opinion hereabouts as expressed by most of the trade when questioned about their Easter business. Gibbs Bros. cleaned up everything, running short on lilies. Chas. Otis had a fine run on carnations as well as Harrisii. Wm. Miller & Sons were driven with work and were handicapped by the illness of James L. Miller, a junior member of the firm. I am pleased to report him as improving and hope to see him about as usual in a short while. S. M. Gould cleaned everything out at an early hour and numbers were turned away. This really is true of every dealer in the city, the Newhalls, Goodwin, Lord, Thompson, Wyman & Son, Quinlan Bros., Davenport, Lewis, Richards, in fact all report demand far in excess of supply.

In the death of Henry Young Lynn loses one who started back in the days when Lynn's florists could be counted on one hand. From a town with only two growers he has watched the development into a busy city with upwards of eighty growers. His kindly smile and word of cheer will be missed, for most of us had learned to know him as a true friend.

E. G. Blaney, Jr., reports trade at Swampscott as far ahead of 1899, everything being sold out early and better prices prevailing.

J. M. Ward & Co., with an immense stock of potted plants and cut flowers, were unable to meet the Easter demand.

Mrs. J. M. Julyn, H. T. Conant & Co. and McGee, Geary & Co., of Salem, are all greatly pleased with the increase of trade at Easter.

E. Hayden and J. B. Reynolds report trade at Marblehead away ahead of last year.

Ed. Kaulback & Son, of Malden, disposed of 5,000 longiflorums, which were in fine shape, at a good margin.

GROWERS report that leading kinds of geraniums are already well sold out.

WE are in receipt of a nice box of the mayflower (Epigæa repens) from C. W. Sibley, of Athol, Mass.

As an indication of the demand for carnations, it may be stated that one prominent firm sold over 100,000 rooted cuttings of new varieties this season.

THE coal combine in the Illinois and Indiana fields, one of the strongest ever perfected, promises to make next winter's heat cost growers nearly one-third more than last year.

THERE was recently reported at Chicago a case in which the death of a child was attributed to diphtheria, contracted by playing with flowers which, in the course of the funeral, the father of the child had taken from the grave of a neighbor's child, a victim of the same disease. The secretary of the health department threatens to prosecute the undertaker for permitting the flowers to be taken from the grave.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

John H. Dunlop registers Rose Lady Dorothea, a sport from Sunset, originated with Mr. Dunlop in the spring of 1895. Color, outer petals deep peach, pink to Indian red at base; inside, soft flesh color, deepest in mid-winter. Other characteristics, as to color, vigor of growth, etc., identical with the parent, but omitting the objectionable feature of malformed buds at any season of the year. Can be disbudded to center bud, which is always perfect.

Lager & Hurrell register Cattleya labiata Mrs. W. C. Squires. Flowers large, sepals and petals broad and massive, of a dark rosy mauve. Lip very large with fringed margins, the expanded portion crimson purple, posterior part stained with straw buff and crimson purple. The unusual flowering season of this variety is due to the plant having been imported late in fall.

Gloxinias and Begonia Rex.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please tell me how to treat gloxinias and rex begonias as to temperature and shade. N. U.

Rex begonias are benefited by shading at all times, although very little is required in winter time, merely placing them in a shady part of the greenhouse. A thin shading will suffice during the early part of spring but as the sun becomes more powerful, especially during the summer, it will be necessary to use a thicker shading. A night temperature of 60° is required during the winter months. During the summer established plants, which need plenty of air day and night, can be placed out of doors in some sheltered, shady place. Rex begonias require a rich, porous soil composed of two parts loam, one part leaf mold, one part rotted manure, one part sand and a little lime.

Gloxinias, when started, require a night temperature from 65° to 70° with a rise of 5° to 10° in daytime. They will require very little water until they begin to grow freely. Maintain a moist atmosphere in the house. They are more easily watered when placed on shelves erected on the greenhouse bench, the highest shelf at the back, with a gradual slope to the walk, similar to a flight of stairs; besides you are less liable to wet the foliage when watering and that is one of the essential things to avoid if you want to grow good gloxinias, especially if you use cold water from the hose. I prefer to use the watering pot when watering gloxinias and water under the leaves. Wet the benches occasionally to keep down thrips. The soil should be one part fibrous loam, one part half-rotted leaves, a sprinkle of sand, a little fine rotted cow manure, with thorough drainage. When growth has started the plants will need shading lightly by spraying naptha and white lead on the glass. As the sun gains in strength use lath shades over the painted glass. When coming into flower water with weak liquid manure occasionally. When in flower remove to a cooler house where more air can be given but avoiding cold draughts. When through flowering the plants can be placed outdoors in a frame where they can be protected from heavy rains. They can be stored in a warm, dry cellar in winter, or the pots can be placed on their sides under the greenhouse bench. Keep them dry until time to start again. ROBERT SHORE.

Louisville.

PROSPERITY IN THE BLUE GRASS METROPOLIS—BUSIEST SEASON ON RECORD.—EVERYTHING SELLS.—PERSONAL DOINGS OF INTEREST.

This has been the best season the florists of Louisville ever experienced, trade being good all winter, holding up well through Lent and culminating in the biggest Easter on record. Lilies were in greatest demand but after it was all over there were some still on hand, doubtless the result of the fear that more orders had been taken than could be filled. Jacob Schultz and F. Walker & Co., probably did the most in the plant line, the former renting an extra store for the purpose.

Wm. Mann has grown some of the finest Boston ferns ever seen here. He is getting his full share of the trade although he is located far from the center of town.

Joseph Coenen & Co. are hustlers; it is by their own labor that they have built up the fine range of glass with which they are doing their present large business.

Nanz & Neuner report their catalogue trade heavy this year. They have had some splendid azaleas in their window recently.

Chas. Raynor, of the Anchorage Rose Co., one of the best rose growers in Kentucky, sailed for Europe on April 18, accompanied by his son.

It seems that every decorative plant in town was rented out for use in churches at Easter.

A. Stickler has discontinued business, torn down his greenhouses and sold the material.

Ed. Morat has discontinued his store, being succeeded by Henry Schnatz.

OBITUARY.

MRS. J. L. SCHILLER.

Mrs. Schiller, wife of J. L. Schiller, the seedsman of Thirty-fourth street, New York, died April 22. Mrs. Schiller had not been well for some time, but it was only recently that her illness was considered serious. The remains were conveyed to Hagerstown, Md., her former home, for burial.

M. J. M'CARTHY.

Death has again entered the ranks of the workers in horticulture at Providence, R. I., and removed a young man well known and highly proficient in his profession. M. Joseph McCarthy was born in Boston forty-one years ago and for almost twenty-five years he had been assistant superintendent of Swan Point Cemetery where his work was of the highest character and his faithfulness is attested by the fact that in all that quarter of a century he never once failed to personally make out the pay roll. Mr. McCarthy leaves a widow and four children to whom the directors of Swan Point Cemetery presented a testimonial of the esteem in which the deceased was held, together with resolutions of sympathy.

JOHN BREITMEYER.

The trade lost one of its veterans and one of its most popular, respected and successful members by the death of John Breitmeyer at Mt. Clemens, Mich., on Saturday evening, April 21. Mr. Breitmeyer was born in Langen-Kandel, Bavaria in 1835. He came to America in 1852 and settled in Detroit, establishing a market garden at the corner of Gratiot and Dequindre streets. A few years later he bought several acres of land on Mack avenue and built greenhouses for growing both vegetables and flowers, the latter being sold at his store on Bates street. His retail place was afterwards located on Miami avenue. Buying the same property a few years later he built upon it a modern store and greenhouse. In 1886 he established his rose houses at Mt. Clemens and year after year added to the establishment until it became the largest area of glass in the state of Michigan. He gave his personal attention to the management of this place and, assisted by two of his sons, made the product famous for its quality. Some of their seedling chrysanthemums and such carnations as Mayor Pingree and Cerise Queen have done much to extend his fame. He planted several acres with grapes, took particular delight in their culture and was eminently successful with them. About three years ago failing health obliged him to retire from active work and a year ago he made a visit to Europe, returning much improved in health. His last illness was very brief. He is survived by a widow, four daughters and five sons, all of the latter being associated with him in the extensive and prosperous business his industry had built up. He was a man of sterling character, with an amiable and charitable disposition. It was only necessary to enjoy his acquaintance to be the recipient of his well-known hospitality. The obsequies took place on Tuesday, April 24, the Detroit Florists' Club attending in a body and sending a large scroll of violets, carnations and orchids on which was the simple, significant inscription "True." On Monday evening the club met and caused the following to be inscribed on the records:

WHEREAS, God in His providence has removed from our midst Mr. John Breitmeyer, therefore be it

Resolved, That in his death the Detroit Florists' Club has lost a faithful friend, a beloved brother, and an earnest worker in all that makes our profession honorable and valuable. To know him was an honor, and to be his friend was a boon to be coveted. He was a good man, a good florist and his word was as good as his bond. We extend the sympathy of our club to the bereaved family and ask that we be allowed to share in their sorrow, for we loved him, and his memory shall be forever enshrined in our hearts.

DANVILLE, VA.—J. H. Rhodes has just completed a new carnation house, 18x44.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres ; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres ; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

SEED potatoes are lower and apparently in over-supply.

SUZUKI & IIDA, of New York, have taken new quarters at 11 Barclay street.

AMONG the farmers of the west seed corn is said to be of poor germinating quality.

ONION seed crop prospects in California are reported rather unfavorable at present, but it is too early to predict results approximately.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—L. L. May & Co. report that the catalogue mail trade since March 15 has beaten all previous records, daily sales ranging from ten to thirty per cent more than last year.

ONE of our St. Louis correspondents calls attention to the fact that a seed firm of that city opens up its store at 2:30 o'clock a. m. for the convenience of gardeners and farmers and wishes to know what other cities practice this early opening.

Augusta, Ga.

N. L. Willett says the immense amount of cotton being planted this year has rather cut short the buying of miscellaneous field and forage crops. On account of the excessive amount of cold up to April 1 there has not been the usual amount of garden seeds planted. The high price of beans and peas for seed has prevented many of the poorer truckmen from putting in the usual acreage of these vegetables. A more than usual amount of Irish potatoes has been planted. The special shortage this year among truckmen is Valentine beans. The price that has ruled for the seed has not been less than $8 per bushel. This has been the main staple crop heretofore, with most of our truckmen. Crops are not showing up well, owing to too much cold and rain up to the present time.

The Alexander Seed Co. reports that sales have improved very much this year, also that the sale of bulbs has increased materially, and that the prospects are good for a large September planting of snapbeans along the coast.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; O. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

S. F. McCLANE has purchased S. S. Zeigler's interest in the Owatonna Nursery Co.

JACKSON & PERKINS CO., of Newark, N. Y., was the successful bidder for three out of ten separate lists, each comprising some particular line of trees, shrubs, plants or bulbs required by the Pan-American Exposition. The three lists for which the orders were awarded to Jackson & Perkins Co. consisted of climbing vines, trailing vines for covering ground, and hedge plants.

TRADE HOLDS UP WELL.—SPRING LATE BUT SHRUBS AND TREES ARE BLOOMING.—JOTTINGS.

Trade is keeping up in good shape with some of the florists and prices are fair. This has been a very backward spring. The magnolias are about two weeks late but are blooming very finely now. The flowering peaches are beautiful this year. The market people are bringing in their bedding plants and are making quite a show.

The Washington Floral Co., F. W. Bolgiano, Wm. Crawford, and the American Rose Company all had a large Easter trade in plants and cut flowers.

A. Gude & Bro. are cutting a quantity of fine American Beauty, Golden Gate, Kaiserins, Bride and Bridesmaid roses. Wm. F. Gude is quite busy as chairman of the decoration committee for the entertainment of the Mystic Shriners, who meet here May 22 and 23.

J. H. Small & Sons had the decoration for the recent Westinghouse dinner and dance. The house was decorated with palms and spring flowers in general. On the tables were vases filled with growing strawberries in fruit. The mantels and walls had the appearance of an orchard in full bloom. P. G.

Last Friday evening the Chicago bowlers rolled the last of the games which are to determine the make-up of the team which is to meet St. Louis, who are expected up on May 6. The six leaders in the order of their averages for the series are Asmus, 173; Geo. Stollery, 166; F. Stollery, 164; Balluff, 163; Winterson, 159; Hauswirth, 152. Following are Friday night's scores and averages:

Fred. Stollery	158	170	147	232	177
Geo. Stollery	170	148	208	177	176
E. F. Winterson	152	177	168	178	169
Geo. Asmus	159	147	146	220	168
Savage	158	181	156	162	164
John Degnan	134	173	164	138	152
Chas. Hughes	124	119	168	158	142
P. J. Hauswirth	151	133	133	145	141
Chas. Balluff	120	159	151	131	140
Walter Kreitling	113	105	146	105	118

At Denver.

The following score was made on the evening of April 17:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av
Philip Scott	199	212	231	214
John Berry	183	182	155	173
Ed. Mauff	165	166	131	154
Ed Emerick	172	163	124	153
A. M. Lewis	166	140	122	142
Geo. Zimmer	110	119	141	120

Only two bowlers showed up for the roll on Tuesday night A glance at the scores will make you think that they are "padded," but they are not and were legitimately made. I think they eclipse anything ever published in a trade paper. But to set your minds at ease I will say that the alleys are regulation length but are six inches narrower than they should be.

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av
Phil. Scott	224	234	280	246
John Berry	161	221	183	188

P. S.

At New York.

Just a dozen owners of sporting blood put in an appearance at the bowling alleys on Monday evening, April 23. Apparently the fatigues of the Easter campaign were still felt, for an easy, quiet atmosphere prevailed instead of the customary boisterous hilarity of the youthful sports who make up this eminent organization. The scores made were as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th
Siebrecht	133	110	128	110	133
Burns	145	146	123	160	133

Von Asche	124	105	128	111	118

Thielmann		155	160	191	141
Lang		163	175	139	153
Donlan		176	139	166	133
O'Mara				145	155
Moody				117	105
Allen				118	99
McMahon				74	83

With Philadelphia Gunners.

The first shoot of a series for the Westcott trophy was held by the Florists' Gun Club on its grounds at Wissinoming on April 24. The shooting conditions were somewhat different from the ordinary, and proved harder than usual for the men. The conditions were: Fifteen targets, known angles; fifteen targets, unknown angles, and ten pairs of doubles. The targets were thrown low and fast, making big scores impossible.

Without a Flaw

Are the stately specimen yews, retinosporas, cypresses, aucubas and box trees offered by us this spring at our regular plant auction sales. They are undoubtedly the most perfect lot of these decorative evergreens ever imported to this country. Get a move on and come and examine them. Introduce them to your customers for hall, piazza and driveway decoration. There's money in it for every florist.

The next sales are on Tuesday, May 1st and Friday, May 4th, at 9:30 A. M., when, besides the above mentioned goods, we shall sell a grand selection of first-class, low-budded hardy roses and general line of deciduous ornamental trees, shrubs and climbers. Send for catalogue.

La Crosse, Wis.

The florists of this city met at Association Hall on the evening of April 19. Three papers were read. C. E. Schafer told how to grow roses, J. E Hauser discussed annuals and John Van Loon told of vegetables and flowers for a city garden. After the programme was finished George H. Timmings moved that a permanent organization be perfected. All were in favor of the motion and officers were then elected as follows: President, C. E. Schafer; vice-president, John Van Loon; secretary, John E Hauser. A committee composed of Messrs. John Hauser, George Timmings and Mrs. A. Guillaume was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws and report at the next meeting, to be held May 24.

GENEVIEVE LORD

The ideal pink carnation. Strictly speaking, a commercial variety, yet size and exhibition qualities are not lacking. The color is that happy shade called by the ladies "just right." Its stem is unequalled by any carnation. It is a prodigious grower and the most remarkable producer of high grade blooms we have ever grown. An easy, rapid grower; makes large plants from late cuttings. We can promise prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock for delivery prior to that date all sold. Cuttings positively free from rust and in other respects very hard to duplicate.

Price: Doz., $2; 100. $10; 1000. $75.

Our catatalogue is now ready, giving complete description of above, also all of the other big new ones at introducers' prices. Also coup ete list of standard varieties, all the best new and standard chrysanthemums. Catalogue sent for the asking.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

Easter was a record breaker. As Alfred Hannah remarked, when asked how he liked Easter trade, "We don't want it any better." It was a plant Easter and the lily was "it," followed by the ever-popular azalea. There were plenty of good hydrangeas, American Beauties, and Ramblers in pots, which sold on sight but such stock as spiræas in variety, rhododendrons, Azalea mollis and cinerarias are no longer wanted. Cut flowers sold out clean and in carnations there was a famine. The bulk of the trade was done on Saturday, making deliveries run into midnight. Instead of simply doing a big business, the trade was overwhelmed by an avalanche.

Crabb & Hunter rented a vacant store down town and ran a special plant sale, which was very successful.

Wm. Scott, of Vaughan's Seed Store and L. Van Leeuween were recent visitors. G. F. C.

MADISON, N. J.—Jas. Dunlavey, formerly with J. J. Foley, will engage in rose growing on Hillside avenue June 1.

GLENBROOK, CONN.—The greenhouses formerly occupied by Mr. Philpot have been purchased by D. D. Moore and will be removed to his place at Noroton Heights.

WARSAW, IND.—Thomas Lewis, florist at Lakeside and Winona Parks, lost his sight some time ago and the calamity has preyed upon him until his mind has given way.

STORY OF THE EASTER TRADE.—BUSINESS THE BEST ON RECORD.—STOCK GOOD AND GENERALLY PLENTIFUL.—GROWERS NOW BUSY WITH BEDDING PLANTS.

Perfect weather, choice stock, good prices and eager buyers combined to make the Easter of 1900 a memorable one with the craft here. Stock in general was good. Lilies were better than for several years, very little, if any, disease being noted. Azaleas, spiræas, hydrangeas and roses were all in good demand. Prices both retail and wholesale were well maintained without seeming exorbitant. L. L. May & Co., had an immense stock of lilies in perfect condition, shipping several thousands to Milwaukee and Chicago parties on Friday evening.

In the cut flower line everything sold well. Carnations were somewhat scarce but violets were very plentiful and sold well. Bulbous stock moved very slowly. American Beauty buyers were more abundant than ever before.

Now that Easter is over the growers are very busy preparing for the bedding plant trade. The weather has been very favorable and every twig is bursting with life and energy.

Liberty roses are making their appearance. R. C. Seeger is planting 500 and May & Co. 200. FELIX.

SHENANDOAH, PA. — Guy Payne, of Girardville, has opened a flower store in the Beddall building.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y. — Murphy & Schaumburgh estimate their loss by the fire of April 8 as between $6,000 and $7,000.

New Haven, Conn.

Easter week was a record breaker here and plants had the call. In cut flowers Beauties brought $5 to $12 per dozen, Brides and Bridesmaids, $2 to $3; carnations, $1 for fancy stock. Tulips and daffodils sold at 75 cents per dozen and violets at from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Violet plants were a sort of novelty and sold at 75 cents each. Taking the business all in all it was far beyond that done last year.

It was with pleasure that we saw Thos. Pattison, of West Haven, in town last week, after reading his death notice in a contemporary recently. The false statement was caused by a local undertaker, who also sells flowers, sending his wagon to Mr. Pattison's greenhouses for some stock; the reporter jumped to a wrong conclusion. Mrs. Pattison reports having received a number of letters of sympathy from out-of-town friends.

Hardy Shrubs for Cut Blooms.

There are many times throughout the summer when florists are sorely tried to supply cut flowers. The houses are usually off crop, preparatory to the winter's campaign, and the usual run of outside flowers does not always give the desired variety.

There are a great number of hardy shrubs which would occupy but little space and which, pruned rightly, would furnish a good lot of material for cutting. Among these are many which could be of particular use to florists, because of the way the flowers are produced, and I venture to suggest a list which I think would be a good one.

Of those with white flowers I would name the white flowering almond, white flowered double peach, Chinese white magnolia, flowering crab, snowy mespilus, amelanchier; Clethra alnifolia, Exochorda grandiflora, Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, mock orange, Pyrus arbutifolia, Spiræa Reevesii and S. Van Houtteii, Syringa Emodi and the Japanese snowball.

It may be said of this list that the magnolias are of but little use when fully opened, but cut in the half expanded state they last as long as such flowers are usually expected to. The flowers of the flowering crab, Pyrus coronaria, are exceedingly fragrant, on which account they are much esteemed. Clethra comes in late summer, as does the hydrangea Syringa Emodi is not a clear white, but it is a rare and beautiful kind, flowering, too, when other lilacs are well over. The Japanese snowball is the main flower the Grand Army posts of these parts rely on for Memorial day. Nearly always it is about in right condition at the close of May. The common snowball precedes it about one week, as does the plicatum variety, rotundifolium.

Of yellow sorts Cornus Mas and golden bell, forsythia, should be planted. Cornus Mas is the first noticeable shrub of spring. I am writing this on April 9, and Cornus Mas is in good display now, and will be fine for cutting for Easter. The flowers are not large but are well clustered along the stems, making a display which nothing else approaches. It needs to be well pruned as soon as the flowering is over, to get length of shoots for next year's flowering. The golden bell is very fine for cutting, and if not likely to expand in time the shoots may be placed in water indoors and will be in flower in a week or so.

Of shrubs with pink, rose and similar flowers, the following would be found useful: Double pink peach, double almond, double cherry, Magnolia Soulangeana, verbena shrub, caryopteris; Desmodium penduliflorum, Lonicera grandiflora, Prunus triloba, Ribes Gordonianum, Spiræa Bumalda, S. Billardi, S. Regeliana, S. callosa, common lilacs, Daphne cneorum and weigelias.

Long sprays of the double flowered almond, peach, cherry and plum are useful and beautiful. The verbena shrub has blue flowers which come in September, a month of scarcity of flowers in the shrubbery. Lonicera grandiflora is one of the Tartarian honeysuckles, and the best of the lot, its large, pink flowers making a good display. Spiræa Bumalda and S. callosa have flowers in flat heads, the others in panicles. The Daphne cneorum is the creeping, evergreen one. It likes almost pure sand to grow in. Given this and plenty of water, it will have some flowers on all summer long, and those familiar with it know how very fragrant it is.

All shrubs that bloom before late summer require a pretty good pruning as soon as the flowers are over. This ensues a crop of young shoots by fall, which are the ones we look to for flowering the next season.

Philadelphia. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

That Lord & Johnson Boiler Explosion.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—My attention has been attracted to an article in your journal, issue of March 31, page 1040, dealing with the Lord & Johnson boiler explosion. Having been actively engaged in the heating business for upward of twenty years, I was so much interested that I have taken pains to study the details given in prior issues of the paper, referred to in that article. I note also that some of your subscribers are anxious to have opinions as to the cause of the accident. To start with I consider it a gross exaggeration to speak of the fracture of cast iron sections as a boiler "explosion," although technically it comes within the definition as given by Webster, "a sudden bursting with noise." In imagination the public connects boiler explosions with the sudden release of a tremendous force, a terrible noise, flying metal and general disaster. In fact the rupture of the sections of a cast iron boiler does produce a noise, possibly a loud noise, but there is no flying metal, no danger; simply a great inconvenience, and generally quickly remedied.

Now, from all I can gather from the reports, the great fault in the Lord & Johnson apparatus was the omission of vertical or swinging check valves on the main return pipe as well as on the main return from each separate house, while the steam mains were valved. The apparatus, to have been safe, should either have had the check valves, as stated, or the valves on the mains should have been omitted. Check valves on the returns should be used in preference to stop valves, if only one or the other is to be used, for the reason that then it would only be necessary to manipulate the main stop valves to control the different systems, the check valve working automatically as the steam valve was opened or closed.

I am of the opinion that the statement that no air valves were used is an error, for it is in evidence that there had been heat on the plant, and I have yet to learn how this could be had without first expelling the air; likewise the verdict of the experts that the water rushed out of the boiler through the steam valve, which was being slowly opened, while the gauge registered one pound pressure above the atmosphere; especially is this the case when the position of the main is considered, ten feet above the boiler. It would seem from the evidence that either the steam gauge or the water gauge were on a strike. If the lower cock on the water glass was turned off it would show a false water level, and if the boiler was empty or rather dry the steam may have registered one pound only. Now it is very much more likely that there was sufficient pressure to raise the water from the boiler into the coils, some of the stop valves on the returns breaking or being open, and that as soon as the valve on the main pipe was partially opened the pressure was equalized and the water, because of its greater specific gravity, sought its proper level, which, in this case, was the boiler, and cooled it so rapidly as to cause the castings to fracture, though, as often is the case, the castings may have been fractured during the heating process.

Your correspondent's statements about vacuum would not merit serious consideration were it not for the fact that he falls into a common error. Firstly there is no power in a vacuum. A vacuum is simply an empty space, devoid even of atmosphere. A vacuum gauge on the coils and one on the boiler would register the same. Fill a sealed pipe partially with water, attach a vacuum pump and exhaust the air, the water will rise only to the extent that it has been compressed by atmospheric pressure, 14.7 pounds. Fill an ordinary soup plate with water, take a tumbler, light a taper, put it in the tumbler, and, after expelling the air by the heat of the taper, invert the tumbler in the water in the soup plate and the water will raise in the tumbler to the extent that the air has been displaced by the heat. Is it the vacuum that causes it? No; it is caused by atmospheric pressure on the surface of the water on the outside of the tumbler. A dish large enough to cover the soup plate containing the water, treated in the same manner would not affect the water in the slightest degree beyond that due to removing the compression of the atmosphere.

We talk of pumping water. We do draw water through a suction pump, and the operation is as follows: The pump exhausts the air from the pump and pipe connected thereto; the pressure of the atmosphere exerted on the surface of the water forces it through the pipe and into the pump, and for this reason we can raise the column of water thirty-three feet, the equivalent of the atmospheric pressure, 14.7 pounds. To accomplish the theory of your correspondent there would have to be above the water line in the boiler an opening for the admission of air and consequent atmospheric pressure in order to force the water into the coils as he describes. We so often hear this great weakness of the cast iron boiler urged as a cardinal virtue that comment is unnecessary. Who ever heard of or has seen an exploded heating boiler of wrought iron? He should remember one of Lincoln's sayings, "You can fool all the people some of the time, etc." No, my friend, price is the only thing that recommends a cast iron boiler. I have made them for twenty years. D. F. MORGAN.

Some New Dahlias.

The greatest interest at present is in the newer types of cactus dahlias. The other sections offer a smaller field for improvement, owing to the large number which are practically perfection in their types. For a number of years the cactus dahlias have awakened great interest but unfortunately most of them were not adapted to American conditions. There are only a few cactus dahlias of American raisers, most being satisfied with testing the various varieties from Europe to secure the best stock to work on. The following are the very best from a careful test of over 200 of the new varieties:

From Germany comes undoubtedly the very finest yet produced in Aegir, a brilliant crimson scarlet of a deep rich shade. It is of large size, deep and with full, high center. The petals are twisted and curled and each petal is also incurved gracefully. The whole effect is a large, fluffy dahlia resembling an ideal Japanese chrysanthemum. It is a strong, vigorous, upright grower, a profuse bloomer and, unlike most cactus dahlias, a very early and continuous bloomer on long stems.

Austin Cannell.—This superb dahlia is also a good, free bloomer but, unlike the preceding variety, has long, pointed, closely quilled petals of a deep lake color.

Beatrice Martin. — White, delicately tinged soft pink; the petals are not long, but twisted in a very elegant and irregular manner.

Geo. Marlow.—A beautiful, soft straw, shading to salmon; a very free bloomer of perfect type

Henry F. Michell.—An American seedling of immense size; petals long, broad and twisted. The shades and tints blend harmoniously from yellow to deep orange red.

John H. Roach.—Of medium size, long pointed petals; the best soft yellow cactus dahlia to date.

Mrs. Montefiore.—A splendid, rich, glowing crimson scarlet; beautiful twisted form; throws its flowers well above the foliage.

Starfish.—Pure orange scarlet without shading. The very strongest grower and a free bloomer on long stems; flowers large with long, pointed petals.

Strohlein Krone.—This is another gem from Germany. Every petal is closely quilled in the most approved style. The flowers are large, full to the center, on long stems; a free bloomer.

The Queen.—A pure, snow white cactus dahlia with petals rather broader than some of the colored varieties but beautifully pointed and twisted; an elegant flower on long stems.

In decorative dahlias nothing new has equalled Clifford W. Bruton in yellow, Wm. Agnew in brilliant red, or Admiral Dewey, a brilliant imperial purple, and Xanthia, an immense flower six inches across, crimson maroon tipped brilliant plum.

Storm King (Blizzard) still ranks at the head of the show dahlias. It is the most profuse bloomer of any variety, pure white, full to the center, of perfect form and has long stems.

There is nothing particularly fine in fancy dahlias except Lady Arlington, deep maroon tipped white.

L. K. PEACOCK.

Begonia Semperflorens Mastodonte.

We are indebted to John Coulson, of Worcester, Mass., for the excellent photograph from which the accompanying engraving was prepared. This is another of Lemoine's products and Mr. Coulson states that it is a great addition to the winter-flowering section of the family. It is a robust grower with stout stems, petioles and peduncles. The flowers are of a beautiful rose tint and about two inches in diameter. With Mr. Coulson it has proved extremely floriferous and very valuable for cutting. It has retained its attractiveness longer than B. Gloire de Lorraine, the two grown together in the same house, but not the Lorraines grown in a cooler house.

Notes on Newer Cannas.

The following cannas have proved exceptionally fine on our grounds during the past three or four years:

Black Prince (Duke × Mlle. Berat).—One of the most effective varieties; flowers often five to six inches across and petals sometimes two inches wide; color as dark or darker than Duke of Marlborough; an early and constant bloomer; foliage fine; plant vigorous; height five feet.

Philadelphia.—One of the brightest and cleanest varieties we have; the clear red of this variety is hard to improve on, but we now have seedlings from it of better constitution and keeping qualities; height two and one-half feet.

President Cleveland.—A good scarlet red variety of splendid constitution; very effective and free bloomer.

Triumph.—This is now taking its place as one of the best dwarf red bedding varieties; it is an early and free bloomer of good constitution.

Mt. Etna.—One of the finest and best red leaved varieties on our grounds; color Philadelphia red combined with large size, early and free blooming habit; height three feet.

Baltimore.—A fine large red canna; very free bloomer; good foliage.

George Washington.—This is one of the earliest flowering varieties in existence; color rich, velvety red; flowers very large, petals two inches broad; rounded form.

Pillar of Fire (Imp.)—This will prove one of the finest cannas for the center of circular beds; grows seven to eight feet high; color almost scarlet; spikes enormous and erect; flower larger and in other respects a decided improvement on the original.

Olympia (Duke × Mlle. Berat).—This variety is of a new shade difficult to describe, being a close approach to violet; it is one of the most pleasing and free blooming varieties in cultivation.

Rosemawr.—Color pink, petals often two inches wide; trusses enormous; one of the earliest and a continuous bloomer; height three feet.

Martha Washington.—The best all-around solid pink to date; flowers very large, produced on strong, erect stalks; height three feet.

Annie Laurie.—A lovely pink, with white throat; a great favorite with those who have tried it; height three and one-half feet.

Enchantress.—Another clear pink, little known; very free bloomer; height three and one half to four feet.

Maiden's Blush.—A soft shell pink; color difficult to duplicate.

Shenandoah.—A bronze-leaved variety and a new departure in this class; color pink; a very early bloomer.

Luray.—Color deep pink; plant very sturdy with good habit and constitution.

Gloriosa.—Dwarf; gilt edged; flowers large, richer in color than Queen Charlotte.

Augusta.—One of the largest gilt edged varieties; flowers often five inches or more across; free bloomer.

Conquerer.—The largest and most beautiful mottled variety in cultivation, in fact as near the perfection in cannas as could be desired; flowers very large; petals two inches broad, perfectly rounded; enormous erect stalks and fine foliage; height three feet.

BEGONIA MASTODONTE.

Queen Eleanor.—One of the best of the color of Florence Vaughan; flower as large; plant more dwarf.

Brilliant.—A fine yellow with a distinct red eye; good bedder; height four to five feet.

Buttercup.—The best all-around yellow on our grounds during the past three years; very enduring; will thrive under lower temperature than most varieties.

Orange Queen.—A variety little known; a good, pure orange; it will endure the sun better than California or Klondyke.

Alberta.—In this canna we have a combination of colors difficult to describe, a shade of rose-violet distinct from every other variety.

Dr. Nansen.—Pure yellow; good bloomer and self cleaner; dwarf.

Zephyr.—Dwarf pink; flowers large; free bloomer.

More About Sports.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I note what Elmer D Smith has to say in your issue of April 7 in regard to sports from Chrysanthemum Wm. H. Chadwick, and wish to say that one of my plants of this variety produced an odd bloom late last season. It was a stiff quilled flower about nine inches across and shaded prettily to pink. It was so very distinct that I cut it and put it on exhibition in my reception hall, where it remained for a couple of weeks in December. Not being partial to quilled varieties I made no effort to save any of the wood.

Among the new sorts I note one of Nathan Smith & Son, called White Bonnaffon. From the illustration I should judge this to be a misnomer; it should be White Maud Dean. The picture is a complete reproduction of a bloom I had on a plant of Maud Dean last season. My plants of this variety were grown to two blooms each and the plant in question produced one flower of the regulation pink and one a clear white, each having the beautiful satiny sheen which is characteristic of Maud Dean. Having been able to get cuttings of this white sport I shall this fall be able to determine whether or not it is a true sport, and if so whether or not it is desirable.

Every season some of my plants of Christmas Gift bear blooms containing petals of the pink of President Smith. This is the largest and handsomest of the late bloomers and it has a splendid stem. The form is similar, but an improvement upon that of Mrs. Robinson and in size it is a little larger than that variety at its best. But the color is a dull straw yellow. If this variety ever produces a bloom in color entirely the shade of porcelain pink shown by these few petals we shall have one of the greatest hits on record. RUFUS W. SMITH.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—In regard to the discussion relating to the color and form of sports, I can say with some positiveness that the form of the sporting flower sometimes differs materially from the flower of the parent plant. I have in mind a Homer rose bush in a near-by garden, which was grown from a cutting several years ago. About two years ago it sent out a strong climbing sport half way up the bush. This sport has bloomed two seasons and the cuttings made from it have also bloomed. The flower bears no resemblance in color or form to the Homer. It is very large and very double, good in bud but at its best when full blown; creamy color, pinkish center; many of the buds are double centered and have most unusual keeping qualities, five to seven days in a living room. The buds, while good, are not of sufficient quality for cut flower purposes but the sport will probably become valuable as an out of door climber of a color and easy growth, which at present is lacking in our lists. If any one can recognize the parent by the sport, or vice versa, they will be doing well.

Sports often revert to the original or to some intermediate form and in this way I have experienced some keen disappointments. Summer before last, while walking in a deserted garden, I came across a giant bush of the old Gen. Grant geranium and, to my astonishment, one thrifty branch, which was well flowered, had leaves of normal size and shape (four to five inches in diameter) but with a beautiful white stripe three-fourths of an inch in width margining each leaf. Here surely was the king of fancy-leaved geraniums. Three months later when the fine cuttings were nicely rooted and growing in pots, the leaves had decreased to one-half the size, curled and blistered into a typical old Mountain of Snow. I have tried time and again to fix a double calla lily, but all the sports persist in going through life in "single blessedness." Plants that for years have borne nothing but double flowers reverted to the single form as soon as they were removed to a new location. My experiences in hybridizing, selection of sports, etc., has probably not differed widely from that of other laborers in the same field, few successes, many failures, evergreen faith in the future. EASTER VIEW IN STORE OF A. GUDE & BRO., WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Paeonia Westward.

I have watched the growth of pæonias here in Nebraska during the past twenty-five years, and have observed a notable progress. At first, of course, we had only the common kinds, but ten years ago I secured a lot of the finer sorts from T. C. Thurlow, the New England expert, and they seemed to do as well in Nebraska as anywhere. I have several times attended the great shows of the Massachussetts Horticultural Society in Boston, and became deeply interested in the pæonia. In November of 1898 I planted a considerable number of new sorts here. I feared for the roots after the awful winter, but last June, after being in the ground only six months, and cut rather close at that, I had blooms I would not have been ashamed to show in Boston.

I think Baroness Schrœder one of the finest and hardiest in my large collection. The flowers are great, fluffy globes of delicate white, fragrant and fairy-like, as though they would float away. These are the flowers for the west. We have quite a number of enthusiasts who are raising new kinds from the seed, and some are of real merit. The rose is called the queen of flowers, but all through the west and northwest they are too tender, and there have been such marvelous improvements in pæonias (we now have about 2,000 sorts) that the bloom is entitled to rank as the queen of flowers for the west.

The roots of pæonias are full of vitality and the plants are easy to handle; the most destructive hail, the terror of the west, will not kill them; they bloom in our rainy season and lie dormant in the dryness of August.

In Minnesota and the Dakotas pæonias are bound to be a success. By raising the beds, so the ice will not form on them, and covering with a few inches of manure, pæonias can be grown anywhere, in the west as well as in the east. Their culture has been neglected, but a new interest is being taken in them. We find that the season of bloom can be lengthened to nearly two months. Get the earliest, give them a sunny place, take the latest and plant them a foot deep and you have a fine and long succession.

CARNATIONS.

MANURE AND GROUND BONE.

ED. AM FLORIST:—You will oblige by asking in your columns what proportions of manure and ground bone are used in the composition of soil for the cultivation of carnations under glass. B.

END OF THE SEASON TREATMENT.

A gentleman who is classed by some as the best grower of carnations in the east, visiting at my place recently, made the remark that he does not care for a carnation that blooms continuously, but prefers one that comes in crops, as he can handle such a carnation so as to have it in crop for Christmas, again for Easter and again for Memorial day. He consigns all of his stock to a commission house and finds that those occasions are the ones on which he is sure to get a good figure for his cut.

This grower keeps an accurate record of his cut for each month and his figures would be an eye opener as to the profits that can be derived from some popular varieties. Figuring from Mrs. Bradt as a small producer, it is surprising how close to the cut of Bradt many varieties come that are classed as free bloomers, and as before stated, this grower being one of the best in the east, his records are of some value for comparison and demonstrate the real cash value of some varieties that are supposed to be yielding a profit.

Most plants that have been kept in good condition all winter will give a good crop of flowers for Memorial day and, while the prices will naturally be low, the cost of keeping the stock in condition for the month of May is trifling. The colored varieties will be brighter if the houses are shaded, and in this section even the whites are all the better for shade. Shading, aside from holding the color of the flowers, keeps the houses from drying out so rapidly and makes less labor in the watering, which, always a necessity, is a double necessity now, for the plants should never be dry at the roots and time is well spent for a good syringing over the plants two or three times a week.

Ventilation can be left on constantly, day and night, as the vitality of the plants is kept up by the cool air of the nights. A thorough disbudding now will carry your crop for Memorial day and even a little fertilizer added to the soil about this time is, in many cases, a good investment. Even if the flowers bring but a dollar a hundred it is better to have them up to your standard of excellence than to have them in the third class for the last of the season.

Orchids at Rochester.

Under the management of the new superintendent the celebrated Kimball collection of orchids is still improving. The house of Cypripedium insigne was a great sight during November and for some months subsequently thousands of blooms covered the benches. Many of the plants showed from two to four dozen flowers. Interest centers on the pure yellow varieties, C. insigne Laura Kimball being the peer of all, showing no sign of spots in the dorsal, but Sander's variety is not less attractive for showing traces of pale spots. A great many of the darkly maculated varieties are represented in the collection, most of them named sorts of the best types. At the beginning of February a few hundred Cypripedium Boxallii and C. villosum were in full bloom in another house, and among these were some very bright colored varieties which deserve special attention. Cattleya Trianæs are a feature of the collection and the dendrobiums have made tremendous growth during the past season. Lælia anceps was fully in bloom at the time of my visit, the whites being very prominent among them. A bench of Cœlogyne cristata looked decidedly promising, the young bulbs of enormous size and bristling with buds. Strict cleanliness is a feature of this place; all the plants are looked over carefully every now and then and scale or other troublesome insects are promptly destroyed. It is no small task to keep so extensive a collection clean and healthy when the plants are so closely crowded together in the comparatively small space of the ten houses.

The Kimball orchid houses, being open to the public all the year around, have been the means of cultivating a demand for orchid flowers in Rochester. People know what orchids are and appreciate their value. The modest collections started years ago at Salters', Schlegel's and Keller's have steadily grown, especially in those species which have proved useful and valuable for cutting and do not require special treatment. Cypripediums are among the easiest to grow and are therefore quite plentiful in their season. Salters' have some very fine C. insigne varieties of the dwarfest types in their collection. At Keller's the same types and the margined, dark-spotted varieties are quite numerous; there are also several yellows of fine form, which have not been named but are considered quite distinct. One dark-spotted variety, with very large flowers, prominent, broad, dorsal sepal which is fully half white, has two separate pouches overlapping each other and is a great curiosity, but pretty; every flower on the plant has showed this peculiarity for the last five or six years or since importation. Another plant imported at the same time always has two flowers on each stem; a good strong flower of Maulei type. Still another curiosity was found in the same lot, the pouch in this distinctly and regularly corrugated, while the dorsal is finely margined and blotched.

Other cypripediums grown for cutting purposes are C. barbatum, C. Boxallii, C. villosum, C. Lawrenceanum, C. Spicerianum, C. Sedeni and a few others. Cattleyas are next in number, principally varieties of C. labiata, C. Trianæ and C. Mossiæ, with a few C. Bowringeanas. Lælia anceps must also be mentioned as a good seller, especially in its lighter shades; it is easy to manage them. Several good pure whites may be found at Keller's. A few L. autumnalis and L. purpurata are also grown. Oncidium varicosum and O. tigrinum may be seen in all three places and cœlogynes are considered profitable and easy to control. Dendrobiums in variety are useful, either for cutting or as pot plants. For the latter purpose D. nobile is especially valuable and many of the very best types are grown as medium sized plants, but the scarce and valuable named varieties such as D. nobile Sanderiana, D. nobile Forstermannii, D. nobile giganteum, etc., are not offered in the stores. Vanda cœrulea is not plentiful enough for the existing demand, but pays better than all the rest.

Of course quite a number of other orchids are grown in all these collections, but for cut flower purposes those named are found most useful. No special houses are provided for them; in the palm houses or fern houses the cattleyas, lælias and oncidiums are suspended from the roof; for the cypripediums and cœlogynes places are found on the benches in any other house, and, although the plants may not always receive all the care necessary to obtain best results, they seldom fail to bloom abundantly in their season and have more than twice over paid for the first outlay and their subsequent care. It is not necessary to grow the best kinds. J. B. K.

JASMINUM NITIDUM.

Jasminum Nitidum.

The plant illustrated shows a new species introduced by Wm. Bull, of London, England, from the Admiralty Islands. It is said to be of slender growth, producing a profusion of deliciously scented snow-white flowers, borne in three-flowered umbels. The starry blooms are two inches in diameter; the leaves are deep green. In appearance it is exceedingly elegant and graceful, and it is recommended as a charming addition to warm house climbers.

A Queer Milwaukee Scheme.

A very strange move was made by a prominent florist here Easter week which is interesting for its originality, if nothing more. A letter has been sent to a large number of prominent flower buyers reading as follows:

"If it is not too much trouble for you, permit me to ask your aid in regard to my flower store at..... When Mr. ..... induced me to go into business with him he agreed to put in $1,500 as capital wherewith to carry on our business. Instead he put in only $1,000 and withdrew $300, leaving a working capital of $700, which is not sufficient capital to enable me to carry on my business. We have been handicapped on account of insufficient means, and I find that I cannot do justice to my patrons and myself. I need $500 to make it possible for me to continue my business. I cannot borrow money on my greenhouses, because they are already mortgaged.

"The question now confronts me—whether to give up this beautiful store or not? Will my patrons be willing to advance me from $10 to $50 each to enable me to raise the needed funds? I will give my notes for the amounts, bearing good interest, and I feel confident that, with the increased means at my command, I will be able to do a good business, which will result in our mutual benefit.

"Your kindness will be highly appreciated, and it will be my constant endeavor to meet your requirements in the floral line fully.

"Thanking you for past favors," etc.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN IMBROGLIO HAS ITS EFFECT ON TRADE.—MARGUERITES AND THEIR CULTURE.—SWEET PEAS IN FAVOR. THE CLEMATIS HAS ITS FRIENDS.—DEMAND FOR CRIMSON RAMBLERS.—FLOWERS OF HARDY SUBJECTS.—PELARGONIUMS AT CANNELLS'.—VARIOUS NOTES OF A CLOSE OBSERVER.

The war and other causes have had their effect on the florists' trade during the past few months, yet, considering all drawbacks, things have not been so bad as might have been expected. Cut flower trade has been dull and growers must have suffered in consequence of the supply exceeding the demand. Of pot plants ferns seem to be over-plentiful for I never saw so many in market at one time as we now get and they cannot be cleared at any price. Marguerites have been very good, and plentiful; these always find favor and deservedly so, for they cannot be equaled where a good display of white is desired, and they have the advantage of lasting well, without the aid of gum or much tying. The maggot is the greatest drawback to their successful culture, but this may be kept down by the regular use of kerosene. A wine glass full to two gallons of water applied with a syringe about once a week or ten days will effectually check the progress of this troublesome pest. In applying the mixture care must be taken that it is kept well stirred. Sweet peas will undoubtedly be among the most popular flowers of the season. There appears every prospect of the show at the Crystal Palace being well supported and a very large display may be expected. And in addition to this great event, at many of the provincial shows good displays seem to be assured, in some instances special prizes being offered. Judging from the large demand for seeds, exhibitors should be very numerous.

There are few plants which make a better effect than do clematises; from one year-old plants to large specimens, they may be turned to good account. As one-year-old plants it is those of the patens type that are best for early flowering. I may refer to Mrs Quilter as being the best white; the flowers are of medium size, but are produced freely. Miss Bateman, Albert Victor and Sir Garnet Wolseley, are good examples of the type. Grown in the open and ripened off early in the autumn, they will require very little heat to start them early in the year, plenty of light being more essential than heat, and from early in March onwards they make a bright display.

There seems likely to be a great demand for Crimson Rambler roses again this season, orders coming in before the plants are ready for delivery. It is remarkable that few succeed well with this fine plant. The great secret, if any, is to have the wood well ripened early in the autumn. It may be grown on its own roots, or grafted on the Manetti stock, but it seems to utterly fail when worked on the seedling briar (or dog rose). Grown in pots under glass where they get the full benefit of the sun and then taken out in August and gradually dried off, they will make hard wood which rarely fails to produce an abundance of bloom when started early in the year. It is at Easter that they are most in demand but they will flower earlier.

W. Paul & Sons have made some fine displays with a number of double flowered varieties of the peach, almond, cherry and others. I noted the carnation-flowered and camellia-flowered as being the best of the peaches, but the double white was also fine. Cerasus pseudo-cerasus Watereri, and Pyrus Malus floribunda were prominent. All of this class of plants may be recommended. If well ripened in the autumn they are sure to flower well and give little trouble, and I believe they would be found valuable for decorations. There would be little difficulty in finding a good market for them if growers would take them up for the purpose.

At a recent meeting of the R. H. S. cyclamens were well shown. In the ordinary type the varieties were very fine, and it would be difficult to find more perfect examples of good culture. A large batch of plants with fimbriated flowers and leaves with fimbriated margins were a great feature. These may require some further improvement before they can be considered perfect, though some of the plants shown were very pretty. Various shades of color were represented. I may add that the above mentioned strain is quite distinct from the papilio varieties which have often been referred to.

I hear that J. Forbes, the fortunate possessor of Begonia Caledonia, the fine white sport from B. Gloire de Lorraine, is likely to have a good stock for distribution in the autumn, but he cannot be induced to part with a plant until the time appointed for its distribution.

When at Messrs. Cannells' the other day I saw a fine batch of the double white zonale pelargonium, Miss Ashworth, very pure, and the trusses of bloom though of medium size were produced in great profusion. A house full of single varieties were a mass of bright colors.

Deutzia Lemoinei I find forces well and is certainly an acquisition, being a great advance on D. gracilis and equally free.

Daffodils are now in full beauty and appear to be as much appreciated as ever. The cold weather has made those in the open rather later than usual. H.

MARKET SHOWS LITTLE IMPROVEMENT.—STOCKS VERY HEAVY AND PRICES LOW.—SOME LARGE WEDDING DECORATIONS.—OUTDOOR STOCK TAKES WELL.—VARIOUS DOINGS IN THE TRADE.

There is little to be said regarding the cut flower trade this week except that it has not improved materially since last report, and that the warm weather now prevailing has a very injurious effect on the roses. A good deal of mildewed stock is being received. The recent large weddings have not made any appreciable impression on the cut flower market, plants being used to a great extent and the quantity of flowers coming in being so great that the sale of a few thousand roses for these special occasions is not felt and means only a few thousands less for the Greeks. Prices are very low in any case, the high class buyers insisting on getting Greek figures on goods in quantity. Stumpp had the decoration for the Benedict wedding at Greenwich, Conn., and took a boat-load of plants over there. The Morton wedding at Grace church, a fine affair, was done by J. H. Troy, of the Rosary. Violets are making their final bow for the season Smilax is very scarce, lily of the valley is selling well and white sweet peas are in good demand. Outdoor lilac is arriving in large quantities and has a ready sale on the streets, hurting the market for roses and carnations. There are some very fine narcissi of the fancy varieties seen at the wholesalers. In fancy roses there are Brunner, Baroness and Mabel Morrison, but prices are moderate on all. The plant market is in full flower now, and in the early morning is a very busy place. The demand for geraniums is especially brisk and prices remunerative.

Herman Warendorff has engaged passage on the Phœnecia for June 23 and will make an extended trip through Europe. Herman Kuhn will sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on July 3, and many others are talking of going but find great difficulty in getting accommodations on account of the heavy outgoing traffic.

Joseph Fleischman is getting to be quite a real estate operator, his latest being the acquisition of 40 West Twenty-eighth street, the center of the wholesale flower trade, which he will turn into a modern office building with a store for the wholesale cut flower business on the ground floor.

E. R. Lucatos has just returned from Boston, where he had gone to negotiate a large sale of Greek antiquities. He thinks the Hub would be an ideal place in which to locate a "Columbus Avenue" flower store.

H. A. Bergmann has returned from the mountains and has resumed work with John Young at 51 West Twenty-eighth street greatly improved in health and spirits.

The absence of the customary list of failures after Easter this year would indicate either that the flower business is more prosperous or that credit is given more carefully than formerly.

Ambrose Cleary, recently with Cleary & Co., has taken a position as manager of the flower and plant department of Namm's department store. W. Blauvelt is now with Cleary & Co.

There are rumors of a new flower store to be opened on Fifth avenue by W. H. Beaumont, of Cleveland, and Klunder "the younger," with another partner whose name is not given.

Dunne & Co. have taken an additional store on West Thirtieth street for a show room.

F. L. Atkins, of Bobbink & Atkins, is laid up, suffering from a badly injured knee.

HEAVY STOCKS IN MARKET AND PRICES LOW.—EVERY LINE IN THE SAME GENERAL SITUATION.—SPRING OVERTAKES THE TREE PLANTERS.—VARIOUS NOTES OF PERSONAL DOINGS.

From the standpoint of the cut flower wholesaler the market is none too good at present. Prices are away down and a big lot of material has to be handled to realize a dollar or two of commission. The grower is more fortunate, as the increased product compensates somewhat for the reduced valuation. Roses are very plentiful and on large lots the price is practically whatever one can get. All bulbous stock is equally abundant, with sales few and difficult. Even lily of the valley is in too heavy supply. White carnations are selling fairly well but at prices that are tending steadily downward; colored varieties are rather difficult to dispose of and violets are poor in quality with insignificant sales, the trailing arbutus having taken their place in the affection of the wearers, for the moment.

Spring is advancing rapidly, too rapidly in fact for the nurseryman. Every warm day brings out a mass of green leaves and many trees and shrubs, such as prunuses, magnolias and forsythias are in full flower. It develops that the damage done during the past winter was less than had been supposed with many things, although other varieties, usually reliable, have suffered unexpected injury. Among the latter is Rosa Wichuraiana, which in many locations in the parks has been seriously hurt. The planting of Peter's Hill, the most recent addition to the Arnold Arboretum is going forward rapidly, a great many trees of various kinds, including 1100 white pines, having been set out. A plan of free distribution of trees to any citizen who desires to beautify his street frontage has been adopted in Boston this spring with good results. The trees thus distributed numbered 2000 and are all rock maples.

In his action against the Brookline Gas Co., for damage caused to plants by leakage of gas, Richard Welch has secured a verdict for $800.

A. P. Calder has given up his store on Boylston street and will hereafter confine his business to his greenhouses on Canterbury road.

N. F. McCarthy is highly pleased over the attendance and prices realized at his plant auctions so far this season.

W. A. Twombly sailed last Wednesday on the steamer New England, expecting to inaugurate a flower stand on board.

Jackson Dawson's pretty seedling rose, Wm. C. Egan, is blooming finely at Prof. C. S. Sargent's.

MARKET HEAVILY OVER-STOCKED.—PRICES DOWN TO GREEK LEVEL.—GOOD STOCK AT LITTLE FIGURES.—PLANT TRADE AT ITS HEIGHT AND RATES UNREMUNERATIVE.—MAY MEETING OF THE CLUB—EASTER AND THE LILY.—AN IMPROVEMENT PREDICTED.

A bad case of over-production has suddenly developed. In spite of the great number of spring weddings and other seasonable events, the supply continues to pile up until there is scarcely room to move without cracking one's shins on the corners of the boxes that are piled about the floors of the commission houses. The fakirs are in their glory. There is not one of these gentry but is up to his ears in business, many of them carrying great bundles of Beauties over which they can scarcely be seen. They offer fine flowers three for 25 cents and less. Carnations in original bunches are sold for 25 cents per bunch and all other flowers at a like reduction. Average wholesale prices as revealed in the grower's returns, in the light of the above state of affairs, cannot be said to be very gratifying.

The weather is fine and the bedding plant men are working night and day to get their orders out. Prices rule low for this class of stock. Many of the growers say there is nothing in bedding plants at the prevailing figures, but they probably are like the boy who sold apples which cost him 2 cents each at three for a nickel, and said he got his profits out of the quantity he sold. Prices are $3 to $4 per hundred for all soft 2½-inch stock, while for 4 inch plants $7 to $8 is the figure. This includes the pots. Ampelopsis Veitchii is scarce, that is presentable plants. Some one should make a specialty of this plant and have it started in the house, as when clothed with foliage it looks so much more promising than in the dormant state.

The May meeting of the Florists' Club was not as largely attended as usual. In fact the president was not there, an unusual matter of record. Vice-president John Westcott, however, came to the rescue and everything passed off very pleasantly. Robert Craig's paper on "Experiences of the Past Easter" was read by his son, Wm. P. Craig, owing to his father's absence in New York. It proved to be a very well prepared essay. It was noted that the market seems to be easily over-stocked with extra size plants, as buyers for the specimens are few and far between. The best varieties of azaleas, spiræas, lilies and other plants for forcing were also touched upon. In the discussion which followed H. F. Michell said that great efforts are being made in Bermuda to improve the lily crop, and with gratifying success. Various scientific gentlemen connected with the English and American governments have been experimenting with various insecticides and believe they have the mite with the unpronouncable name under control. The farmers, too, are alive to the situation and are sorting and destroying the diseased bulbs, and also giving the growing stock more care and attention. He said that at the price to which the unsatisfactory bulbs have fallen there is no money in them for either the farmer or dealer. Now, with selected stock, grown in enriched soil, it is hoped to get back the former prestige of the flower. Mr. Michell said he had so much faith in next season's production that he had largely increased his order for Bermudas. He also spoke of efforts being made by the Japanese to hybridize their new dwarf, red-stemmed but large-flowered variety with taller-growing sorts, from which they hope to get a standard sort which will meet the requirements of the American market.

Wm. Munro has resigned his position as foreman for Myers & Samtman. The American Beauties from this establishment captured the first prizes in the New York and Philadelphia flower shows this spring, which speaks volumes for Mr. Munro's ability as a grower. K.

VERY HEAVY OVER-STOCK OF LOWER GRADES OF MATERIAL.—PRICES AVERAGE LOW BUT SHIPPING QUALITIES REMAIN FAIR—DEWEY DAY MAKES TROUBLE IN THE MARKET.—SOME TASTEFUL DECORATIONS.—POEHLMANNS TO EXTEND THEIR RANGE.—MUCH BUILDING NOW UNDER WAY.—VARIOUS NOTES OF LOCAL INTEREST.

Hardly since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary has this market been over-stocked to the extent which has prevailed for the past few days. One of the results of the week's experience has been that henceforth the local growers and wholesalers will wish to pay homage to Dewey at a distance. Monday was bad enough, but Tuesday, the second anniversary of the battle of Manila and the date of the big parade in the Admiral's honor, brought an utter stagnation, with the result that on Wednesday there were the receipts for two days to dispose of and prices tumbled to the lowest point recorded in ten months. But the accumulation was very generally disposed of, through the medium of the street salesmen, and since then a slightly better condition has prevailed. Some of the men best qualified to judge are of the opinion that never in the history of this market have the receipts been so heavy as during this week and all lines of stock have been in the same general position. There have been too many roses, most of them soft; too many carnations, most of them sleepy; too many lilies and callas, most of them good; too many violets, pansies, swainsonias, in fact too much of everything except first-class shipping stock of roses and carnations, of which there are not enough to fill orders. Smilax is not so scarce as a few days ago, not that the supply has increased, but that the demand has suddenly fallen off.

However, the week brought several of the leaders much work in the line of decorations, those most notable being upon the tables at which Admiral Dewey was entertained. Friedman did the plant decorations for the ball at the Auditorium on Monday night. Walter Retzer & Co. had the decorations for the breakfast at the Annex on Monday, the Central Floral Company those for the luncheon at the Union League on Tuesday and at the Athletic Club on Wednesday, and Hauswirth had the supper after the ball on Monday, when a table with twenty-two covers was decorated with Asparagus Sprengerii and Blanche Ferry sweet peas, making a most charming effect, but not better than that of the somewhat similar decoration put up at the Commercial Club's monthly dinner on Saturday night, in which Mr. Hauswirth used only asparagus and Bradt carnations, taking all the town could raise.

Walter Kreitling had an elaborate decoration, in the form of a train of cars for a dinner given at the Chicago Club by a number of railroad notables May 3. In the flower work on the cars white swainsonia was largely employed. Walter is a busy man these days, having been recently appointed superintendent of the landscape work on a large new summer resort in course of preparation by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad.

Poehlmann Bros. have had plans prepared for a range of three houses 306 feet long. The houses will stand sixteen feet apart, long span to the south and will be 20½ feet wide. Two of them will have 7½-foot lean-tos on the north side for propagating purposes and there will be a glass cross section for a gangway through the center. The plant is heated by hot water. August Poehlmann has not yet completed his plans for erecting a range of glass upon his own account.

Michael Winandy has his hands full of greenhouse building, his principal job being that of his neighbors, Wietor Bros., who have their new range under way. This is sixteen houses, 30x300, a total of 144,000 square feet.

Wm. S. Kenney, of the Jas. H. Rice Co., acted as secretary of the meeting at Atlantic City, N. J., April 25, at which the National Window Glass Jobbers' Association consummated its purchase, of the trust, of 1,100,000 boxes of window glass.

There seems to be no chance of a scarcity of ferns this year, for the southern product is already obtainable in this market, before the end of last season's eastern supply is in sight.

There is an account of Vaughan's establishment at Western Springs, Ill., with several illustrations of the cannas grown there, in Moller's Deutsche Gartner Zeitung of April 21.

Bargain day has been a regular thing this week with stores where they care to sell violets or pansies at a nickel a bunch.

Some of the down-town retailers have secured supplies of bedding plants and have no difficulty in selling a 4-inch geranium for 15 cents.

Wieland & Risch express themselves as well satisfied with the first month's business since opening down town.

At J. A. Budlong's, at Bowmanville, they are rushing work on their four new rose houses, 25x300.

J. S. Wilson, of Western Springs, Ill., who has been quite sick, is now around again much improved.

The first outdoor lily of the valley from southern Illinois, made its appearance May 2.

J. B. Deamud made a flying trip to the east during the week, returning May 4.

There are already inquiries as to when the pæonies will be in.

Visitors: John Bertermann, of Indianapolis, Ind.; Theodore Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind.; E. J. Markey, of Fort Wayne, Ind.; George H. Bancroft, of Cedar Falls, Iowa, W. J. Westphal, Davenport, Iowa.

INDIANA florists who use natural gas as fuel find cause for felicitation in the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court sustaining the Indiana law to prevent the waste of gas.

PROMINENT growers state that those varieties of chrysanthemums which are inclined to come blind should not be planted on rich soil and that liquid fertilizer should be withheld until the buds are set.

SMILAX, treated like carnations, may be grown outdoors in summer successfully. Stock from two-inch pots should be planted in the field about May 15 and taken up about September 1. In this connection it may be remarked that smilax thus grown outdoors will stand from 5° to 10° of frost without injury.

THE National Window Glass Jobbers' Association on February 14 bought 600,000 boxes of the trust and on April 25 closed its option upon 500,000 boxes more at a priee for double strength greenhouse sizes eighty-nine per cent off the list, with a rebate of five per cent payable September 1.

OF much interest to mail order houses is the recommendation of the Postmaster General that Congress empower the Department to prepare and operate a plan whereby addressed envelopes may be sent out and the postage collected of the addressee upon their return. It has been customary with many houses to send to prospective buyers stamped return envelopes, a large proportion of which were never returned, thereby entailing a considerable loss.

Glazing Old Style House.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a greenhouse built old style and the sash bars have no drip channel. The glass was lapped and puttied and I want to know whether I can butt my glass and have a cap made for the bars? Will the absence of channel in bars cause too much drip? If you advise lapping the glass, which is 14-inch, what is best to close the air spaces at the laps? SUBSCRIBER.

Caps can be made to fit the sash bars if desired, but under the circumstances I would advise lapping the glass. If the glass is butted, lay it with the curve down, and use, for each row of glass, panes of as near the same thickness as possible. Nothing should be used between the panes when the glass is lapped, but care should be taken that they fit closely. Bed the glass in putty but do not use putty over the panes. L. R. T.

The Limit of Steam.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—As my land seems to call for long greenhouses, divided by partitions, I would like to know the practical limit of distance to which steam may be carried from the boilers? The ground is sloping and it would therefore be necessary to locate the boilers at the extreme east end of the range. W. S. H.

While it is desirable to have the boiler within a reasonable distance of the houses, if the circumstances make a long range necessary, the distance from the boiler need not be considered, provided the elevation is sufficient to give a free return of the condensed water. Of course allowance for the distance should be made, by using larger mains. L. R. T.

Wormy Soil.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—The soil which I wish to use for beds in my greenhouses is full of earth worms. How should the soil be treated so that I will not be troubled with the worms next season? J.

Earthworms can be driven out of the soil by applying lime water, one peck of fresh lime to fifty gallons of water. This can best be applied after the soil is put into the greenhouse. To ensure making a complete success the soil should be allowed to get rather on the dry side before applying the lime water, then give every particle of it a good soaking. Should the first application not be quite effectual, in eight or ten days repeat the process. It will not hurt the plants even if they are already benched, though if the worms are very numerous it would be better to give the lime water and allow the soil to dry out before planting; in doing so it would be very easily seen if many of the worms were still left in the soil, and if so then the second application could be given a few days after planting. Air slaked lime can of course be mixed with the compost during the spring when mixing the same, but this will only drive a very small proportion of the worms away, while the application of lime in solution as described above is much less expensive and much more effective in its results. JOHN N. MAY.

Hot Water Under Pressure.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a house 18x75 feet which I would like to heat with hot water under pressure. I have a coil containing seventy-two feet of 2 inch pipe, also 1,000 feet of 1-inch pipe with a 50-foot smoke flue. What arrangement would you advise? S. B.

Smoke flues are not generally desirable, but for some crops and where fuel is cheap they answer fairly well. I would prefer to use 2-inch pipe for the returns. About twelve runs will be needed for 60° in zero weather. The seventy-two feet of 2-inch pipe and 1,000 feet of 1-inch pipe would give one 2-inch overhead flow, and thirteen 1-inch returns. This would answer for steam or for very high pressure with hot water. A system where 100 pounds pressure can be carried either by means of city water pressure or a closed tank might suffice, but my choice would be as above. L. R. T.

A Noted Flower Woman Dies.

Paris, May 3.—Isabelle Bouquetiere, so named by the Jockey club, who died several days ago, has been laid to rest. Many Paris papers give accounts of her somewhat remarkable career. For years she was one of the celebrities of Paris. She was at the height of her fame in 1867, when Amedee Achard met her at the Grand Prix. Her name was Isabelle Briant.

At the beginning of her career she was an actress at one of the smaller Parisian theatres. She did not stay long on the stage. She began to sell in a small way roses and violets at the door of the Cafe Anglais. She had a quick, intelligent face and bright, laughing eyes.

One night the Duc de Caderousse met her as he was leaving the Jockey club and gave her a few louis which he still possessed after a run of bad luck at baccarat. The duc installed her in the vestibule of the club. She became a fashionable flower girl, and was officially recognized by the Jockey club. Isabelle hardly ever left her daintily fitted up stall in the Rue Scribe. Her ambition had no limit. She had been consecrated by the boulevard and the paper of the time said: "You are nobody if you do not salute her, or if directly she sees you she does not come to fasten a rose in your buttonhole."

As she grew older she became eccentric. In the summer of 1867 she wore a dress of colors of the Montgomery stable, which had just won the Derby. The following year she continued her strange exhibition at the races and in the Bois. It then became customary for the winner of the Derby to give her a dress made of his colors. Thus she wore blue and red for Comte de La Grange, blue and white for M. Charles Laffitte, red and black for M. Lupin.

But fashions of people change, and Paris makes and unmakes its favorites. After the fall of the empire, Isabelle was forgotten. She opened three flower shops near the Boulevard des Italiens. She was not so successful, but generally was seen selling flowers under the portico of the Theatre des Varietes and on leading race courses. She died in a hospital very poor.—Chicago Daily News.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, Pa.

LIMA bean growers in California say irrigation will be necessary to produce a crop this season and that the cost will thus be increased.

CHICAGO.—S. F. Leonard is now setting in order his new wholesale warehouse at 71–73 W. Monroe street. The seven story brick building, 40x185 feet, is entirely new and, with commodious basement, affords about 50,000 feet of floor space. Mr. Leonard's retail department remains at 143 West Randolph street.

The Adulteration of Seeds.

We are in receipt of the following communication regarding the adulteration of seeds, from A. J. Pieters, who is in charge of the pure seed investigations for the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C.:

"Concerning the adulteration of seeds we can at present only say that there seems to be abundant indication that certain seedsmen are preparing to meet the demand for clover by adulterating the clover seed with trefoil. We shall not be surprised if we hear of plenty cases of that sort in the near future. One seedsman has for some time past stamped his letters 'Red clover mixed with Yellow trefoil is sold at much lower price.' Another has imported more trefoil during this winter than will suffice to supply the legitimate demand for it in five years. Some of this was imported as 'clover' while another consignment came under the name of 'crimson clover.' This last named lot contained sixty-six per cent trefoil, eighteen per cent sweet clover, eleven per cent of breakage and five per cent of weed seeds, of which there were twenty-five kinds. There was not one seed of crimson clover. Of course we do not know what disposition the firm intends to make of this seed but we cannot imagine a more profitable one than selling it at clover seed prices. We shall endeavor to watch the market as closely as our circumstances will allow and if such seed is sold to the farmer as clover seed, we shall hope to hear of it.

"The Beardless Brome grass that has been sold this season, as far as our observation goes, has not been as much adulterated as last year, although some samples have contained large percentages of other species of bromus. We would say in passing that almost without exception the American grown samples of Beardless Brome have been of much higher quality than the imported samples. A practice that has occasioned some complaint among the growers of Illinois Red Top is one that, while not strictly an adulteration, is, nevertheless, selling seeds under false pretences. It appears that some dealers have been selling the chaff from Red Top seed under the name of Illinois Red Top. This stuff, of course, contains only a very small amount of Red Top seed and that of inferior quality. The sale of this stuff has tended to work an injury to the Illinois Red Top, of which growers complain. We hope to investigate the full extent of this practice in the near future."

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

IRWIN C. DARLING, nurseryman, of Cleveland, O., has filed a petition in bankruptcy, scheduling liabilities of $4,800 and no assets.

J. A. WHITESIDE has bought P. J. Leitzell's interest in the Girard Nursery Co., Girard, Kan., and assumed the management of the business.

L. L. MAY & Co. are planting fifty acres of nursery stock on the farm near St. Paul recently purchased by them. Mr. Carruthers, of Kansas, has accepted the position of foreman. A general line of stock adapted to the northwest is being planted.

NURSERYMEN might well urge the passage of Senate Bill No. 1439, amending the Interstate Commerce Law. This bill aims to strengthen the law in the matter of the long and short haul and several other important particulars and directs the Interstate Commerce Commission to make and maintain a freight classification which shall be uniform throughout the United States.

THE brief period during which the Canadian government suspended the operation of the San Jose scale law and received nursery stock at certain ports of entry, fumigating the stock before its transportation was continued, necessarily restricted exportations, but assurances are offered of a further period of two or three months in the fall, which will permit of the transaction of considerable business in the Dominion.

P. S. PETERSON & SON, Chicago, are buying about 300 varieties of pæonies this year. They had previously about 400 and their collection is now doubtless the largest in the country. W. A. Peterson estimates that it will include about 600 sorts; he has in his tests discovered some sixty synonyms and several of the recent purchases were only secured to test the trueness to type of sorts already in the collection. Mr. Peterson has in contemplation a monograph on the pæony.

The Tree Butchers.

There are workmen and workmen in all branches of mechanics.

There are competent and incompetent men plying the several trades. It is not the palette and the brush that make the artist, says the St. Louis Star, nor yet the paint pot that designates the painter, not the pruning hook, the hatchet or the saw that speaks of the horticulturist, nor the trowel and the sprinkling pot that tell the story of the florist.

In all callings some men excel, and right alongside of them others miserably fail.

Sir Joshua Reynolds, when asked by a young artist how he mixed his colors, answered, "With brains." That is the true touchstone of success in all callings.

There is one class of fellows, just now plying their so-called calling in the residence part of St. Louis and in her suburbs, who are wonderfully lacking in brains.

They call themselves "pruners." To judge from their work they would better be called tree butchers—for that is what they have been doing for a week or two back, and are now doing out in the northwest suburbs—butchering, murdering some grand and stalwart trees that have stood and faced the storms of many winters.

Next, almost, to murdering humanity it is a crime to mutilate these stately oaks and elms.

The city should pass a stringent law, requiring each man who professes to be a "pruner" to hold a license for doing such work, and debar him from receiving such license except upon the presentation of a diploma from a school of forestry, or at least a recommendation from some well known local individual well versed in "treeology."

Augusta, Ga.

The P. J. Berckmans Co. has done a heavy business the past season. Palms and field-grown roses are the leaders. They had sold about five cars of nursery stock in the Transvaal and Natal, but, on account of the war, the orders were cancelled. Judging from the orders now being received from South Africa, the English must anticipate an early ending of the conflict.

Owing to the late spring, vegetation is at least three weeks later than last year. Strawberries are just beginning to ripen. Peaches, pears and plum trees are loaded with fruit and are now safe from frost. Judging from the present indications, the fruit crop will equal, if not exceed, that of 1898.

Fancy leaved caladiums are being grown in large quantities. If planted in a rich soil and partially shaded situation, especially where they are protected from the afternoon sun, a bed of these is a grand sight.

The Huss Floral Nursery reports a good increase of sales over last year, the Easter trade being especially brisk, roses and carnations being mainly in demand. They intend putting up another rose house this summer. L. A. BERCKMANS.

CLIFTON, N. J.—George Young is pushing along the construction of his new American Beauty house, 40x450 feet. When this is completed he will have one of the largest American Beauty establishments in this section.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

E. F. WINTERSON, captain of the Chicago Florists' Bowling Club, has received word from J. J. Beneke that several men of the St. Louis team are still out of form and that their proposed visit to Chicago must be delayed at least until May 13.

At New York.

Small but very select was the representation at the bowling alleys on Monday evening, April 30. The scores made are appended:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th
Roehrs	164	165	191	127	140	129	154
Schultheis	138	134	176	147	149	134
Von Ash	131	132	135	126	139	99
T. J. Lang	189	196	146	168	175	175	140
Donlan	154	162

At Denver.

Following are the scores made on Tuesday, May 1. Mr. Applegate is a new member from whom we expect good work:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av
Scott	214	180	193	196
Applegate	162	201	154	172
Berry	152	143	149	148
Benson	133	136	125	131
Lunday	118	150	114	127

P. S.

At St. Louis.

The bowling team rolled four games on Monday, April 23. J. J. Beneke, who has been troubled with rheumatism in his bowling arm, has fully recovered. The following is the score:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	Av
J. J. Beneke	170	146	188	145	162
C. A. Kuehn	128	164	149	126	142
J. W. Kunz	134	151	137		141
John Young	149	127	122	116	129

On Monday evening, April 30, only two of the members were able to roll. The trip to Chicago is postponed. The following is the score:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	Av
C. A. Kuehn	179	177	146	194	172	151	170
J. J. Beneke	169	219	129	134	171	192	169

J. M. H.

At Philadelphia.

Interest in bowling is still high and warm brushes are of periodical occurrence. It takes more than a double century to capture the high mark for any week. Last week Johnson was high with 227, and W. K. Harris the week before with 224. On April 23 a pair of new alleys were opened by a match between the Florists and Young Mennerchors, our boys winning handily. Here is the score:

FLORISTS	1st	2d	3d	Total
Brown	126	147	129	402
Conor	141	146	190	477
Hamilton	136	153	167	456
Johnson	157	172	161	490
Walker	169	164	153	426
Moss	153	152	162	467
Team totals	822	934	962	2718
Young Mennerchors	816	874	935	2625

The Scotts are in it again. From the extreme east to the far west, they are being heard from. Young David put up 200 in a game on the local alleys the past week, and just look what his brother, Philip, is doing out in Denver. Yes, Philip, they do "eclipse anything ever published in a trade paper," but how can you waste your time bowling at pins set from ten to eleven inches apart? Then we hear from the Buffalo head of the family, who wants to know about the "venerable" Mr. Harris. Venerable, indeed; he is well worthy of admiration and his scores are a matter of pride both to himself and all members of the club. He won the first prize in the twenty-five-game handicap tournament just finished, making an average of 168 pins, one pin higher than the scratch man. This with his handicap placed him with an average of five pins ahead of his nearest competitor. "Wm. S." can get into form again if he will just drop a line to his "venerable" friend, who says he won't charge a cent for the plan. K.

At Buffalo.

Change of climate must certainly benefit some people. Phil. Scott was at one time a champion bowler in Buffalo, but he lost his grip and was almost a "has-been"; even Andy Adams' average of 120 beat him one day. We are glad that Denver air has given him a new lease of life, for I think at the rate Mr. Scott, senior, is bowling Philip will need all the air he can get between now and August. I am sorry to see that M. Bloy quit bowling when Phil. arrived, as I think he has good blood in him. We thought the Denver alleys were short, but Phil. says they are narrow; well, Phil. is tall but not wide, and the alleys seem to fit him. Strong inducements are being offered to get Dennis O'Connell to get in practice for New York, but I am afraid it will be useless. Kasting has Jake Wiese in training, so we are sure of a good team this summer, even though we are not publishing records. W. A.

Philadelphia's Target Breakers.

The Florists' Club now ranks as the leading inanimate target shooting organization in this state, says the Philadelphia North American. Its shooting grounds at Wissinoming have just been put into the most complete order, with a set of five expert traps enclosed in such a manner that they are set firmly and need not be taken up after each day's shooting. The magautrap house has been enlarged and the machine put in good order, and no more trouble may be expected from this quarter. For open tournaments, where there will be a large crowd, arrangements have been made for a third set of traps.

The officers are: President, Dr. George Goebel; vice-president, J. G. McKaraher, secretary-treasurer, William B Westcott; captain, A. B. Cartledge. The club has a large membership, the most prominent of whom are John Burton, William K. Harris, Charles D. Ball, J. William Colflesh, George Anderson, William H. Taplin, George Craig, Lemuel Ball, John K. Starr, Edward Reid, Will K. Park, John D. Carlisle, Thomas C. Brown, Dr. R. C. Allen, J. D. Barrett, J. D. Stafford, Howard Bucknell, Daniel Jones, John J. Hallowell, William H. Wolstencroft, Victor V. Dorp, H. Landis David, D. D. Engle, Louis H. Eisenlohr, E. T. Coleman, J. A. H. Dressel and L. C. Parsons.

Last year in the state shoot at Erie the florists gained a national reputation by winning all the inanimate target state championship events. The Wolstencroft trophy, emblematic of the individual championship, was won by A. B. Cartledge. The team trophies include the Milt Lindsley three-men cup, the Reading trophy for five men and the Harrisburg trophy for six men.

The club's contests are held on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month, at which there is always a good attendance and visiting marksmen are always welcomed.

Los Angeles.

DRY SEASON NOW ASSURED AND MUCH LOSS SURE TO RESULT.—SMALL CROPS EXCEPT FOR THOSE WHO PAY HIGH PRICES FOR WATER.—EASTER STOCKS WERE LARGE AND TRADE GOOD.—NOTES OF INTEREST ON VARIOUS DOINGS.

We are now assured of another dry season, such as the past three summers. Not for this length of time has the earth been thoroughly moistened to a greater depth than three feet; to-day it is quite dry and the season of rains is past. True we may have an occasional light shower, but no heavy rains are expected before next October or November. That is the situation all over Southern California and where irrigating water cannot be had no crops are expected. Our growers usually occupy but a small acreage, either in or close to the city, and nearly all of them can secure water in limited quantity. The climatic conditions are such that water applied in this way is not so conducive to plant development as natural rains, yet all are determined to make the best of such adverse conditions and push business as much as possible.

All our tradesmen made great preparations for Easter. There were great quantities of callas, carnations, roses, sweet peas and genistas but violets and Harrisii and longiflorums were in limited quantities. At the flower stores business was reported very good. Many orders were received from the surrounding territory for several hundred miles and all desirable flowers were disposed of at satisfactory prices. Nearly all the longiflorums for sale were shipped in from San Francisco.

The store of Capt. F. Edward Gray, 140 South Spring street, was especially well supplied with suitable stock for the Easter trade, all of which was grown in his extensive greenhouses and nurseries at Alhambra. He had a large stock of home grown Harrisii and longiflorums as well as a limited number of his new hybrid lily, a cross between Harrisii and longiflorum. This variety is absolutely free from disease and if it proves amenable to the forcing process it will have a great future.

John Schlaloss, manager of the Redondo Floral Company, informs me that they are cutting an average of 4000 carnations daily. Owing to the dry weather and the entire absence of fogs the attack of thrips is longer continued and more injurious than usual. In addition to their already large fields of them the company is preparing to plant 40,000 additional carnations.

When it became evident another dry season was at hand C. A. Brazer & Co., bulb growers at Wilmington, made arrangements to increase their water supply and now have in operation a pumping plant that gives them an abundance of water from their own wells.

Miss Harriet Goodin is now doing business in her new store, 440 South Broadway. She has fitted up a very nice store room and office which is connected with the Elysian Gardens conducted by Miss Ethel Lord.

John Reeves, a well known gardener, who for a long time was a great sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, has recovered and is now employed with Ernest Braunton on one of the finest private places in this city. D. R. W.

TRADE CONTINUES FAIRLY ACTIVE.—STOCKS AND PRICES.—KASTING BECOMES A PARK COMMISSIONER. — VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

Trade the past week has been very fair but prices have varied considerably. Roses can be had at from 5 cents upward but Beauties hold at $4 per dozen. There is no surplus but carnations are more plentiful and of sweet peas and lilies there are too many. The plantsmen have more than they can do in making lawns and beds.

The trade has at last accomplished something from a club standpoint, for the mayor has announced the appointment of William F. Kasting as park commissioner, and a better appointment could not have been made. While there are a number of florists who would be an honor to the board, Mr. Kasting was the first one mentioned and by the letter sent to Mayor Diehl it was shown that he had the support of nearly all.

The Buffalo base ball team opened the season last week and one of the players, who was a member of the Eagles, was presented with their emblem made in flowers Adams did the design.

J. B. Wiese is making preparations for the construction of a greenhouse which will be devoted almost entirely to palms for his market trade.

R. C. Avery is going to make alterations in his West Seneca greenhouses, as is Jerry Brookins, at Orchard Park.

W. A.

WEST BROOKFIELD, MASS.—Mr. Niles, who bought the Jennings property, intends to repair the greenhouses and do a florist's business.

GENEVIEVE LORD

The ideal pink carnation. Strictly speaking, a commercial variety, yet size and exhibition qualities are not lacking. The color is that happy shade called by the ladies "just right." Its stem is unequalled by any carnation. It is a prodigious grower and the most remarkable producer of high grade blooms we have ever grown. An easy, rapid grower; makes large plants from late cuttings. We can promise prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock for delivery prior to that date all sold. Cuttings positively free from rust and in other respects very hard to duplicate.

Price: Doz., $2; 100, $10; 1000, $75.

Our catatalogue is now ready, giving complete description of above, also all of the other big new ones at introducers' prices. Also complete list of standard varieties, all the best new and standard chrysanthemums. Catalogue sent for the asking.

St. Louis.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—LITTLE CHANGE FROM PREVIOUS CONDITIONS.—DEATH OF A BRIGHT YOUNG LADY.—BOWLING TEAM DISABLED.—OTHER MATTERS.

There seems to be very little change in the condition of the St. Louis cut flower market this week. The over-supply continues and the demand is slow. Roses have sold as low as 50 cents a hundred, good stock, and carnations dropped to $4 per thousand and the waste was heavy at that. However, this condition cannot continue much longer. The chances are that by the first of next week the over-supply will be considerably cut down and prices will advance. It is expected that there will be a great many flowers used in honor of Admiral Dewey.

Miss Helen Beneke, aged 13 years and 9 months, youngest daughter of J. J. Beneke, died Tuesday, May 1. Miss Beneke was gifted with a fine musical talent and was much sought after by churches and lodges for entertainments. Being of a bright, cheerful disposition she made friends with all the members of the craft, who extend Mr. and Mrs. Beneke their deepest sympathy.

It has been decided by the St. Louis bowling team, owing to so many of the boys being sick or busy with their spring plant trade, to postpone their visit to Chicago. The new date has not yet been decided upon, but will probably be fixed at the next meeting of the team.

Fred. Weber, who has been ill for quite a while, is now able to be around and attending to business again.

Wm. Sanders, who was with Charles Connon, has gone into landscape gardening, and has all the work he can attend to. J. M. H.

LANCASTER, MASS.—The many fine elms in this town have suffered so severely from the ravages of the elm leaf beetle, that a special town meeting is to be held to consider the advisability of making an appropriation of $1,000 for the purchase of spraying apparatus.

SMOKER AT THE GARDENERS' CLUB—ONE OF THE MOST ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENTS ON RECORD.—WIT AND WORSHIP AT THE SHRINE OF FLORA.—STATE OF TRADE AND THE MARKETS.

The smoker at the club was generally conceded to be the most successlul entertainment ever enjoyed by that organization. The expected visitors from Philadelphia found it impossible to attend, and that was the only item of gloom in a whole evening of brightness. Refreshments were provided by the magician of the club, and all that the committee had to do was to pass them around, the last course being churchwarden clay pipes with stems half a yard long, tied with a neat bow of yellow ribbon bearing the words, "Gardeners' Club Smoker, April 23, 1900." While the fragrant narcotic was exercising its soporific influence, Robert Graham, acting as master of ceremonies, called upon a number of members for speeches. G. O. Brown, when called on, read a paper he had prepared in response to a request, "The Gardener, the Florist and Flowers," showing the beauty and use of gardening and its connection with all that is noblest in humanity. The essay was also brimming over with humor, personal allusions of the most pleasant character raising a constant succession of laughs. Other members called on were: President Robert Halliday, W. Paul Binder, Wm. Christie and Messrs. Woodfall, Donn, Moss, Flitton, Welsh, Seybold and McRoberts. Music was not wanting, for Geo. A. Solter as pianist and Henry F. Klinefelter as whistling soloist were heartily applauded.

Prices have a decided downward tendency, and the warm weather is bringing in floods of bloom, notably roses and callas. Smilax is still scarce. Sweet peas are becoming fairly plentiful. Dealers are "kicking" about sleepy carnations. The market stalls are gay with geraniums and pansies, and altogether the signs indicate the advent of spring and the transient reign of the spring bedding plant in the trade.

Growers are going in for Liberty rose. The Ruxton Company has a hearty looking batch of 500, and others are taking more or less stock. MACK.

SAUGERTIES, N. Y.—M. J. Barry's Easter violet crop was 102,000 blooms and the returns were something more than $700.

Helpful Reminders.

Every one has sweet peas for two weeks but few have choice flowers after that. Plant them where they can be watered and have plenty of light and air. They want rich soil and should be well staked. When you water do it thoroughly and next day rake the surface lightly. Keep the old flowers cut off and and when you see a new side branch starting cut the old branch above it entirely off. In this way you will keep a fresh crop constantly developing. There is pleasure and profit in it.

If you have trees to care for it is well to look the bark over and pick off the cocoons of the Tussock moth, which are gray and look like silk spun with hair. By destroying these you prevent the caterpillars from infesting the trees in June. If your neighbors allow the caterpillars to grow, you can easily prevent them from crawling up the trunks of your trees.

All hardy shrubbery for mid-summer or fall bloom should have its pruning at once, roses, hydrangeas, begonias, clematises, cornuses, etc. Early flowering plants which set flower buds in fall should not be pruned until after blooming.

This is a good time to increase Asparagus Sprengerii by division. Shake out well and cut the cork-like disk from which the stems and roots grow into separate pieces, leaving no less than three stems to a piece.

This is the time of year to dig, dig deeply, turn the soil over and expose it to the air as thoroughly as possible. Use the fork but do not be content with scratching the surface.

Care should be taken with your dwarf oranges to keep them clean now and preserve the flowers and new growth to have them well fruited for winter sales.

Aster seed for general crop should be started now. C. B. W.

EXETER, N. H.—Lorenzo Nealley has opened a flower store in the room formerly occupied by C. S. Sheldon, jeweler.

RIDGEFIELD, CONN.—Chas. W. Neth, gardener to L. H. Bigelow, detected burglars on the place, April 22, and gave chase, receiving a powder burn as the result of being under fire by the robbers.

AKRON, O.—W. P. McFarland has severed his connection with the Imperial Greenhouses and will shortly start in business for himself at 203 Wooster avenue, near the Bolany Bros.' old plant.

LONDON, ONT.—A. G. Stephens has secured the Weldon homestead at South London, a good brick house and five acres of the choicest land in the vicinity, and will move his greenhouses as soon as the spring work is done.

OCEANIC, N. J.—It has been decided that the Monmouth County Horticultural Society will meet monthly during the summer, on the third Friday of each month. On May 18 Dr. W. S Whitmore will address the organization upon "The Cultivation of Flowers: their Influence upon Society."

MADISON, N. J.—Arrangements have been made to hold the fifth annual flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Association on November 7 and 8, at the Madison Assembly Rooms. An efficient committee has been appointed to arrange a schedule of prizes. Mr. D. Willis James is constructing an elaborate Italian rose garden.

DAVIS & WEISS, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Stock is plentiful but not in much demand. Spring has come on with a rush and many of the trees are in leaf. Hyacinths and tulips are in their glory. Everybody is trying to get their gardens in shape and do their planting.

Clark Bros. have a good crop of Souvenir du President Carnot rose. The stock is three years old, planted in solid beds. They dry them off and keep cold for a few months in winter, then cut them well back and start about six weeks before Easter.

At the annual meeting of Commandery Number 4, of which the ex-president of the S. A. F., Wm. F. Gude, was the retiring commander, he was presented with a magnificent gold sword and belt as an expression of appreciation for services rendered. P. G.

COMMISSION MAN SELLS OUT.—BUSINESS CONTINUES ACTIVE.—SOME GOOD STOCK IN MARKET.

Wm. L. Lingenbrink has sold his wholesale and commission business to A. Elberfield. This step was prompted by Mr. Lingenbrink's desire to try his luck at the Cape Nome gold fields but he has since given up this project and will devote his time to caring for the property interests of his sister, Mrs. C. N. Whitman. His first duty will be a trip to one of her ranches in Texas.

Business continues brisk and there is no prospect of an over-supply, particularly of the stock suitable for funeral designs. Glauber & Webb are cutting some remarkably fine Beauties. Good roses are in fair demand and pansies go quickly.

Mr. Scheffel, the well-known violet grower, will put in more plants than ever for next season. A. E.

VINCENNES, IND.—John A. Balmer has torn down his place on the corner of Third and Broadway streets and has shipped the glass and young stock to Cle Elum, Wash., where he is building three houses 22x200 feet. He will grow wholesale only for the Seattle, Tacoma, and other markets of western Washington. This will be the only wholesale cut flower establishment in the state of Washington.

MESSRS. THOS. W. WEATHERED'S SONS,
46 and 48 Marion Street, New York, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—I am highly gratified with the results I have obtained from your Sectional Boiler which you put in for me last October. Although you would only guarantee the six sections to heat 1620 feet of 4 in. pipe, I attached it to over 1,800 feet. It did it so well that I put on about 300 feet more, making in all 2 100 feet, and I am positive that I can add more to it. It is the best I have ever seen and a great coal saver. I have to keep the fire door open all the time.

I would be pleased to have anyone call and see it. Yours truly,

George Schubert

Experiences Gained by the Easter Trade.

[Paper by Robert Craig, read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, May 1, 1900.]

Your committee have asked me to say something about "Experiences Gained by the Easter Trade of 1900." I have made some hasty and random notes, which I will read to you, being fully conscious of how incomplete and unsatisfactory they are. But I am not without hope that they may prove useful in starting a discussion in which the members present will express themselves freely on the subject of plants and cut flowers at Easter, which has become the most important flower festival of the year in all parts of the United States and Canada.

Let us take a glance backward for twenty or thirty years and recall the growth of the demand for flowers and plants at Easter. As long back as I can remember (and I have been actively engaged in the florists' business for over thirty years) there has been a demand for all the cut flowers and blooming plants to be had at that time. But three decades ago, comparatively few were grown and those mostly of an inexpensive kind, such as Chinese primulas, cinerarias, gilliflowers (stocks) particularly white ones; Duetzia gracilis; a few azaleas and roses in pots, such as Hermosa and Agrippina; and a very limited number of carnations in pots. In these latter days the storemen do not care to handle cheap plants such as, for instance, those that retail at 25 cents and 50 cents, claiming, very justly, that it does not pay them to deliver such cheap plants in the great rush. Therefore the limited number of gilliflowers, small geraniums, etc., now grown are disposed of mostly on the sidewalks, where the customers pay spot cash for them and carry them off, thereby entailing no expense for delivery, while the dealers are not under the incubus of lofty rents, elaborate and costly delivery teams, and high-priced salesmen.

Now great preparations are made by those florists who make a specialty of catering to Easter trade and the finest specimens of the florists' art, both in plants and cut flowers, are to be seen at that season. The plant trade at Christmas is growing apace, too, but at that time of the year it is impossible to have such a variety as is to be had in the springtime. I think Easter will continue to be the most important part of the year, for the plantsmen at any rate. What a marvelous advance has there been in the florists' business! It is observable at all seasons of the year but has its emphatic demonstration at the time when the stores and greenhouses are so brilliant and attractive in their Easter array. I wish to be considered a young man yet, but I can recall the time when there were no florists' stores in Philadelphia; when the leading cut flower business was done by Andrew Dryburg, in his greenhouses at Nineteenth and Race streets, and Peter MacKenzie, at Eighteenth and Spruce streets, both locations being then in the suburbs of Philadelphia; and the next largest business was done by James Ritchie, in a cellar at the corner of Eighth and Sansom streets.

About thirty years ago the firm of Pennock Bros. startled the community by opening a small one-story shop on Twelfth street below Chestnut, which was regarded by Mr. Ritchie and others as a doubtful experiment. But who could conduct a first-class florists' business in a cellar now? How interesting it would be to Robert Buist, David Ferguson, James Ritchie, Peter MacKenzie or any of the old-time leaders if they could come back and see the proportions to which the florists' business has attained.

To return to our subject proper, let us "consider the lily, how it grows" and incidentally how many from Bermuda do not grow by reason of that happy, cheerful and indefatigable little animal, the bulb mite, which is eating out the life of the lily. I speak of the lily first because it always has been, and is likely always to be, the most important Easter plant. A floral Easter without lilies is hardly conceivable. Many years ago the Calla Ethiopica was the lily, and later on a few L. longiflorums were forced into bloom, under great difficulties at that time, by only a few of the most enterprising florists. The houses at that time were not so well heated as we now have them, and few of the growers were willing to use the extra coal necessary to get the old-fashioned longiflorum in bloom at that, as then considered, early date.

By the way, what has become of the original L. longiflorum, with its substantial flowers, which stood out from the stem at an angle of 45°, and which was entirely superior to the so-called longiflorum which we now get from Bermuda and Japan? I have not seen the true L. longiflorum for eight or ten years, nor the true Harrisii, either, for that matter. Those of the latter we get now are far departed from the original of the type introduced to commerce by the president of our club, whose name it very properly bears, and which will keep that name in pleasant remembrance after he has gone, which God forbid for many years yet! May no pernicious blight overtake him such as has overtaken his lily, and may he continue to flourish "like a green bay tree."

I well recollect the first dozen plants of this lily which he purchased from Wm. Crawford, on Grays' Lane, below Woodland avenue, who had, a few years previously, received two bulbs from a lady by whom they had been brought from some southern clime. This was, I think, in 1878, in the month of February. Mr. Harris asked me, at that time, if I had ever seen such a lily in bloom at that season of the year and he predicted a useful career for the newly discovered treasure. But even he, with all his business sagacity, did not realize what a future was in store for that lily nor how millions of them would be grown every year to supply the demand in all parts of the world.

But, alas, much of its grandeur has departed! So many seedlings of it have been raised in Bermuda and elsewhere that the original and superior type, as far as I can learn, is extinct, and the so-called Harrisii which we now get from Bermuda, while inferior in many characteristics, is so badly diseased from the ravages of the aforesaid mite that the culture of the bulbs is both unsatisfactory and unprofitable. Now we have to depend largely on Japan, where the disease has obtained but little foothold. But the bulbs from Japan, although in the main satisfactory, are not always so. There are several varieties that come from Japan, some of which, even under careful treatment, come into bloom too late for Easter. I am glad to know that our good friend Peter Barr, of narcissi fame, who sojourned for a short time among us about a year ago, is now in Japan and is instructing the "Japs" as to the best varieties to grow. If they will only listen to and obey him they will reap a rich reward.

Next to the lily in importance as an Easter plant is the azalea. What quantities of these are now grown. I think the quantity was a little overdone this year, especially in the larger sizes. I allude to plants wholesaling at $3 each and over. A limited number of azaleas can be retailed in Philadelphia at from $6 to $10, and a very few at higher rates, but the most popular sizes seem to be those that retail at $2 to $2.50 and at prices gradually lessening from these figures. And how few varieties are now generally popular. The catalogues of our Belgian friends name fifty or more sorts, but here three varieties supply the popular demand, viz., Vander Cruysen, Bernard Andrea Alba and Vervaeneana, with a limited sale for Empress of India, Prof. Walters, Dr. D. Moore, Niobe, Apollo, Simon Mardner, Hermione, Dame Melane, the latter a delicate pink single varety, a profuse bloomer, and perhaps a few others.

There are two other varieties that are worthy of special mention, namely Prince Albert and Emperor of Brazil. These are both very beautiful sorts but they are late varieties and should be put into heat about four weeks earlier than most varieties. Prince Albert is particularly late if given ordinary treatment, but with more heat it comes nicely into bloom for Easter and is very pretty. New York Favorite is the name given to a pink one put on the market this year, which is of a pleasing color but has a defect in that the flowers droop somewhat. It is said by some authorities that it is an old variety renamed. We find that most of these varieties, notably Bernard Andrea Alba, Vervaeneana and Dr. D. Moore, are vastly improved by keeping over one summer in this country, provided they are mulched with cow manure and watered freely and regularly every day all summer. By this treatment they bloom more profusely and keep longer in bloom than the freshly imported ones; but it is imperative that they receive constant, careful attention, with plenty of water, all summer.

The greatest defect in the cultivation of azaleas is, to my mind, the unnatural shapes in which they are compelled to grow. They are mostly sheared off level to look like the surface of a table, or are pruned into a somewhat semi-circular shape, one branch not being allowed to project over another, and the surface being almost flat. They remind you of the bouquets made thirty years ago, which were similarly stiff and rigid, and totally devoid of graceful outline. How is it that flower-buyers reject altogether the old-fashioned flat bouquet, demanding their cut flowers to be loosely and gracefully arranged, but still accept the azaleas grown in this ugly, stiff way? But there are already here and there murmurs of discontent, and I predict that in a few years the public will demand azaleas more naturally and gracefully grown. It is a fact that some of the Belgian growers have for several years grown azaleas in natural and graceful fashion, particularly for the Paris market. We had at our place this year, a few plants of the latter kind, and intend to grow for next year several thousands of them, feeling sure they will find ready sale.

Probably the next plant in Easter importance is the hydrangea. My experience is that the best results are obtained by growing the plants plunged in pots, out of doors, all summer. The treatment for growing and forcing hydrangeas has been so often explained in the trade papers that I will not now detain you with details.

Perhaps the next plant in importance is the Crimson Rambler, a comparatively new-comer, having been introduced only six years ago and last year being the first year that it was grown in quantity. When well grown it is a grand Easter plant and has sold readily at fairly remunerative prices. It is very desirable as a small plant in, say, a 6-inch pot, selling at $1 to $1.50 wholesale, up to large specimens at $5, $7 and $10 each; and a few can be sold at as high as $15 wholesale. But the demand in Philadelphia for these larger sizes is very light; New York is a better market for big ones. In some of the fashionable stores there they can hardly get them large enough. It has better keeping qualities, as an Easter plant, than any rose I know of. The next best rose for Easter, when well done, is our old friend, Magna Charta. Take it all in all, it is the finest hybrid rose we have for this particular purpose.

It has occurred to me, in the cases of the hydrangeas and the Rambler rose particularly, that it would be a good idea to attach to each plant sold a card with an inscription upon it like this: "This plant should be soaked with water twice a day while in bloom." This would prevent much dissatisfaction from the wilting of the plants, which is sure to occur in the dry rooms of dwellings and in churches if the plants are not frequently watered. Some years ago one of our best and most practical up-town florists sent, with each hydrangea sold, a tin saucer with instructions to keep it filled with water and also to put a similar pan under each hydrangea used in church decoration. This is a practice worthy of general adoption.

I have named the four principal Easter pot plants, and will now briefly mention some of those next in importance. The genista, with its pure, bright yellow flowers, is desirable and, if well grown, much in demand. Of the two varieties, G. racemosa and G. Canariensis, the former is the better. Astilbe is also a very useful and not costly plant. Astilboides grandiflora has superseded the old A. Japonica, but A. compacta is still grown to a limited extent. Heaths are yearly becoming more popular. All the varieties are beautiful and dainty, Erica cupressina particularly so. Acacia paradoxa is also desirable in limited quantity. It does not flower very well in fall imported plants; it blooms more profusely and with finer flowers when imported in the spring and grown outdoors in the full sun all summer. They should be wintered in a cool greenhouse and should, like heaths, be grown with the pots standing on a damp, cool surface all winter. Boronias, with their exceeding grace of delicate form and dainty flowers, have been introduced by several growers in New York and have been quite popular.

I have named, I think, most of the desirable Easter plants and will conclude by brief mention of bulbous plants, which are grown in considerable quantities in pots and in shallow pans. Hyacinths, tulips and Narcissus Von Sion are seen in greatest quantity. Hyacinths, this year, have been most unsatisfactory to the grower because of the poor condition of the hyacinths received from Holland; as a rule they were of inferior quality, particularly LaGrandesse, the best white, and Czar Peter, the best blue. I am informed by the Holland growers that these two famous varieties are afflicted with disease and that some of the other varieties of lesser note are becoming constitutionally weak and therefore unsatisfactory to grow. The Hollanders have not learned how to prevent the hyacinth disease, but they might be more careful in sending over their tulips. We have noticed this year, for instance, in our batch of Coleur Cardinal, a good sprinkling of some inferior, cheap red sort. This might have been accidental; but it is certainly strange, if these mistakes be purely accidental, that we never find any high-priced tulips among the cheaper sorts. The culture of hulbs is so simple and now so well understood that I will not detain you longer. I may mention that we find it necessary to have but few hyacinths in bloom early in the week preceding Easter, as the general demand comes only as late as Friday or Saturday. We find it best therefore, to have the hyacinths showing color not earlier than Thursday. When "just right" they meet with a ready sale on Saturday.

Darwin Tulips for Forcing.

The May-flowering Darwin tulips have hitherto not heen tried for forcing to any great extent. The quinquennial bulb show held at Haarlem, Holland, March 16–20, has shown the excellent results which may be obtained by forcing these brilliant late varieties and the glorious display they produce. A group of about fifty varieties was exhibited in low pots or pans, by E. H. Krelage & Son, each containing ten to twelve bulbs of the same variety. The development of all the blooms in each pot was remarkably regular, and they were almost exactly as large and cold as in the open ground at the usual flowering period. The bulbs were forced in the usual way. Almost every pot was faultless, and it proved quite easy to have the plants in bloom before the opening of the show. It would have been possible to get them ready many days earlier if necessary. The Darwin tulips are now being generally appreciated for their dazzling colors and bold grouping effect in May, hut it may interest our readers to know that these varieties may be successfully forced to bloom as early as the first week in March. The accompanying illustration shows a few of the fifty pans which were, according to all reports, one of the chief attractions of the Haarlem exhibition.

CARNATIONS.

EARLY FIELD CULTURE.

Weather conditions seem to have undergone some radical changes within the past five years. When I first started growing carnations as a specialty, April could always be depended upon for a shower or two every week and carnation planting could be undertaken with the certainty that in a few days there would he rain enough to start the plants nicely. But during the past three years this condition has been entirely reversed and the weather naturally due in May has come in April, so that the planting of carnations has been something of a study, and the question of watering them is becoming yearly more important.

I managed to get about two-thirds of my stock out in time to catch the one good rain we have had since Easter, but the remaining one-third is yet in the houses awaiting suitable planting weather. That "the early bird catches the worm" is especially apt in carnation growing. Early planting in the spring, early housing in the summer, and good results are almost a certainty. When one is delayed in planting the best thing to do is to rush the belated stock along so as to have it ready for early planting in the houses. The best way to do this is to add a little extra fertilizer to the soil. A little bone meal or any good phosphate will do the work if properly used, but if misapplied the stock would be a thousand times better off without them.

Watering is out of the question with most growers, but where it can he done no better investment can he made, but a mere sprinkling does far more injury than a drought could do. When watering is done it should be applied in such quantity that it soaks into the soil to a depth of at least three inches and then, as soon as the top is dry enough to work stir it up well, so that the loose soil will act as a mulch and make such a watering once a month more beneficial than a dozen lighter ones. The best results from watering will be obtained if it is done between the hours of 6 p. m. and 6 a. m.

Where watering is not practicable the next best thing to do is to cultivate continually, keep the weeds down and the soil loose enough to act as a retainer of the moisture beneath the surface. Plenty of water is the carnation's constant need, and when water is lacking every attention must be paid to its other requirements so that it may not become stunted and diseased.

After the plants have started growing in the field do not be everlastingly cutting at them. Give them a chance to make some growth and form good roots. Whenever a branch shows signs of forming a bud it can and should be cut back far enough to keep the plant in good form, but be sure that it is cut and not broken or pinched out. The difference between a cut and a break does not mean success or failure, but it is decided enough in favor of the cut to pay you to adopt that method of topping.

When the plants are suffering from drought they are usually attacked by all sorts of insect enemies and a good, careful watch should be kept for these and their extermination started as soon as discovered. ALBERT M. HERR.

A Natural Check to Carnation Rust.

During a visit to one of the carnation houses in the vicinity of Flatbush, L. I., about March 20, some plants of the variety Daybreak were observed upon which the rust was not normal in appearance. A careful examination showed the unusual appearance to be due to the presence of a second fungus, Darluca filum (Biv.) Cast. The darluca appears usually as a discolored, blackish, area of irregular shape, often including within its limits several pustules of the rust, though this feature is not always present. Some of the specimens showed only deadened areas upon which there were scattered minute black specks, the pycnidia of the darluca. The two fungi are closely interwoven within the tissues of the carnation, the rust drawing its food from the plant, the darluca taking its sustenance from the rust. The rust tends to weaken the carnation, but is in turn weakened by the darluca, especially in those cases where the latter is in the form of specks on a dead area. In such a case only a few rust spores would be able to mature.

The pycnidia of darluca produce about a thousand spores each, and there are often as many as a dozen pycnidia in a pustule of the rust, so that the possible effect of the fungus may be estimated. The same fungus attacks rusts of several other plants, especially that of asparagus. It may be that darluca may be artificially introduced into houses through the use either of such a crop or, more probably, by the use of a spray containing the spores of darluca. This could be easily prepared by breaking infested asparagus stalks into water, which after thorough stirring could be sprayed upon the plants. There would be no danger of producing rust from the asparagus rust spores, as that rust is as distinct from the one on carnations as are chrysanthemums and crocuses. The darluca spores germinate easily in moisture and soon become attached to the rust threads in the tissues of the carnation, being most prominent in the vicinity of the pustules of the rust, where they almost fill the tissues.

The accompanying figures show the appearance upon the leaf, enlarged about three times; and a magnified view of an infested pustule of rust.

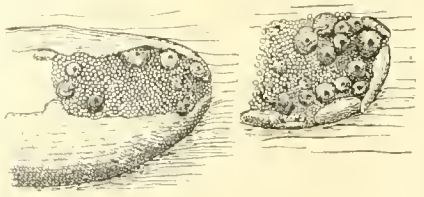
The Rusts of Florists' Plants.

In a recent lecture before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Prof. Byron D. Halsted, of the New Jersey Agricultural College Experiment Station, New Brunswick, N. J., spoke in part as follows:

"There are at least three rusts that have made themselves prominent among ornamental plants during the past few years. A leading rust in the flower garden is that of the hollyhock (Puccinia malvacearum Mont.) which came into this country in 1890, and spread with remarkable rapidity and fatality. It develops upon all parts of the hollyhock, as the leaves, stem and floral parts, causing them all to sicken and die. This rust is a good illustration of those that have only the teleuto form of the spore and the sporidia that grow directly from it. In other words the cluster cup and uredo stages are omitted, and the first stage becomes the last, so far as spore development upon the host is concerned. The great rate at which the fungus spreads is to be accounted for largely because it hibernates as the living mycelium in the hollyhock, the young leaves of which exist as a rosette through the winter. As the warm moist weather comes the orange patches upon the foliage enlarge and quickly develop spores that almost at once form the sporidia, which rapidly spread the rust to other parts of the hollyhock. Another observation that may be made in connection with the hollyhock rust is its scarcity at certain times. For example, in 1898 there was an abundance of hollyhock rust, while a year later there was almost none upon plants badly rusted the year before. It may be said in explanation that the conditions were unfavorable for the disease and the health of the plants was restored. Good growing weather with no excess of moisture is the best ally of the victim, and if it comes in time, many kinds of plants will recover from an attack that might be otherwise disastrous.



PYCNIDIA OF DARLUCA IN PUSTULES OF CARNATION RUST.

SURFACE OF CARNATION LEAF SHOWING DARLUCA.

Another new rust is that of the carnation (Uromyces Caryophyllinus Schr), which reached us, probably from Europe in imported stock, in 1891, and is still in evidence in nearly all parts of the country. The conditions here are quite different from the open garden, for heat and moisture and a more or less confined air in the greenhouse supply the surroundings favorable for the growth and spread of the rust. The spray from the hose in watering, for example, is one of the best means of carrying the spores from a diseased to a healthy plant. The experiments that have been made with this disease are somewhat limited, but they go to show that preventive measures are better than attempted cures. From the fact that the carnation is largely an indoor plant and propagated by cuttings, it goes without saying that the stock should be healthy from which the cuttings are taken, and no rusted plants should be introduced into a house previously free from rust. One rusted plant under the circumstances of greenhouse growth may be ample to inoculate a whole bed, and this accounts for the sudden outbreak of the rust in houses hundreds or thousands of miles apart. Carnation growers are gradually acquiring a knowledge of the susceptibility of varieties and are finding some sorts in this respect much more valuable than others.

The latest claimant for our attention among the greenhouse rusts is that of the chrysanthemum. As yet the advent of this importation from Europe has not been traced back of 1896, when it was found by Mr. Hastings, of Fitchburg, Mass., and reported by Dr. Stone in the ninth annual report of the Massachusetts Experiment Station. From foreign correspondence it is gathered that it was rampant in France and then spread throughout England, where it was very destructive, particularly in 1898. With us it has increased quite rapidly during the past three years, and during the last one it has become decidedly troublesome. Up to the present time only the uredo form has been met with upon American plants and therefore it is impossible to be sure of the species. While this is interesting from the standpoint of the botanist it may be of no great economic importance. However, if the other forms are associated with the dandelion or similar related common wild species the bearing of this knowledge upon the checking of the rust is at once apparent. This disease is so recent with us that there is very little in the line of remedies that has been determined experimentally. It being a greenhouse plant propagated by cuttings, the precautionary measures are practically the same as with the carnation. The two rusts are, however, very distinct, belonging to different genera of fungi, and not transmissible from one host plant to the other.

Foliage Plants for Bedding.

As the time approaches for the re-arrangement of outdoor gardens the subject of bedding plants becomes one of interest to a large proportion of the trade. Many buyers doubtless have their minds fully made up on this subject before interviewing the florist, but there are also many others to whom a suggestion will be welcome, especially if such advice is not merely in the direction of increasing the amount of the order, but is also given with a view to furnishing the most satisfactory result for a given location. For example, a wind-swept lawn is not the proper place on which to plant an Abyssinian banana, nor will the best results be obtained from a canna bed that is placed in the shade of a group of trees. Nevertheless, each of the plants mentioned may be entirely satisfactory when given their proper place in the garden, that of the banana being in a partially sheltered spot where its magnificent leaves will not be torn to ribbons as soon as they are unrolled.

Cannas will unquestionably be planted in immense quantities again this season, for we have no other class of plants that give such fine effects in both flowers and foliage, and at the same time require so little attention as these same improved cannas. When nicely done, the crotons always attract much attention, though it appears that these fine foliage plants give better results in some of our eastern and southern cities than they have done in the interior, and it seems as though reasonable proximity to the ocean may be especially beneficial, though it is doubtful if they would stand being near enough to get any of the salt spray; but wherever crotons are bedded they should be so planted as to give an immediate effect, the plants being massed quite closely in the beds, and unless the season be a very early one crotons should not be planted before June 1. Strong and healthy young plants from ten inches to two feet in height are the best for bedding, and these should be hardened off for ten days or more in a cold frame before planting. Broad leaved varieties are the most effective, such for example, as Hillianum, Alexander III., Dayspring, Queen Victoria, Evansianus and C. variegata.

Ficuses of various kinds also do well in the full sunshine, only requiring a rich soil and plenty of water to produce stronger and better foliage than the same species will do under glass. The ever popular Ficus elastica and also its variegated form are excellent, while F. Chauvieri, F. macrocarpa, F. dealbata and F. Porteana are also highly ornamental. A rather heavy mulching of good manure on the surface of the bed will be found very helpful to the ficus, this dressing being added two or three weeks after planting, by which time the roots will be moving.

Several of the aralias and their near relatives, the fatsias, may be used to advantage outdoors, some of the smaller growing species doing well as vase plants. A notable instance of this kind is found in Aralia Veitchii, a plant often looked upon as being very tender, and yet in a vase that is placed in a partly shaded position this plant is not only very pretty but also stands well, the greatest objection to its more extended use being found in the comparative difficulty of its propagation, for cuttings root very slowly indeed, and consequently the greater number of plants are grafted on A. reticulata or some other free growing species. Aralia Guilfoylei and A. leptophylla may also be used in outdoor gardening. Fatsia papyrifera, the "rice paper plant" of the Chinese, is a free growing subject in the open air, and its large leaves are quite effective in a bed of mixed foliage. Fatsia Japonica, known to many as Aralia Sieboldii, is also a useful species, both this and the preceding species being very readily increased, either by seeds or by root cuttings, the latter method producing young plants almost as freely as bouvardias may be had by a similar plan.

Sanchezia nobilis is occasionally seen as a bedding plant, and in fact has frequently been used for sake of variety in both park and cemetery gardening. The form of this known as S. glaucophylla is a very strong grower, and when well manured and watered produces some very fine foliage. Cuttings of sanchezia root very readily in a warm house, and young plants that have not been checked or starved are the best for outdoor use. Caladium beds are sometimes met with in our eastern parks and gardens, and by this is meant not merely the so-called "elephants ear," C. esculentum, an admirable plant for large beds, but also some of the variegated varieties. The latter are not adapted for planting in the full sunshine, however, but rather in such a location that they may be sheltered from the afternoon sun by a building or a group of trees. But in any case these caladiums should have a rich and rather sandy soil and an abundance of water, and those varieties having very thin and nearly white leaves are not adapted for such use, the choice being preferably restricted to such strong varieties as Duchartrei, Wightii, Chantinii, Alfred Bleu and De Candolle.

Pandanus Veitchii and the variegated phormiums form a welcome addition to the available stock for use in a mixed bed of foliage plants, and both of these species grow well under such conditions, providing they are not allowed to suffer for want of water. The propagation of Pandanus Veitchii by cuttings has been so often described in these pages that it does not need repetition just now, while the phormiums are usually increased by division, for seedlings are likely to revert to the original green form.

Those very hot and exposed positions, for instance, a vase on a balustrade, require plants that cannot readily be killed, and this is particularly so if the vase in question be one of those ornamental but far from perfect cast iron contrivances, the sides of which are excellent conductors for the sun heat. In such a case there seems to be few better plants for the purpose than Yucca quadricolor, or an agave, with a carpeting of sedum, for it is a difficult matter to keep a less enduring plant in condition for any length of time. W. H. TAPLIN.

CONDITIONS NOT FAR REMOVED FROM SUMMER.—VIOLETS DID WELL.—LILAC IN ABUNDANCE.—ROSES OF SUMMER QUALITY.—THE MATTER OF PROFITS.—BUILDING STILL PROGRESSING.—THE PLANT MARKET.—EARLY VISITS ADVISED BY A BUYER.

After a spell of very fluctuating weather we seem now to have come to a period of summer temperature, with its exhaustive effect on indoor crops. Violets are done for; their season is over and that it was a good one, no reasonable violet man is inclined to deny. Outdoor tulips are practically over already and lilacs are just coming in. The purple variety sells in enormous quantities but very cheap; for the white ones good figures are asked and, being scarce, they go to the select stores, while the purple ones go to the Greeks. There is some outdoor lily of the valley in but it stands no show alongside the indoor stock, which is of superb quality at present. Among the odd things noted in a trip among the wholesalers are some purple asters equal to summer grown flowers, but there is no advantageous place for them in the market under spring conditions. Snapdragons, in various colors but mostly white, are seen in considerable quantity.

Roses are still abundant but rather less of an oversupply than was the case last week. Some gowers still maintain good color and other desirable characteristics in their product but in most shipments the effect of the increasing temperature is quite evident and quality is bound to tend steadily downwards hereafter, as the experience of each year has shown, and it will not be long before planting for next year's crop will be under way with those who like to open the fall campaign with good, salable stock. The customary dissatisfaction with returns for roses in the wholesale market which is always noted when values fall has been in evidence ever since Easter and we hear much of "gluts" and "drugs" but there does not appear any good cause for reasonable complaint regarding market conditions, from the standpoint of the producer. A stubborn resistance on the part of the wholesale commission dealer is logical enough since it costs him as much to sell a hundred roses for $1 as it does at other times to sell them for $10 but his commission is cut down to a fraction.

If the business is so badly run down as the mourners would have us believe it is hard to understand the reasoning of those who are constantly increasing their investment by large additions to their glass area or to fathom where the money comes from to pay for it all. The fact is that the complaints of unremunerative trade conditions are based not so much upon the facts of expenditure and receipts as upon comparison with antiquated price lists. That a rose which commanded $20 a hundred a dozen years ago brings only half that figure at a corresponding date in the wholesale market now does not necessarily indicate that it is being grown at a loss.

To be of any value comparisons must also take into consideration every advancement in cultural methods, greenhouse construction, etc., and the general and technical knowledge that has been so widely disseminated through our societies and our horticultural literature. The resultant economy of operation and the maximum quantity of high grade product now obtainable from a given area must have an important bearing on the broad question of whether the business of rose forcing for the wholesale market under present prevailing conditions is profitable or not. Of course, the man who is too stubborn or too conceited to avail himself of the immense educational advantages offered by the Society of American Florists and who has no use for the trade papers, can find fault with himself only if he gets shuffled out in the shuffle.

The plant market is said to be booming daily and the frequenters of that enterprising neighborhood report satisfactory progress. Deponent cannot testify from personal knowledge, however, for he has it upon the authority of no less reliable a personage than Mr. Johnnie Weir, of Brooklyn, that to see the plant market at its zenith one must be there not later than 3:15 a. m. As to Mr. Weir himself, he is reputed as never to sleep but his eyes do look a trifle heavy these days; possibly his pocket book has a compensating heaviness as a result of the early market visits. The only trophy in sight, however, is a pair of very peculiar dice with spots representing odd numbers only, which Mr. Weir thinks must have been made for some sinister purpose, a view in which his friend Mallon, also of Brooklyn, with a knowing wink, fully coincides.

There was a very attractive exhibition of plants and flowers at the monthly meeting of the American Institute on Wednesday, May 9. H. A. Siebrecht & Son made a large general display of orchids, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, greenhouse plants and outdoor garden flowers. Orchids from Julius Roehrs and Lager & Hurrell were very fine. Julius Roehrs and A. K. Pettit showed calceolarias of high merit. The Queen of Edgely, from The Floral Exchange, showed up well and there were handsom carnations from C. W. Ward and J. G. Hayden. Other exhibits were wild flowers from the New York Botanical Garden, herbaceous and shrub flowers from Geo. W. Childs and sweet peas from G. M. Hay. A meeting of the committee on the organization of the New York Society of Horticulture was held at the same time.

Sigmund Geller has moved to 108 West Twenty-eighth street, next door to J. K. Allen's summer garden, where he has opened up a big stock of baskets and general florists' supplies, with abundant room to do a big business in the same.

SPRING EXHIBITION AT HORTICULTURAL HALL BROUGHT OUT GOOD MATERIAL.—NOTES OF THE EXHIBITS.—STATE OF THE CUT FLOWER MARKET.—OVER-SUPPLY STILL THE RULE.—FLORIST MEETS A BATTED BALL.—OTHER NOTES.

The annual May exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, on Saturday, May 5, brought out the usual creditable display, the lower hall being nicely filled up with the exhibits. Fine groups of calceolarias from Mrs. B. P. Cheney, azaleas from Dr. C. G. Weld, pelargoniums from E. J. Mitton and C. H Souther, orchids from J. E. Rothwell and amaryllises from J. S. Bailey were among the showiest features of the plant section. The amaryllises were all seedlings raised by Mr. Donald and besides being of good form and color were noticeably short and sturdy. The same exhibitor received a silver medal for a nice specimen of Kentia Sanderiana. C. H. Souther was given a certificate of merit for a new, very large flowered marguerite. A group of streptocarpuses from Dr. Weld attracted considerable attention. The cut flower display was not so strong in tulips, narcissi and pansies as heretofore, the late season being evidently responsible. Dr. Weld and Edward Powell were the principal exhibitors of bulbous flowers and Mrs. Gill of pansies. H. A. Wheeler showed orchids and gloxinias, James Comley fine rhododendrons, N. F. Comley Japan irises and D. Carmichael received honorable mention for his new pink carnation, Eleanor Ames. Mr. H. C. Geiger, of the Floral Exchange, Inc., was present with a grand vase of the new rose Queen of Edgely, which was greatly admired by amateurs, commented upon favorably by the profession and awarded a silver medal by the committee.

The cut flower situation is still characterized by plethora in the wholesale establishments, free and easy independence in the retail stores and chattering aggressiveness among the street fakirs. The flower boxes that have done duty for the past season begin to look as though a load of coal had fallen on them but the growers who own them show no signs of hard usage and have that air of conscious proprietorship which tells unmistakably the story of a prosperous season and a well filled pocket. The plant trade is regarded as very promising and prices are cheerfully paid at the auction rooms that corroborate this view.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, has been in town for a week and struck it rich on Decoration day goods and graduation baskets.

W. H. Long was badly injured a few days ago by being struck in the eye by a batted ball while walking to his place of business and had to be taken to the hospital.

Other visitors: Ernest Saunders, Lewiston, Me., and E. Hanft, New York city.

VARIABLE WEATHER HAS DISASTROUS EFFECT ON ROSES.—POOR GRADES PROMINENT.—PRICES LOW.—SEASON GENERALLY A GOOD ONE.—PLANTS NEARLY SOLD OUT.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Summer is approaching; there is no mistake about it, and yet, with the thermometer registering 40°, as it did on Wednesday evening, it seemed as if winter wanted to give just one more chill before he bid his final adieu. Yet the day before the weather was very warm, 70° being the mark quite late in the day. Ours is certainly a changeable climate. The roses show the effects of these sudden changes, many crops being badly mildewed, Bridesmaids seeming to suffer most. Prices are as low as any buyer could wish and, in fact, much below the expectations of the growers. Still we hear no very loud complaints and it seems to be settled that the past season will average up better than for a long time. There is but little change from the figures of a week ago except that sweet peas are offered now as low as 50 cents per hundred and sell from this figure up to $1.50 for the extras. Many varieties of plants are being sold out. Good pot roses are very scarce, there being very few, if any, left. Late Ramblers have sold very well and are about gone. Moonflowers require a lot of hunting and altogether it looks as if there will be but little of anything left by Memorial day, which date generally winds up the planting out season about here.

Whether the supposed profits of the growers, or a part of them, shall go into sash is yet to be seen. Joseph Heacock has just completed a large house for palms, and there will no doubt be others soon to follow. Something may spring up at Riverton soon, as the Dreer nurseries broke all records with the past season's business. A traveling salesman for several large growers in this neighborhood says he had to come home because there was nothing more to sell.

One of the carnations that is showing up best at present is the Ethel Crocker. It was one of the first to get into condition last fall and is now almost, if not quite, as good as at any time this season. It certainly is a fine variety.

We notice that florists of other cities are having trouble in getting passage on steamers for their European trip. Not so here; we have yet to hear the first complaint from any of Philadelphia's growers or dealers on this point. K.

MARKET STILL GLUTTED WITH POOR MATERIAL.—OUTDOOR STOCK HURTS SALE OF CHEAP ROSES AND CARNATIONS.—GROWERS ARE REPLANTING. — CARNATIONS NEARLY ALL IN FIELDS.—THE PÆONY PROSPECTS.—A WATER TANK.—THREE CONVENTIONS NEXT MONTH. — GOOD HYDRANGEAS.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Although cuts of roses and carnations have diminished materially during the week the market for these staples shows little improvement owing to the slowness of local demand and the competition of outdoor material. There are oceans of good lilac and many street fakirs handle little else, it can be bought so cheaply. Then there are pæonies, gladioli, viburnums and tulips. There are great quantities of Blanche Ferry sweet peas about, more than can be moved, and too many narcissi, in fact too much of everything, but the growers are throwing out their old stock and replanting the houses and it is predicted that the supply will be down to within a reasonable distance from the demand in a week or so. But at the same time there needs to be an improvement in the quality of roses and carnations; with the present great volume of supply, really good material is scarce.

The planting of carnations is now well underway, in fact completed by several extensive growers, and some big fields are in evidence, but it is expected that there will be comparatively few field-grown plants offered in this territory at time for benching, for the fact that all the big growers will require increased supplies for themselves this year because of their new ranges.

A. Kennicott, who last spring had virtual control of the pæony product, gives it as his opinion that this season's supply will considerably exceed last year's, particularly in this market, and that prices will be lower. He states that he does not propose to dabble in pæonies this year.

Albert Amling has added to his equipment a tank with a capacity of 500 barrels of water and elevated thirty-five feet above the ground. He has his carnation field piped from this tank. Mr. Amling is figuring on rebuilding part of his range next year.

Chicago will entertain three conventions in the first two weeks of June, the Park and Outdoor Art Association June 5 to 8, the American Seed Trade Association, June 12 to 14 and the American Association of Nurserymen June 13 and 14.

August Jurgens had some of the finest hydrangeas imaginable this season and, although many of the best were not ready until some time after Easter, the leading retailers found them not only decorative but very salable.

Washington Park never had a better tulip display than that which is now on. The plantings are larger than usual and the bulbs started very evenly. At Lincoln Park they also have a big showing and it is attracting many people.

Phil. Hauswirth spent several days this week at East St. Louis as a delegate to the State Great Council of the Improved Order of Red Men, incidentally calling upon the St. Louis fraternity and returning home Thursday morning.

Superintendent Andrews, of the public schools, informs us that the high schools of this city will close this year on June 22, reports to the effect that they would close May 23 to the contrary notwithstanding.

The demand for bedding plants around Chicago is surprising when the trade troubles and increased prices are taken into consideration. Conservative estimates place the increase over last year at thirty per cent.

J. A. Evans, of the Quaker City Machine Works, Richmond, Ind., was in town this week, more genial than ever, the cause whereof is said to be a first baby boy at his home.

G. H. Pieser, secretary of the Kennicott Bros. Co., left yesterday for a two weeks' stay at West Baden for the benefit of his health.

M. F. Kyle, who is with the Dunkley Floral Co., at Kalamazoo, Mich., has been in town for a few days' visit with his son, who is at Kennicott's.

S. M. Michaels, one of the well known characters in the market, has attained the dignity of a very neat store at 594 West North avenue.

"Cash" Bridgeford, who has run a profitable store on Jackson boulevard for a year and a half, has closed up for the summer.

Kroeschell Bros. Company reports that the inquiry for greenhouse boilers was never heavier than at present.

J. D. Thompson, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., is in New York this week.

Lee Walz, recently with A. Lange, of 51 Monroe street, is now looking for a position.

PROSPEROUS PERIOD FOR PACIFIC COAST FLORISTS.—TRADE NEVER BETTER AT THE GOLDEN GATE.—EASTER BEATS ALL RECORDS. — SOME EXCELLENT STOCK NOW AVAILABLE.— PROSPERITY LEADS TO NEW GLASS.—WHAT THE GROWERS ARE DOING.—PERSONAL JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE.

The season's trade has been the best that has been experienced in this city for many years. Nearly all the stores sold out completely at Easter and more stock could have been disposed of had it been available. Lilies sold readily at all the stores at from $4.50 to $5 per dozen. A great number of potted lilies were also disposed of at from $1 to $1.50 per plant. A very fine lot of Crimson Ramblers came into the market a few days before Easter and good plants sold readily for $2.50 each. Roses were in good supply with the possible exception of Beauties. In carnations Sievers' sorts easily took the lead; Hobarts sold for $2 per dozen and the other Sievers' varieties brought $1.20. Hannah Hobart is without a doubt the finest carnation that has ever been seen here. The market is now receiving some fine potted tulips, which are being quickly disposed of, Schwerin and Sievers & Co. being the chief sources of supply. Violets are still coming in but are of poor quality. Sweet peas of all colors can now be had in limited quantities. Adiantums are beginning to come in more freely lately and are taking the place of the wild adiantums, which the florists have been using. There is quite a sale for blue and yellow irises at 50 cents a dozen.

M. Lynch, of Menlo Park, was the first grower to bring in sweet peas this season. He had Earliest of All in bloom in February. This is undoubtedly the finest sweet pea to grow for early blooming, being from two to three weeks ahead of Extra Early Blanche Ferry.

Angelo Vatterone, well known among the florists of this city as an expert bocchi-ball player, has engaged with Pelicano & Co. Mr. Vatterone and Mr. Pelicano have signed to play a championship game at an early date. All the craft will be on hand to witness the contest.

Thos. H. Stevenson is making quite extensive alterations on his nursery at Mill Valley. He has four acres planted in violets and expects to grow all he will need for his own use this fall.

John Gilmore, who was in charge of E. W. McLellan's greenhouses, is building a very fine range of glass at San Lorenzo. Mr. Gilmore is going to grow roses and carnations chiefly.

Chas. Navlet, of San Jose, passed through this city during the week on his way to Sacramento. Mr. Navlet says that Easter was the best ever experienced in San Jose.

Ferrari Bros., on the San Bruno road, have received 1000 plants of the new rose Liberty. Mr. Simmons, at Oakland, is also going to plant 500 of the same variety.

John H. Sievers & Co., are sending in some very fine Bermuda grown longiflorums. They are the best that have been seen in this market for many seasons.

John Carbone, of West Berkeley, is adding some more glass to his nurseries, to be devoted exclusively to the new carnations.

P. Nicholson is to add several more houses to his plant. They will be devoted exclusively to roses.

E. W. McLellan and Alfonse Pottet brought in a good lot of Crimson Ramblers at Easter.

Mr. Baldocchi, of Podesta & Co., who was very ill, is all right and around at the store again.

Pelicano & Co. and Sievers & Boland are out with two very swell new delivery wagons.

Al. Navlet, of San Jose, leaves soon for Paris and will be absent four months.

Goldstone Bros. have opened a new flower store on O'Farrell street.

Wm. F. Dreer, of Philadelphia, was a recent visitor.

Lewis Chiappari is preparing for a trip to Europe. METEOR.

The shy sweet peas thrust forth their heads
And looked around for rain;
But, finding they had struck a frost,
They hustled back again.
—Chicago Journal.

THE past two weeks have seen the production of greenhouse glass greatly curtailed.

WE are in receipt of a copy of the proceedings of the ninth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society at Buffalo, N. Y., February 15–16, 1900.

A SPECIAL cablegram from Brussels, dated May 10, announces a combination of all the glass industries of France, Germany, Belgium and Bohemia.

IT is reported that the glass trust, being short of supply to go through the summer, is negotiating a purchase of 260,000 boxes in Belgium. The country's total importations for last year were only 786,494 boxes.

THE Texas State Floral Society has issued its schedule of liberal premiums for its fifth annual fall show to be held at Waco, Tex., November 13 to 17. The prizes for cut blooms and plants amount to $1,308.75 and the premiums for fruits and vegetables are $133.

IT remained for a Chicago florist to take advantage of the structure of many bromeliads, which enables them to retain a large quantity of water at the bases of their leaves, by using the plants as receptacles for cut blooms of other plants. We saw a tillandsia used in this way recently for flowers of Trillium grandiflorum and the effect was odd and rather pleasing.

Snails Among Adiantums.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We are bothered with snails among our Adiantum cuneatum plants. Will you kindly advise us of the best method of exterminating them?
F. R. W.

One of our readers states that he keeps toads in his greenhouses to keep down snails and other night raiding pests; another scatters lettuce leaves, sliced potatoes or sliced apples about the benches and catches the snails while feeding after dark, or under the bait the next morning; another uses bran as bait, placed about on pieces of board, and another finds that camphor balls, such as are used for keeping moths out of garments, scattered about among the plants will either kill the snails or drive them away. It is also said that dry lime dusted among the plants will destroy the snails.

OBITUARY.

FRANK S. PAYNE.

Frank S. Payne, a well known florist, was found dead in his barn at Charlotte, near Rochester, N. Y., on May 6. He was 45 years of age and leaves a widow and one daughter.

JOCOB SIZE.

The venerable gentleman who has for many years represented the Whilldin Pottery Company in New York city, died last Saturday, May 5, at College Point, L. I. Jacob Size was 79 years of age and enjoyed the friendship of nearly every florist in his territory.

MRS. H. W. C. SIEBRECHT.

Mrs. Henry W. C. Siebrecht, mother of H. A. and W. H. Siebrecht, died at Astoria, L. I., on Saturday, May 5, aged 77 years. The funeral services were held on Monday evening and the burial was on Tuesday. A very large number of handsome floral pieces were sent by prominent New York florists. Mr. Siebrecht, who survives his wife, is 81 years of age. Besides the two sons named above, Mrs. Siebrecht leaves two daughters.

C. C. MORSE.

Charles Copeland Morse, who died at his home at Santa Clara, Cal., May 5, 1900, was born in Thomaston, Maine, September 15, 1842. His father died when the son was but four years of age and he was taken to live with his grandfather, Charles Copeland, on a small farm near Warren, Me. There was little in the future for him then, for his grandfather was in very straightened circumstances and all had to work hard to live. At the age of seventeen he decided to go to sea, hoping to become, in time, the captain of a vessel. He shipped on the Iola Wiley, Capt. Patterson, of Warren, Me., in the fall of 1859, for Bordeaux, France, and after the ship discharged her cargo there, reloaded for New Orleans, then reloaded for a Russian port. After a hard trip to the English Channel the ship was run down by a steamship in the night and sunk, off Dungeness Point. The crew took to an open boat and landed on the beach next morning. The captain brought suit against the steamship owners in London and Mr. Morse was retained as a witness, staying in London all winter, so that he was able to learn something of the great metropolis at that time. The captain won the suit, and then Mr. Morse reshipped on the ship S. Emerson Smith, Capt. Creighton, of Thomaston, Me., for St. Johns, New Brunswick, and, on arriving there, went home for a few months' visit with his mother in Warren.

Having found the sea distasteful, Mr. Morse determined to leave it and, with the help of his elder brother and an uncle, was able to get enough money for the journey to California. He traveled via the Panama route and landed in San Francisco in the spring of 1861, at the age of nineteen, and after trying to get employment at various things without success, he went to Virginia City, Nevada, and remained there about a year, employed in running the brakes for a hoist in one of the large mines on the Comstock lode, and later in getting out wood in the hills near by in partnership with a young man about his own age. He made a little money in this venture but disliked mining life and left Nevada, going to Santa Clara valley. After various attempts to find some suitable employment he determined to learn a trade and be independent of wages from others, so at the age of twenty-three he launched out in the house-painting business in the town of Santa Clara. He had no knowledge of paint, painters or painting when he started but soon learned and made a success of it, taking with him as a partner, later on, Chas. L. Brown, and under the name of Morse & Brown the painting business was carried on for four or five years.

At the age of thirty-four, or in 1877, the partnership of Kellogg & Morse was formed for the purpose of buying out the seed business established in Santa Clara in 1875 by Rev. Wilson, late of Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Wilson had been a seed grower near that city for some years, and with his knowledge of seed growing and acquaintance with some of the trade, had been able to establish something of a business, which he sold to Kellogg & Morse for some $12,000. It required some extra capital to care for and harvest the first crop, but Mr. Morse was equal to it from his savings from the painting business, which he had continued up to the time of his new departure. The acreage was then but about fifty acres and California seed was untried and received by the trade with considerable prejudice, but the business was pushed vigorously and increased steadily in spite of many ups and downs. In 1888 Mr. Kellogg retired from the business and the firm name was changed to C. C. Morse & Co. and in 1896 the business was incorporated, all the stock being held by his family.

Mr. Morse was a devout Christian from his early manhood and was one of the leading members of the Church of Christ, in Santa Clara. He thoroughly enjoyed and loved his church and was also always identified with the Sunday school, having charge of a large Bible class for many years. He had lived in the town of Santa Clara since 1865, excepting eight years (from 1884 to 1892) when he lived on the seed farm about two miles west of the town. He built his present home in 1892 and lived there continuously until his death. He was married in 1868 to Marie Langford, near Santa Clara, and she and four children survive him, viz, Mrs. Eva Birge; Lester L.; Stella May; Winifred Maud Morse. His large seed growing business will be managed by his son, Lester L. Morse, whom he has endeavored to educate for the trust for many years.

Mr. Morse, as is well known in the trade, made a specialty of sweet peas, originating Cupid and many other varieties of the highest merit.

Trade is keeping up very well for this time of the year. Planting in the field is now the order of the day, as we have had a fine rain and all outdoor stock is smiling. A. Milne has his carnations all in the field, about 4,000, and is now planting violets. J. Milne & Son have about 6,000 carnations set and are at work with the violets. They report a fine trade. Kring Bros. are to erect a carnation house 30x125 and will also add a new Kroeschell boiler. They report trade twenty-five per cent above last year. They have 7,000 carnations and 5,000 violets now in the field. K.

STEVENS POINT, WIS.—Macklin Bros. have purchased land at Marshfield upon which to build greenhouses and establish a nursery.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

CHAS. P. BRASLAN, of the Braslan Seed Growers Co., is now in San Francisco.

VISITING NEW YORK: Thos. A. Cox, of the Cox Seed Co., San Francisco, Cal.

DAHLIA, pæonia and canna stocks seem to be well cleaned out all over the country.

THE necessity of replanting in large areas of central Texas has brought a scarcity of cotton seeds.

W. W. BARNARD & Co., Chicago, report trade fully up to expectations, with some items nearly exhausted.

VISITED CHICAGO:—H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill; J. J. Van Waveren, of L. Van Waveren & Co., and Mr. Taat, of M. Van Waveren & Sons, Hillegom, Holland.

THE new Porto Rican tariff imposes a tax of 2¼ cents per bushel on corn and 6 7-10 cents per bushel on beans. Agricultural implements, not machinery, may enter free.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Buell Lamberson of the Lamberson Seed Co., died Mey 4. Mr. Lamberson was a prominent merchant and president of the Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

The Resistance of Seeds to Heat.

M. E. Schribaux, in the Revue Horticole, records some surprising results obtained in experiments in killing insects among seeds by the application of heat. Weevils were dead after two minutes exposure at a temperature of 122° and many other insects at 140°. The indications are that this treatment will also destroy the eggs of insects and the spores of fungi, experiments being now in progress to determine these points.

The surprising thing about the experiments is the great resistance to dry heat shown by most seeds. It was found that the cereals, excepting corn, withstood a temperature equal to the boiling point of water, for an hour, without their germinating power being in the least affected. One variety of wheat was exposed for ten hours to this temperature and still germinated 100 per cent. Another variety after one hour's exposure to a temperature 25° above the boiling point germinated ninety-five per cent and the same variety after an hour's exposure to 36° above the boiling point germinated fifty-six per cent.

The conclusions drawn are that by short exposures to these high temperatures all animal and vegetable parasites may be destroyed without injury to the seeds, while in some cases this treatment actually increases the germinative powers of the latter. If these results are confirmed by further experiments the discovery will be of great value to seedsmen and agriculturists generally. In the treatment of grain for the destruction of smuts, alone, this method would be of exceedingly great benefit to the farmer.

The spraying of roses with hot water and the dipping of greenhouse plants in hot water for destroying insects has been more or less in use for a long time, but we do not recall any previous reports of such extreme applications of heat as those described by Mr. Schribaux

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE San Jose scale is not dead; it's only busy breeding.

THERE is no complaint as to the profitableness of prices for nursery stock this spring.

STARK BROS., of Louisiana, Mo., have opened business with their new nursery of 300 acres seven miles south of Huntsville, Ala.

PROF. JOHN CRAIG says that the buds of cherries and domestica plums have been very generally killed throughout Iowa and that small crops may be anticipated.

NURSERYMEN who report heavy demand for decorative material say that many planters ask for Liriodendron tulipifera, certainly most beautiful but difficult to transplant unless small.

ONE of the signs of the times is the impatience of planters and the demand for trees for immediate effect. With many nurserymen this branch of the business has been large the past season.

IT is Greystone, the estate of Samuel Untermeyer, at Yonkers, N. Y., to which the Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Company is to supply 30,000 trees and shrubs this spring. Gustave Amrhyn is the gardener at Greystone.

Nurserymen's Silver Anniversary.

On June 13 and 14 the twenty-fifth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be in session at the Chicago Beach Hotel, Chicago, where the meeting of 1899 was surrounded by so many pleasures that the vote to repeat the experience was unanimous. The programme, as outlined, will be brief and will afford larger opportunity for queries and discussions along practical lines. Of addresses, other than the president's, there will be four, by Prof. N. E. Hansen. R. C. Berckmans, N. W. Hale and N. H. Albaugh. The social features will be made much of and the attendance promises to be the largest on record, but Secretary Seager emphasizes the importance of procuring certificates when purchasing railroad tickets, in order that mischance may not deprive the members of the reduced rate of a fare and one-third.

Baltimore.

THE MARKET GARDENERS NOW DEAL IN FLOWERS.—OUTDOOR MATERIAL INTERFERES WITH GREENHOUSE PRODUCTS.—SOME GOOD DESIGN WORK.—A SCULPTOR'S SUCCESS.

Even the market florists are not having everything their own way now, for most of the vegetable growers are bringing in boxes of lilac, or a more or less choice assortment of hardy perennial roots and and plants, "pineys," "bleedin' hearts," phloxes, etc., all offered at prices that defy competition. To be sure the quality and condition as well as the manner in which they are prepared for sale generally defy competition, too, but if it suits the buyer, why should we "kick"? The happy public will not buy carnations or roses while they can decorate a room with sprays of lilac at a cost of a nickel, neither will they invest in neatly grown pot plants invariably, while they can get a "chunk" of larkspur or daisy for half the money. As long as flowers are bought, however, there is no real cause for complaint. Given the love of the beautiful, expressed in the culture of flowers, and the quality of plants or flowers purchased will depend largely on the financial condition of the purchaser. Then why should we feel blue if poor clerks or seamstresses take advantage of the only chance they get in the year to get some little brightness into their humble lives? Let us console ourselves and the market florists with the thought that "Its an ill wind that blows nobody any good."

In wandering about the city one sees much in design work that would be better unseen, but sometimes, even in stores not on Charles street, a piece of really good work comes to light. Mrs. Diedeman made up a standing scroll one day last week that was very artistic. It was about four feet high and eighteen or twenty inches across. The extreme edge was of white carnations, then a row of Bridesmaid roses, and from them, irregularly jutting out into the pure white of the principal surface were buds of the same in groups of from one to six or seven. This pleasing idea of irregular and free arrangement was carried out in the lettering, which, instead of being confined to one or two stiff, straight lines, was divided into five lines, each containing a word in large letters.

Prices are undoubtedly fast hastening to the summer level. The cool and uncertain weather has had no apparent effect, either on the over-production of flowers or the falling rates. Carnations are increasing in quantity. Roses are not much behind, and all that is needed to give the "coup de grace" to the greenhouse bloom is the advent of the pæonia.

Hans Schuler, son of Mrs. Amelia Schuler, a florist at 322 West Saratoga street, continues to win high artistic honors in Paris, where he has been studying at Julian's Academy of Sculpture and under the guidance of St. Gaudens. He has just been awarded one of the Rinehart scholarships and will establish his own studio this season. Mr. Schuler is only 24 years of age. MACK.

WEST BROOKFIELD, MASS.—H. S. Brown's greenhouses were damaged to the extent of $500 by fire on the morning of April 30.

LEBANON, IND.—Paul Tauer, of Peru, has arrived to take possession of the Lebanon Greenhouses, which he recently purchased.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—C. H. Reed claims to be the oldest florist in this vicinity, having established his business twenty-four years ago.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—Miss Belle Flick has a pink carnation seedling of which much is expected and which has been named Clara Belle.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

WITH all our enthusiasm over bowling we seem to be far behind our friends in Germany. A Berlin paper of recent date tells of a 100 days' tournament which is to take place this summer in that city, the first prize being a furnished villa, with horse and carriage and other luxuries included.

At New York.

Monday evening, May 7, was full of surprises at the bowling alleys and some of the bowlers got a gait on them that was suggestive of great possibilities for next August. Philadelphia and Buffalo enthusiasts are advised to make a note of the figures attached to Larry Hafner's name herewith. Mr. Hafner is not a bit puffed up over it.

The bowlers are having great times. Last week saw nine games of 200 or better, Hamilton equaling the single game record, with a game of 247, and setting a new mark for three games, with 209, 213 and 207. The others who distinguished themselves were David Scott, 200; W. K. Harris, 210, 216; Geo. Anderson 211. The following are the records for last month:

Syracuse Visits Utica.

On Saturday, May 5, eleven husky Syracuse florists came to Utica for the sole purpose of "doing up" the florist bowlers here, but, as the appended scores show, they were doomed to an inglorious defeat. They were met at the depot and escorted to the greenhouses of Peter Crowe, where the prize winning roses and Adiantum Bardii were viewed, and where a very satisfactory test was made of the Bard patented nozzle. They were then escorted to Music Hall, where a dinner was served, a pleasant feature of which was the presence of the older members of the trade, Peter Crowe, Wm. Mathews and C. F. Baker. After dinner the bowling match was held. Syracuse did her best to win, going to the extra precaution of bringing along her "Bishop" and her "Bard" t sing her praise, their "Camp-bell" to give us warning, and even a "Ham" for our succor in case of need, but with all their Smil(i)es they were not Fox(y) enough to win and got "Dunn" in the matter of total pins, although by games they won two out of three. This is the third match in the series, which now stands two to one in favor of Utica. Following is the score:

SYRACUSE	1st	2d	3d	Total

At Denver.

Yes, "fair Robert of Philadelphia," it is something of a waste of time to spend it shooting at pins so close together that it's hard to miss them, but it's great fun, and, judging by some of the published scores, there are a few gentlemen in the City of Brotherly Love who might wish for narrow alleys like ours. Here are our scores for Tuesday, May 8:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av
Scott	170	203	198	190
Applegate		140	227	184

P. S.

At Chicago.

In the eight games played to determine as to which of the members of the Chicago club would play the St. Louis boys, Phil. Hauswirth beat John Degnan out for sixth place by an average of one pin. It was then decided by the two to play a match to consist of ten games, total pins to count, to decide the matter. Eight of these games were played on Anson's alleys on the evening of May 4, with the following result:

Degnan—169, 138, 144, 142, 194, 151, 159, 151; total, 1,248.

Hauswirth—125, 177, 130, 127, 143, 172, 155, 151; total, 1,180.

The latest advices are that the St. Louis party will not be here May 13, as previously announced, and the contest is indefinitely postponed.

With Philadelphia Gunners.

Fake Reading Notices.

At a recent meeting of the Chicago Trade Press Association, an organization whose membership comprises the most influential trade journals in the west, it was determined to take some action to protect manufacturing and mercantile firms from the depredations of the "fake write-up men."

A number of alleged trade journals, several of them being printed in the southern states, send out thousands of circular letters to merchants and manufacturers, enclosing proofs of ingeniously prepared write-ups. Each person to whom a letter is directed is led to believe that he has been selected because of the prominence of his firm. The men whom it is sought to victimize are informed that no charge will be made for the printing of this complimentary notice, but that sample copies will be sold at 15 cents per copy, or at 8 cents per copy in thousand lots.

These journals have no legitimate standing in the community and represent nothing except the desire of their managers to extort money from business men. The circular letters are so shrewdly worded and the office of publication is usually so far removed from the persons to whom the letters are sent, that many firms have been victimized. Almost every department of industry is represented by one or more reputable journals, and manufacturers and business men generally are advised to communicate with publishers of whom they have some knowledge before being led into fake schemes.

STATE OF TRADE AND THE MARKET.—BEDDING PLANTS IN GOOD DEMAND.—E. G. HILL STARTS FOR EUROPE.—OTHER NOTES.

Business has been rather quiet at the stores the past week but the market florists report a good trade in bedding plants. The supply of stock has increased enormously, especially in carnations, and prices have dropped several points during the week. Roses meet with a more steady demand and sell at fairly good prices.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., started on May 2 for England, France and Germany and no doubt will bring with him, on his return, many new and interesting things.

The new store of J. A. Peterson, at Race and Fourth streets, is nearly completed and will be the finest and best equipped in town.

Charles Jones, of Walnut Hills, has started in the greenhouse business in connection with his McMillan store.

R. Witterstaetter is shipping regular consignments of his celebrated Enquirer to St. Louis and Chicago and reports good returns. H. SCHWARZ.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Faber Bros. report trade good but they have some surplus stock which they have been consigning to Chicago; they are well pleased with the returns.

LENOX, MASS.—Samuel Henshaw, of the New York Botanical Garden addressed the horticultural society last Saturday evening, his subject being "The West Indies and Porto Rico."

The ideal pink carnation. Strictly speaking, a commercial variety, yet size and exhibition qualities are not lacking. The color is that happy shade called by the ladies "just right." Its stem is unequalled by any carnation. It is a prodigious grower and the most remarkable producer of high grade blooms we have ever grown. An easy, rapid grower; makes large plants from late cuttings. We can promise prompt delivery after April 10th. Stock for delivery prior to that date all sold. Cuttings positively free from rust and in other respects very hard to duplicate.

Price: Doz., $2; 100, $10; 1000, $75.

Trade was light last week, good stock being quite plentiful but not much in demand. Roses, lilies and carnations, to a certain extent, have to make way for lilacs and other spring flowers. Thomas F. Helpful Reminders.

The clematis is, perhaps, more in demand for outside planting than any other hardy shrub, and the percentage of failures is, I think, greater than with any other. Very many clematises are so damaged when received as to render them valueless with the ordinary treatment. The fleshy roots, which are considered valuable in proportion to their size, are simply the working roots made large by the storage of nutritious matter for the early growth. The more delicate fibers, if dried, render these fleshy parts helpless until new fibres can be formed. A plant will often be sent out, apparently quite vigorous, and just as leaves begin to form it will wither suddenly. The stored matter in the fleshy roots has been exhausted. Were the tender, fiber roots in condition for duty, the supply would have continued. Another common trouble is the breaking of the stem, frequently not more than enough to crack the bark. This will not always kill the plant but it always renders it liable to the attacks of insects or fungus diseases.

Training the vines on strong supports is quite necessary; loose strings or stakes are not sufficient. They should be given a good depth of rich soil that is porous. A clay subsoil is far better than gravel, as it affords a constant rising of vapor through the loam, which will come in contact with the roots that are spread out like a spider's web not many inches below the surface. The surface should be raked after a rain to prevent a hard crust. In very hot weather a mulching of leaves or hay should be given. Frequent waterings are advisable and the best way to give them is by boring two or three holes and pouring water into them. It is well to partly fill these holes with manure before running water into them.

The clematis is subject to the depredations of a very small worm in the roots, but this is killed by hard freezing and will hardly bother you unless the stock is imported from milder climates or grown under glass. C. B. W.

New Haven, Conn.

Trade has been very good ever since Easter, with weddings, teas and funeral work. Cut flowers of all kinds have been in very good demand. Roses are somewhat mildewed from local growers but A. N. Pierson is sending in some very good stock from Cromwell. Easter lilies seem to be a drug on the market at present but carnations and bulbous stock sells very well. Violets are very small and poor and most of the growers have stopped picking them. The first corn flowers were seen last week, both blue and yellow, and found ready sale.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society will, no doubt, be reorganized in the near future. There was a meeting last week to take steps to that end, E. A. Taylor acting as secretary of the committee.

George Neal, the Westville florist, who has been ill with pneumonia, is about again.

Visitors: Robt. W. Greenlaw, Boston, Mass.; S. E. Banks, Westport, Conn; A. Herrmann, New York. G. H.

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y.—A school for practical training in agriculture will be established on Briarcliff farm by an organization of New Yorkers. The course will be thorough and require two years.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—Mrs. A. Guillaume is leaving this week for a European trip, visiting Holland, Luxembourg, Paris and London, returning about September 1. Mrs. Guillaume's daughters will attend to the business in her absence.

The Gardener, Florist and Flowers.

[Read before the Gardeners' Club of Baltimore, April 23, 1900, by George O. Brown.]

The first history of man dates from a garden, so he must have been a gardener or a florist. Judging from ancient history Adam's early experience must have been exceedingly pleasant, at least until his apple trees commenced to bear, then it appears he was able to raise Cain. The gardener or florist of to-day has more competition in every branch of the business than Adam did. It is a question whether the average florist appreciates how important a part flowers have in our lives; how their influence, like their sweet fragrance, pervades every atmosphere, so to speak, of our very existence. The terms florist and gardener in a sense are identical. It has well been said that a garden affords the purest of human pleasures. Nature in all her manifold combinations is an ever-interesting study that charms and astonishes. The blessings of nature are enjoyable alike to all. Cottage dwellers may enjoy their little garden or yard of flowers as fully as those who can afford to pay princely prices for the adornment of grounds. The improving of home grounds with trees, shrubs and flowers not only adds more attractions and cheerfulness, but endears the place to every home-maker and engenders a goodly spirit of proper pride. A woman writer pays the following tribute to ornamental gardening: "Nothing humanizes and adorns the female mind more surely than a taste for ornamental gardening. It compels the reason to act and the judgment to observe; it is favorable to meditation of the most serious kind; it exercises the fancy in harmless and elegant occupation and braces the system by its healthful tendency. A flower garden to the young and single of my sex acts upon the heart and affections as a nursery upon the matronly feelings. It attaches them to their homes; it throws a powerful charm over the spot dedicated to such deeply interesting employment, and it lures them from dwelling too deeply upon the unavoidable disappointments and trials of life, which sooner or later disturb and disquiet the heart."

The calling of the florist is one that is ennobling. The true florist is an ardent lover of nature and his occupation naturally draws him near to nature's God. Wordsworth wrote:

> One impulse from a vernal wood
> May teach you more of man,
> Of moral evil and of good
> Than all the sages can.

The florist is constantly sowing seeds of love, happiness, content and sacred tributes. His products often pass to other hands to fill varied missions. The ardent lover well knows "flowers are love's truest language," and the shrewd florist aids him in making up bouquets to continue unwavering in his belief, and quotes to him:

> Who that has loved knows not the tender tale
> Which flowers reveal when lips are coy to tell.

The florist will allow the infatuated youth to keep on sending bouquets until he has to hock his overcoat and run in debt to keep up the regularity.

The florist will still further open his heart and trust him to a greater extent than the young man's tailor will. He knows such debts are real debts of honor. A poet says: "Flowers are words even a babe may understand." So the youth keeps on with his floral tributes until he develops sufficient courage to produce a pop(py) of his own. Then after the florist has furnished the usual bridal bouquet he loses a good customer. Few florists understand how great a medium they are in making "parlor matches," what a link they are in many a matrimonial chain. How true the saying, "The course of nature is the art of God," and that of, "Nature never did betray the heart that loved her." What cheer, what joy does a little bouquet of flowers bring to the invalid. Its appearance will seem to brighten the whole room. How true the saying that: "Flowers will preach to us if we will but hear."

The writer has seen the languid eyes of the sick brighten with unspeakable joy at the sight of flowers and heard the faint voice ask that they be placed where they could remain constantly in view.

The tribute of flowers sent by friends to the house of mourning are beautiful, silent messengers that convey heart-speaking sympathy and love that is too sacred, too tender for tongue to express. When we visit Greenmount, that beautiful city of the dead, we see floral remembrances placed over the graves of dear departed ones. It is a most impressive sight. Flowers are indeed God's emblems of purity. When we see these faithful friends of the dead, with a force comes to our mind Byron's words: "Life is but a pendulum 'twixt a smile and a tear."

Who shall say that flowers have not even vital influence in our lives? Flowers convey to us all the emotions that enter into the better parts of our lives. They teach us to love the beautiful; we recognize them as God's gifts; they win our warmest admiration; we use them as conveyances of our love, happiness, sympathy, friendship and as portraying our reverence for God. Still we must even then recognize with the poet that:

Such blessings nature pours,
O'erstocked mankind enjoy but half her stores.

There is something or some line that every florist may become especially skilled in. When one makes a great success in any one branch he is justly recognized as an expert. Such persons are sometimes called "cranks." However, when any florist has reached the point where he is called a crank he should go around behind his best greenhouse and heartily shake hands with himself and say, and say it out loud, too: "Well, old boy, let me congratulate you; you have become a success and are now envied." Success in any occupation is not stumbled into. There must be ability, capacity and ambition to bring it about. The true student of nature—and there are many of them who modestly allow themselves to masquerade as simple florists or gardeners—soon becomes a veritable artist. His discernment of artistic effects becomes exceedingly acute, and nature in all her varied forms and moods is studied with pleasurable interest. If we visit the many magnificent country homes in the vicinity of our city we find their surroundings have been made artistic, beautiful by the skill of the landscape gardener. We admire the effective distribution of the foliage plants, the groupings of the deciduous trees that so nicely bring out the contrasting foliage; the distribution of the conifers; the grand effect of massing the blooms of the flower-beds that so artistically blend the colors; the graceful windings of the walks that bring with each turn a vision of new beauty, all surrounded by a velvety green lawn. What has brought about this order of nature? It has not been a matter of chance. No; it is the skill of the landscape gardener, who, hand-in-hand with the florist, has transformed what might be termed a bit of untamed nature into harmonious artistic effects.

If he who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is a public benefactor, then the florist who propagates thousands of plants from a single plant is emphatically a public benefactor also. The florist, though, makes his increase a much greater source of profit than the grass-growing benefactor. At the last flower show of the Gardeners' Club there was a unique decoration that attracted universal attention and favorable comment. The creation was not one of chance, for in the guiding hand every one could Sey-hold evidence of genius. In the same show, among the many evolutions in new creations—sports from seedlings, etc.—was a handsome "mum" the originator named—perhaps during a moment of emotional insanity—after the writer. That I had trouble for weeks afterward in wearing a hat of the usual size has become past history. The tribute, however, was fully appreciated, and I have been feeling like a sport ever since, and consider Mr. W. Paul Binder—he's all right—even above Parr.

For years Clifton Park, with its ancient farming methods, poison-oak-festooned fences and yellow dock and white daisy predominating fields, masqueraded as a park. At last a gardener was put in charge and the magic touches that knowledge knew were needed soon became apparent. May the good work continue to Flitt-on forever. Patterson Park, with its symbolic-of-nothing mounds and plateaus in its annex; its cheerless, treeless wastes, that might have been started parkward years ago, also now has a gardener at the helm. It will soon sail into public favor. Let us all hope these signs indicate that the time has at last arrived when the necessity and importance of putting none but gardeners on guard in our parks is recognized.

The coming exhibition of the American Carnation Society will be a historical event in the annals of this club. Every member should feel it his duty to aid the worthy president of this club to help give himself and the other members of that society a royal welcome, to extend to them the genuine proverbial Maryland hospitality. I have noted that some of the sayings of the members of this club are in a degree paradoxical They complain that flowers are sold in the markets at such low prices they cannot make the business pay any longer. If some of them expect to get any longer prices than they asked in the markets the Saturday before Easter Sunday, it will not matter what the market hucksters sell their truck for. The next thing I have noticed of the florist who makes such complaints is that he has started to build one or more new greenhouses, probably to further add to his poverty list. Since my association with this club I begin to flatter myself that I have become quite a student of florists' styles. Often I see a handsome woman come sauntering down the street behind a huge corsage bouquet. I study it—the bouquet I mean, of course—I want to satisfy myself whether I can tell by the makeup of the bouquet if it is a Hallidayian, a Feastanian, Seidewitzian, Smithsonian, Grahamania, Cookania, Bergerainan or not.

There are some shrewd florists. The poem of "The Man With the Hoe" doesn't fit many florists. I once read of an American florist who advertised in foreign papers giving an elaborate description of "the great American velvet plant." All his orders were filled with the mullein plant. Another florist, a student of human nature, once sold to a rich customer, whose financial resources were greater than his floral information, a big order of plants. He called everything by their highfalutin Latin names, so that the purchaser didn't know what he was buying. He didn't know what is in a name. The customer came back, however, and reported that there had been some mistakes, as the helianthus that was sent him was nothing but a devilish big sunflower, the celosia was nothing but a blamed little sawed-off coxcomb, salvia was only sage and the amaranthus was nothing but the princess feather.

Landscape gardeners should know that there are many locations where "nature unadorned is adorned the most." I read an article in Meehan's Monthly about a year ago written by Prof. H. E. Van Deman that greatly impressed me on this point. I made the following clipping, which I thought might come into use some time. It is as follows: "It is not always possible to save all the delightful parts of a natural landscape in making a new home on a suburban lot, or in the country proper, but if the heart of the landscape gardener is right and he has sufficient skill he can do much to preserve the beautiful. It certainly becomes him, and is worthy of his deepest study, to appropriate without destroying the gems of beauty which it has taken many years, if not ages, to create. Let those who may be interested with the planting of country places give more heed to the inspiration of nature and less to those of art."

In some of the school windows we see flowers growing in flower pots and boxes. In some of the schools this has become quite a feature, and it is justly claimed that the pleasant departure is a valuable aid in school education; that the observing faculties of the interested children are rapidly improved.

There is something about the old-time gardens, those with which our great grandparents were associated, that has an especial charm to us, a sort of romance, pictures of a by-gone period, wherein we feel there was more real enjoyment of nature, more reverential appreciation than there is at the present day. Oh, if those old gardens could only talk, what sweet tales of love they could relate. The boxwood bordering the walks, perhaps, would tell the bowing welcome they used to give to the earnest, honest lovers of those days; the quaint old garden seats would tell of the sweet content and happiness of the ardent couples who used to patronize them; the old-time flowers would proudly tell what great favorites they once had been. Who can say if all the truth of those days of yore could be revealed that they would not disclose a truer happiness than is the portion of most mortals of to-day. I have visited old-time gardens in Charleston, S. C., and other places that made me take off my hat in reverence to the memories that I felt must still linger there. They made me feel the truth of the inspired poet who wrote:

A lesson in each flower,
A story in each tree and bower,
On every herb on which we tread
Are written words which rightly read
Will lead us from earth's fragrant sod
To hope, and holiness, and God.

Last spring I went home one day and found a nice little collection of potted plants. There was no card to indicate who the guilty party might be that had left them. Wife said she had asked, and the reply given was, A Friend. I thought I detected marks of a member of this club. As I do not personally know, however, Mr. A Friend, if he is present I desire to render thanks, late as it is. The hours of care I gave those plants were hours of pleasurable enjoyment. When I used, later on in the season, to go down to the office mornings with a fresh, bright-hued bouttoniere that had been plucked from my own garden I know I felt as proud as though I was the owner of several greenhouses losing money in the florist business.

In these wandering remarks neither my intention nor expectation has been that I would impart any information. My aim has been to do my humble part as an honorary member of this club, and to show, as well as I could, what the gardener, the florist and flowers seemed to be from a newspaper man's point of view.

I have in my time belonged to a good many clubs and associations. It is a gratification for me to state that in none of my associations have I ever found a more generous, brotherly, kind and considerate lot of gentlemen than those comprising the Gardeners' Club of Baltimore. Permit me to close my essay by reading the following tribute to flowers, which was, of course, written by a woman:

THE USE OF FLOWERS.

God might have made the earth bring forth
Enough for great and small,
The oak tree and the cedar tree,
Without a flower at all.

We might have had enough, enough
For every want of ours,
For luxury, medicine and toil
And yet have had no flowers.

The ore within the mountain mine
Requireth none to grow;
Nor does it need the lotus-flower
To make the river flow.

The clouds might give abundant rain,
The nightly dews might fall,
And the herb that keepeth life in man
Might yet have drunk them all.

Then, wherefore, wherefore are they made,
All dyed with rainbow light,
All fashioned with supremest grace
Upspringing day and night;

Springing in valleys green and low,
And on the mountain high,
And in the silent wilderness,
Where no man passes by?

Our outward life requires them not,
Then wherefore had they birth?
To minister delight to man,
To beautify the earth,

To comfort man, to whisper hope
Whene'er his faith is dim;
For whoso careth for the flowers
Will much more care for him.

Cyclamens.

Our illustration is from a photograph of plants grown for exhibition by Wm. Donald, gardener to J. S. Bailey, West Roxbury, Mass. Mr. Donald gives his method of culture as follows: "The seeds were sown about the middle of December, 1898, and grown along in the ordinary way. The only thing I am particular about is the soil used in potting. Good, fresh, fibrous sod is about the best thing I know of, and is mixed up so that there is little possibility of its getting sour. The plants receive no liquid fertilizer of any kind; a small amount of sheep manure is mixed in the soil for the last shift they get, which is from five-inch to seven-inch pots about the last of October. One of the most important points in an exhibition plant is good, clean, luxuriant foliage, grown symmetrically and covering the pot as far down as possible. Next in importance is the petiole, which ought to hold the flower just clear of the foliage and as little higher as possible."

The New Deutzias of Lemoine.

The name of Lemoine is so well and favorably known in connection with new varieties and hybrids of garden plants that the following particulars with regard to deutzias and the work of that firm with them, supplied by Emile Lemoine, cannot fail to be of much interest to our readers:

"Deutzia parviflora was described by Prof. C. S. Sargent, director of the Arnold Arboretum, in Garden and Forest, September 26, 1888. A woodcut accompanied the note. This is a hardy shrub, with erect branches covered with small corymbs of white flowers, very different in shape from other deutzias, for the individual flowers, with their round petals, have the appearance of the hawthorn. Prof. Sargent, who had received the new plant from the St. Petersburg Botanic Garden, sent us some branches of it and we were able to offer it first in Europe in the spring of 1891.

"After many fruitless experiments in an attempt to raise hybrids between the well known Deutzia gracilis and other species of the genus, such as D. crenata and its varieties, we renewed our efforts, using the pollen of D. gracilis to fertilize the flowers of D. parviflora. It is useless to detail the many and tedious precautions employed to avoid the intervention of wind and insects, as well as the numerous flowers of the shrub which was the subject of the experiment. The result was that we were able to save some seeds, which came up and produced a variety of new deutzias, which proved to be almost intermediate between the parents.

"Of these hybrids only three were retained and eventually introduced to commerce. The first of them was offered for the first time in the fall of 1895, under the name of Deutzia hybrida Lemoinei. It is a shrub of medium size, as hardy as its parents, covered from top to bottom with large panicles of flowers, each of them carrying from fifteen to twenty-five well expanded flowers, as erect as those of D. parviflora but with large, triangular petals, as showy as those of D. gracilis, but with a much better habit. The shrub is perfectly adapted to forcing purposes.

"Another variety of the same origin was sent out by us in the autumn of 1897, under the name of Deutzia Lemoinei compacta. As indicated by the name, the shrub is more bushy than the preceding variety; the flowers, if smaller, are much more numerous. A third variety, named D. Lemoinei Boule de Neige (Snowball) was sent out last fall. Although intermediate between D. gracilis and D. parviflora it shows a stronger relationship to the latter, its panicles being hemispherical and very large; the flowers also have a very good substance and the infloresences are aggregated on the upper parts of the shrub.

"The foregoing varieties do not by any means exhaust the list of recent hybrids of deutzias, for within the past five years we have produced some very interesting forms in crossing D. gracilis with a new species, introduced from China some years ago by the Museum of Natural History of Paris, under the rather lengthy name of Deutzia discolor purpurascens. This hardy shrub is very showy with its numerous clusters of pink flowers and we have secured intermediate forms between it and D. gracilis and between it and D. parviflora. D. gracilis rosea, D. gracilis venusta, D. gracilis companulata and P. discolor grandiflora are the varieties which we have already put in commerce."

Indoor Culture of Lilium Harrisii and L. Longillorum.

[Paper read by Joseph McGregor at the April meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, Pa.]

Having been asked to speak on this subject I will give, as briefly as possible, my own experience and mode of culture. This question has been asked: Which is better, Lilium Harrisii or L. longiflorum? I have never been able to get the same results from L. longiflorum that I have from L. Harrisii, but I think this is on account of not being able to secure as large bulbs of longiflorum. It is claimed that this latter variety is less subject to disease. Both varieties require about the same treatment.

It has been my custom to pot the bulbs just as soon as received, about the end of August, using any ordinary potting soil such as is used in growing roses and carnations, but I would not advise a very liberal use of manure at this potting. Much has been said as to whether it is better to start the bulbs in the pots in which they are to bloom or in a smaller size and then shift them on to the flowering size later. I have practiced both methods with good results but prefer to use small pots when starting the bulbs, and then shift them later into larger pots.

For the largest bulbs of L. Harrisii a 6-inch pot is best. Medium bulbs may be started in 5 inch pots and for small bulbs 4-inch pots will do. After potting place them closely together in a cold frame in any out of the way place, and give a good watering. Cover to the depth of two inches with coal ashes or sphagnum moss; they will then require very little attention for the next two months, or until November 1, when they should be protected with sash or shutters at night, as they will be pushing through the covering and must be kept from frost.

Early in December they should be removed to a cool house and kept at a temperature of 50° to 55° at night. By this time the pots should be well filled with working roots and the plants should be four inches to six inches high. They should then be shifted into their flowering pots, which should be two sizes larger than those in which they were started. This time use good soil, well mixed with one-third well-rotted cow manure. After potting, water well. Care must now be used in watering; do not give too much water until the roots take hold of the new soil. When the plants get to be sixteen or eighteen inches high they should be staked, otherwise they will become bent and unsightly. The plants will by this time be in such condition that they may be brought into bloom at the will of the grower.

If wanted to bloom April 1 the flower buds should show by February 10. To keep free from insects syringe occasionally with tobacco extract, or fumigate, and water with liquid manure. Lilies grown this way will be very satisfactory, more so than those pot'ed late and then finished by forcing in a temperature of 80° to 90° during the last two weeks before flowering, as many growers do, and then wonder why the plants collapse so soon.

CARNATIONS.

MANURE AND GROUND BONE.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—You will oblige by asking in your columns what proportions of manure and ground bone are used in the composition of soil for the cultivation of carnations under glass.

B.

We use a little less than one-third manure in carnation soil. As the soil is made up, enough bone is put over each layer to well whiten it. If the bone is somewhat coarse more must be used, and it should be mixed with the soil as early as possible so as to become partly decomposed. When we can get the very fine bone good results are obtained by applying when soil is in the bench and working it in. This grade of bone will go nearly twice as far as a coarser article. W. N. R.

GROWERS' SUMMER PROBLEMS.

Except with those growers who make the carnation a specialty this is a season of so much work that the carnations are apt to be neglected, and yet a little consideration will determine that there is as much profit in a good crop of carnations for Memorial day as in any other stock on the place. Possibly second grade stock may sell reasonably well upon this occasion, but the grower who values his reputation will have as good stock as the season will permit, even if the few dollars spent in having such stock will not bring the same percentage of profit that they would if invested earlier in the season.

I hear the constant cry of "over-stocked market." This is the natural result of the warm April, and, while a decided annoyance to both the growers and the commission men, can be and should be relieved by the growers. If your commission man has your interests in consideration he will advise you every few days of the condition of the market, and stock that does not pay for the cutting and packing can be donated to a hospital. The plants can thus be kept in good shape to make their crop for May 30.

Their are few commission men who keep their growers in constant touch with the market through a glut, as they claim that their business is practically run at a loss over such periods, but a little persistence on the part of the grower will bring the information and the commission man and the grower will both be benefited, as the grower will not be ignorantly piling unsalable stock on the market.

Why can not the commission men and the growers have a meeting in New York in conjunction with the S. A. F. convention this summer and formulate a flexible set of rules to govern their ever increasing business. There will not in a long time be such another favorable opportunity, and the money that could be saved to both sides would aggregate a large amount. ALBERT M. HERR.

HOTTEST WEATHER ON RECORD.—ROSES SHOW RESULTS OF TORRIDITY.—PRICES TOO LOW TO MENTION.—WHITE CARNATIONS SCARCE.—THE CLUB MEETING.—ANOTHER CUP FOR BOWLERS.—A BIG TULIP BED.—VARIOUS NOTES.

We have been experiencing for a few days past the hottest weather on record for the month of May, the mercury having gone as high as 102°. The effect of this sudden jump to summer, on the cut flower product, can be imagined. The roses, naturally, show the worst effects and the quantity is such that even the prevailing job lot price of $2.50 a thousand is no temptation to the Grecian speculators. Everybody must make his bow to these indispensable gentlemen under present conditions, and nobody understands it better than the Greek himself. He is particular as to quality at such times and turns up his nose contemptuously at the lower grades of roses. A little more of this torrid weather and there will be nothing to select from except lower grades, however. Carnations are like everything else, very abundant. This does not mean white varieties of good quality which are far from plentiful.

The club meeting on Monday evening was well attended for such a hot night. The principal business was on matters connected with the convention preparations. President O'Mara briefly outlined the progress made by the various committees since the last meeting and his remarks on the general situation as to prospects and preparations showed that all matters are progressing in a most satisfactory manner. The treasurer stated that so remarkable has been the success with the souvenir catalogue, in advertising, etc., that the proceeds therefrom will run far beyond expectations. Mr. Roehrs reported, for the sports committee, that fine bowling alleys and shooting grounds had been secured for August and a communication from Hitchings & Co. announced the offer of another $100 cup for the bowling tournament. W. A. Manda, for ways and means, and A. Wallace, for press, made satisfactory reports also. Daly Bros. had a pretty pink geranium on exhibition, a sport from Contrast. A request for another exhibit of the variety was made by the judges.

On Thursday, May 17, Hitchings & Co., put the finishing touches on the Botanical Garden range of houses and completed the contract. Messrs. Hitchings are to build also a large plant growing house and propagating house with office and work room, in Bronx Park proper.

A tulip bed in the form of a brilliant butterfly is attracting admiring crowds to Prospect Park South, in Brooklyn. This mammoth insect measures seventy-five feet from tip to tip of the wings. The antennæ are ten feet long and it took 5,000 bulbs to construct him.

The auction rooms are packed with buyers on the sales days this week, and the quantity of bedding stock disposed of is enormous. Prices are excellent, particularly on the best grades of geraniums.

P. Riley, at the Brown estate in Flatbush, has fifty fine plants of the pure yellow calla, of which more than half are in bloom, all raised from one sowing of seed.

B. Suzuki, of Suzuki & Iida, has arranged to sail for Europe on June 16, per steamer Campania.

C. W. Ward has taken a sudden trip west, owing to information of the severe sickness of his father.

MARKET IN A WHOLESOME STATE.—SUPPLY AND DEMAND WELL BALANCED.—LONGIFLORUMS TOO PLENTIFUL.—COLD WAVE HITS EARLY BLOOMS.—ROTHWELL GETS A MEDAL.

This week has started off with a very good beginning, so the wholesalers report. Prices are low on most goods but business is fairly steady for the time of year. Early last week the warm weather forced in a heavy cut which had to be unloaded cheap but the sudden cold wave gave a different tone to the market and there has been a gratifying bustle ever since, with supply and demand nicely balanced. Roses of the higher grades are doing well. White carnations are actually scarce but colored varieties seem in excessive supply. A quantity of "frame valley" is coming in and in a few days the outdoor crop will appear, putting an end to regular values on this article for a while. The quantity of longiflorum lilies being received is too great for the market and very low figures prevail. This is the product from the bulbs that could not be brought in for Easter, of which there was a larger percentage this year than usual. Those growers who succeed in timing them for Decoration day will have no trouble in selling for good prices, however.

The annual report of Superintendent Pettigrew of the Boston park department is just out. It is a very interesting document, describing in detail the work that has been done during the last year, and embellished with several attractive reproductions of photographic views. It appears therefrom that the expenditures for land, construction and maintenance for the year 1899 amounted to $1,575,712 65. The entire cost of the Boston park system from the time of its beginning in 1875 up to the present year has been $16,627,033 59, of which $7,314,386.68 was for land and $9,312,-646 91 was for construction. This does not include any part of the general park system outside the boundaries of the city of Boston, the ontside, and much larger areas, being under the control of the Metropolitan park department, a state institution.

The cold wave last week did much damage to early flowering trees and shrubbery in this section. Magnolias were in full bloom and the flowers were entirely destroyed. Wistarias in bud were severely injured and the foliage of astilbes and other soft growing herbaceous plants was blackened to the ground. The ground was frozen hard on Thursday night and ice half an inch thick formed on water. The effect on the fruit crop is not yet known but the loss on asparagus and other early vegetables must have been considerable.

A silver medal was awarded to J. E. Rothwell at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, May 12, for Cattleya Schilleriana, a hybrid between C. Acklandiæ and C. guttata. It was a handsome specimen, bearing three flowers.

The completed plans for the new home of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society are now on exhibition in lower Horticultural Hall.

TRADE VERY SLOW AND THE WEATHER GETS THE BLAME.—PLANT TRADE BOOMING AND SUPPLY SHORT OF DEMAND.—PRICES TOO LOW.—PALM GROWERS GETTING INTO SHAPE.—AT EDGELY.—EUROPEAN VOYAGERS.

A hot wave has played havoc with business, at least so some say, as trade is light and something must be blamed; as the thermometer has been up in the nineties the past few days, the weather gets the credit. Things are, however, about as usual for the time of year. There is a great deal more stock than can be handled in the regular channels and it's a poor fakir that can't make a dollar or two these days. Good stock costs the retail stores $6 for Bridesmaids, Brides and Kaiserins; Meteors, $3 to $4, Beauties, $2 per dozen; carnations from $1 to $2; lily of the valley, $3; sweet peas from 50 cents to $1 per hundred. While the cut flower market is so overstocked, the jobbing gardeners are at their wits ends to get plants in condition to set out. Either the demand is greater than was anticipated or else the growers, for some reason, have not kept pace with the ordinary increase in demand. With this condition of things it seems as if a little slice of the good times might be shaved off, in the shape of better prices; $10 per hundred for 4-inch pot geraniums, heliotropes, etc., used to be the standard; now it is down to $8 and even $7 per hundred.

The palm men are busy now getting the stock potted up for the summer's growth, an early start being a great advantage. Joseph Heacock has his large new palm house finished and is spreading out and giving his plants the needed room. Arecas have heretofore been his specialty but he will next season have some large kentias just as finely grown as are the arecas. With this addition to the Philadelphia palm supply, this city will be able, without trouble, to still hold supremacy in this branch of the business. We hope that the growers are not forgetting the Boston fern and will have a good stock in the fall, of plants that will wholesale at from $1 50 to $3 each. This size is very desirable and there was not near enough during the past season to supply the demand.

The Floral Exchange people are much pleased with the reception of their new rose at Boston, receiving in addition to many flattering notices and praises from visitors, the silver medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Edgely is getting to be quite a Mecca for rose growers. New houses are going up to hold young stock and several will be filled with plants grown to show the great possibilities there are in Her Majesty.

Chas. P. Poryzell, the Fifteenth street flower merchant, has sailed for Greece on a visit to his former home and also to do the Paris Exposition. Alexander Scott, of Robert Scott & Son, will also soon take a trip abroad. If he should bring back something as good as Liberty it would not surprise us in the least. K.

MARKET EXPERIENCES A LONG CONTINUED SURPLUS OF SUPPLY.—SOFT STOCK IN UNWIELDY QUANTITIES.—GROWERS MUST "GRIN AND BEAR IT."—WHOLESALERS NOT HAPPY.—MORE BUILDING CONTEMPLATED.—VARIOUS NOTES OF DOINGS IN THE TRADE.

From early spring to midsummer and then to autumn has been the gamut traveled by the erratic weather of the week and the result has been the utter demoralization of the cut flower market. The sudden heat brought on stock with a rush; roses popped open in a night and carnations bloomed as never before; outdoor stock, too, responded to the hastening heat of the sun and the wholesale houses were piled full of material of the very poorest quality, much of it unfit for any use other than that of the street peddlers, and very little which was good enough to send out in response to the few shipping orders. The result was, of course, that except for the very small percentage picked out for shipping, and which was worth fair prices, the great bulk of the cut sold for whatever the purchaser was pleased to offer, and any sale was counted a good sale. Even such stock as white pæonies hung in wholesalers' hands and there was not an item which moved without forcing. Such a condition is mightily displeasing to the growers, especially following as good a season as the splendid one just past, but there is no use of "kicking;" the commission man has as much cause for complaint as any one. The chances are that, with the continuance of the cool weather which arrived Wednesday, or even of weather of moderate degree, the cut will be materially reduced and qualities will improve to something like normal; at any rate things will soon be down to the summer level and growers will have time to get rid of the severe attacks of mildew with which some of them are contending.

The Geo. Wittbold Company still has a little land unoccupied at their location in the residence district of the North Side and the boys propose to cover this strip with two houses 25x150, using Garland's gutter. It is likely that at no very distant day the Wittbold Company will build a range of plant houses just outside the city where they can have room to grow.

John Muno is thinking of putting up a little glass for carnations later in the season. He thinks good varieties of carnations paid as well as roses this season and next fall will bench such sorts as Crane, America, White Cloud, Flora Hill and a few of The Marquis. He also has a trial lot of Liberty rose.

The hot weather brought a rush of business to the men who grow bedding plants. Fair prices are being obtained this season and there is already a prospect for a shortage in many lines, particularly well grown geraniums.

W. J. Malloy, 380 Aldine place, is laid up for repairs as the result of an attack by the dogs of a customer for whom he was doing some planting. He had the owner of the dogs arrested for harboring ferocious animals.

E. E. Pieser says that in all the years of his activity in the commission business he has never seen such an unmanageable over-supply in this market as that just experienced, and the other wholesalers agree with him.

P. S Peterson, the senior proprietor of Rose Hill Nurseries has gone to Europe, leaving almost immediately after his return from a thirty-seven days' excursion to Mexico.

L. P. Walz informs us that he is not looking for a position, having started in business on his own account at Michigan avenue and Forty-first street.

McKellar & Winterson are pushing out after business in the supply line. They are now making their cycas wreaths on the premises and are pleased with the results.

J. B. Deamud will soon have E. H. Hitchcock's new crop fancy cut ferns, shipped from Glenwood, Mich.

It is good news to the builders, that iron pipe is down in price. Unfortunately the price of glass shows no decline.

Wietor Bros. yesterday started the work of glazing their big additional range.

Many of the wholesalers have added 50 cents to the price of ferns.

W. E. Lynch is confined to his home with an attack of pneumonia.

There is an over-supply of stock of all kinds in this market and the hot weather has made buds so soft that they do not last long.

Daniels & Fisher are adding largely to to their Shawford's Farm greenhouses. Mr. Ortman, who succeeded Geo. M. Geraghty in the management of the business of this department of the store, is doing well with it.

Grimes & Sons are already finding an improvement in their business because of the opening of Highland Park, just opposite their greenhouses. Visitors are thronging the new park and not a few of them are crossing to the florists'. A. E.

CAR MEN'S STRIKE TIES UP BUSINESS DOWN TOWN.—PRICES ARE WHATEVER ONE CAN GET.—BOWLERS WILL PRACTICE UP.—NOTES OF INTEREST HERE AND THERE.

On account of the street car strike, on all the lines in this city, trade for the past ten days has been paralyzed. The west end florists report business unaffected, but down town even the street fakirs, who are selling carnations for 10 cents a dozen, complain of nothing doing. Wholesalers' receipts are heavy, but deliveries very light. They find it necessary to accept almost any offer for their stock. The bottom has dropped completely out of the retail market on roses, one dealer at a prominent Olive street corner advertising them two dozen for 25 cents, but farther west on the same street they bring higher prices. Carnations of fair grade in the colors sell for 15 cents per dozen, running up the scale to 75 cents, as you approach the fashionable residence portion of town. Good whites are 50 cents. Among cut flowers on sale are sweet peas, pansies, pæonies, lily of the valley and dianthuses, but the demand for all is very weak.

J. J. Van Waveren, of Hillegom, Holland, visited us last week and stated that prices on Dutch bulbs will average about the same as last year. There has been an unusual number of Holland bulb salesmen here this season, but it is believed they did not carry away with them the usual number of orders.

The Englemann Botanical Club holds its regular meeting to-night to discuss current botanical questions. The membership in this club is steadily increasing and great pleasure as well as instruction is certainly derived from its field-meets during the spring and summer months.

The St. Louis Florists' Bowling Club has not met for two weeks, but the "boys" expect to get together next Monday and trim up for that Chicago match. Many of the members have been too busy of late with outside work to have the time or inclination for bowling.

The feature of the June meeting of the Florists' Club will be a competitive exhibition of mixed flowers in vases for prizes of $5, $3 and $2 respectively.

Luther Armstrong, who was reported ill in a previous issue, is around town to-day.

J. M. Hudson is confined to his bed with an attack of Bright's disease. M.

BUSINESS RETARDED BY THE WEATHER.—BUILDING PROJECTS AND OTHER MATTERS.—A VARIETY OF PERSONAL DOINGS OF INTEREST TO THE TRADE.

Business in Indianapolis continued excellent until about a week ago when the extreme hot and dry weather slackened the demand for bedding plants, but a good rain and a little more spring-like weather would bring about the desired change.

The Indiana Flower and Plant Company has nearly completed its new boiler shed and cellar. The cellar is fifteen feet deep and will have ample space for two 120 horse-power boilers, the largest in use in the city. For the present only one boiler will be placed. This concern has one of the finest collections of pæonies in this state. A few nice showers would bring them out in grand shape. Their collection of Iris Kæmpferi is also very fine.

New greenhouses are planned by the following firms: Bertermann Floral Co., one house, 16x112; August Grande, one house, 10x50; John Grande, one house, 10x110; John Heidenreich, one house 20x100; Fred. Huckriede & Son, one house 10x75. Henry Rieman is also planning an addition to his range of glass, but he has not definitely decided how much, and John Grande will put in another boiler.

All of the Indianapolis florists who are interested in co-operative coal buying are earnestly requested to be present at the June meeting of the florists' association, prepared to state how much coal they will require for next season and how much can be delivered to their places before September 1. It is essential that the coal committee have this information before taking any further steps.

Irvin Bertermann, of the Bertermann Floral Co., has a new way of filling fancy baskets. Instead of the tin dishes to retain moisture he uses a piece of rubber cloth. This, in addition to its cheapness, has the great advantage that it can be made to fit any desired shape of basket.

Bauer & Smith are so much encouraged by their success in carnation growing that they will drop roses entirely and make carnations their specialty.

The numerous friends of Sydney Smith are pleased to hear that a little girl has put in her appearance at his house.

Alfred Pahud left last week, accompanied by his oldest daughter, for his long planned trip to France.

J. D. Carmody, of Evansville, is in the city this week, attending the G. A. R. state encampment.

Philip Conway, who has just finished his first year in business, is well pleased with his success.

William Bertermann has returned from his trip to the south much improved in health. H. JUNGE.

GLOUCESTER, MASS.—Fred. L. Barrington is planning the addition of a 70-foot house to his establishment on Proctor street.

CLYDE, O.—O. P. Horton and J. A. Trickett have started in business as the Clyde Floral Co. They have a modern greenhouse.

ANDERSON, IND.—John Cook, late with Stuart & Haugh has resigned his position and taken charge of the greenhouses of Wm. Beeman, Knightstown, Ind.

HILLSDALE, MICH.—During Admiral Dewey's visit to Chicago, Carl Hirsch, whose pleasure it is to have chrysanthemums out of season, sent him two large boxes of excellent blooms.

ANDOVER, MASS.—The Florists' and and Gardeners' Association held a meeting at the Town House on the evening of May 4, when a paper on carnations was contributed by W. L. Johnson.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—The Oklahoma Floral Co., Geo. L. Stiles, manager, has just completed the installation of a private system of water works. They are now to build a new carnation house.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—S. Jacobs & Sons, manufacturers of greenhouse building materials, have moved their office from 406 West Thirteenth street, New York, to Flushing avenue, Brooklyn. The post office address of the firm is now Metropolitan, N. Y.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—H. Dale is building a range of six houses eighteen feet wide, without partition walls. They are to be glazed with English glass, 16x16, and for heating steam boilers of 120 horse-power are to be installed.

THE demand for bedding material seems to exceed the supply very generally throughout the country.

THERE are increased calls for cannas this season and started plants of the best varieties are widely sought.

THE price of iron pipe has taken a decided tumble this week. The trust is reported to be overstocked and to have cut the price thirty per cent.

THE seventh annual chrysanthemum show at Houston, Tex., is to be given November 15 and 16. It is for the benefit of DePelchin Faith Home and premium lists may be obtained from the secretary, Mrs. M. E. Bryan.

As a result of the brisk sales of bedding plants and the early depletion of supplies, recourse will be had to materials not commonly used for this purpose, and a pleasing and healthful variety in plantings should be the result.

APROPOS of Robert Craig's remarks anent the form of azaleas, it may be stated that S. Taplin, the veteran Detroiter, has for many years grown azaleas of natural, graceful shape and found them readily salable in competition with the flat topped ones.

AN extensive exhibition of roses, including all the leading novelties, will be held this year at Trier, Germany. Some 30,000 standards and dwarfs have been planted in the open ground for this purpose. The German rose society will meet at Trier about June 27. For further particulars address the secretary, P. Lambert, Trier, Germany.

Growing Geraniums for Cuttings.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have purchased some of the new varieties of geraniums and wish to secure as many cuttings from the plants as possible before September 1. What shall I now do with the plants having this object in view, grow them in greenhouse benches or plant them outdoors? B.

Plant your geraniums on benches in a well aired house; keep red spider down by syringing; pinch top growth out when too long to branch and you will have strong, bushy plants by fall. Do not propagate now, rather grow good heavy plants for this purpose and commence to propagate in early fall when every cutting will strike.

More About Sports.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We notice what Rufus W. Smith writes regarding Chrysanthemum White Bonnaffon in your issue of May 5. By referring to our catalogue he will note that White Bonnaflou is not a sport but a seedling from Mrs. H. Robinson and Mrs. McK. Twombley. It is entirely distinct in foliage from Maud Dean, closely resembling Mrs. Robinson. As to the white sport from Maud Dean he mentions, will say that such a sport was certificated by the Chrysanthemum Society of America November 26, 1898, and bears the name of White Maud Dean. This new sport, we believe, is being offered this season by John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y.

Centaurea Margaritae for Winter.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Can we induce Centaurea Margaritæ to bloom during winter months in a night temperature of from 45° to 50°? What is the best time to propagate this plant for winter bloom, also the best method of propagation, by seeds or cuttings? F. C. C.

Centaurea Margaritæ, sometimes called amberboa or C. moschata alba, belongs to the moschata and odorata section of centaureas, or sweet sultans. All these are readily increased by seed, which is freely produced. I have no experience with this particular variety as a winter bloomer, but as several trials with C. odorata, a few years ago, gave but little encouragement for final success, I presume the variety in question may present the same unwillingness to flower freely in any temperature during the short, dull midwinter days, though they could be expected to bloom somewhat more abundantly in March and April: at least C. odorata will do so in a carnation house. I should suggest that seed be sown in September; pot off singly when the second or third leaf appears; repot as they grow on; keep outdoors and in frame as late as the weather will permit and when taking them into the house, give them a very light and airy position. Plants in shallow benches gave better results with us than those kept in pots, yet their growth was rather irregular; some of the plants presented a stunted appearance throughout the winter, utterly refusing to flower or even start growth. This centaurea, together with the newer C. imperialis and C. Mariæ are well worth experimenting with in this direction for success may finally be achieved by perseverance.

Pan-American Exposition Notes.

During the progress of the exposition the Horticultural Department will hold several special exhibitions of flowers. Premiums, medals and diplomas will be offered for the best exhibits in various classes at each exhibition. The announcement is made thus early so that intending exhibitors will have an opportunity to prepare suitable stock to produce exhibition quality. The dates are not definitely settled on and in the case of roses it will be difficult to fix a date to suit wide degrees of latitude, but there is probably not more than two weeks difference between New York city and St. Paul and the second week in June will find many fine flowers in both localities. The second week in May will be devoted to carnations; roses the second week of June; sweet peas during the first or second week of July; gladioli the first and second weeks of August; dahlias the first week of September; cannas the third week of September.

The writer would be glad to hear from any who can suggest better dates to suit the majority of our northern growers.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

A Question of Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I shall rebuild my greenhouses at a new location and wish to be advised whether to have the structures run north and south or in the opposite direction. I intend to put up a rose house, three-quarter span, 25x75 feet, and three carnation houses of the same dimensions. The houses will be within 150 feet of the city water works, where they always have from eighty to 100 pounds of steam pressure, and I can get steam from there it it is deemed practicable. In this case what size of pipe would you advise using to carry the steam underground? How many and what size pipes would I require in the houses and how should they be located? Could the houses be heated uniformly with hot water under pressure with coils of 1½ inch pipe? I am at present using a No. 3 Kroeschell boiler as good as new and rated at 3,000 square feet of radiation. W. J. M.

A three-quarter-span rose house should run east and west, but the carnation houses may run in either direction. At the present time most florists seem to prefer even-span houses running north and south, although three-quarter-span or side-hill houses running east and west are often used. For carrying the steam from the power house a 3-inch flow will be ample, and a 3 inch pipe will be large enough for the return water. In heating the house it will be well to use 1¼-inch pipes for the coils, and of these fourteen will suffice in the rose house and ten in the carnation houses. Another way would be to use a 2½ inch overhead main in the rose house and twelve returns, and a 2-inch flow with eight or nine returns in each of the carnation houses. If used with overhead flows there will be no difficulty in heating with hot water under pressure in 1½-inch pipes. L. R. T.

OBITUARY.

CHAS. F. BAKER.

Charles F. Baker, a leading florist of Utica, N. Y., succumbed to heart disease while making up designs on the morning of May 11; he died as he had lived, with flowers in his hands. Mr. Baker was 60 years of age. He began his business career by opening a general store near his birthplace, Stittville, N. Y. After several successful ventures of this kind he served for many years in one of Utica's leading stores, until the confinement told upon his health and he resolved to go into the business of raising plants and flowers. This was in 1876. He had for some years maintained a small greenhouse at his residence in Utica, and this was the nucleus for what has since become one of the most prosperous floral establishments in the state. He put his indefatigable energy into the business and soon built a reputation which was never lost to him, and which will doubtless continue with the management of his son, Alderman F. J. Baker, who was recently admitted to partnership. Mr. Baker made a specialty of ferns; he also grew carnations extensively, and two one-time popular varieties, Oneida and Red Jacket, originated in his houses. He was a member of the Society of American Florists and of the American Carnation Society; during the brief career of the Utica Florists' Club he served as its treasurer, and on the evening following his death the craft assembled to express, in resolutions, its sorrow at the demise of one of the most honorable of men, and sympathy with the bereaved family, a widow, two sons and a daughter.

MID SUMMER HEAT MAKES TROUBLE FOR GROWERS.—DEATH OF W. F. GUDE'S LITTLE SON.

This hot weather is very hard on indoor stock, especially roses and carnations. Some of the growers who have not yet shaded are getting their roses and other flowers scorched and are kept busy watering. This is an unusually hot spell for this time of the year; starting last Sunday the mercury has been soaring above 90°, with very little rain. Outdoor roses will make little show for Memorial day, May 30.

C. Schellhorn is making preparations for rebuilding one of his rose houses 25x150 heated by hot water.

Wm F. Gude has the sympathy of hosts of friends because of the death of his little son, May 7, of membranous croup; the child was three months of age. P. G.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED CHICAGO: Arthur H. Luck, representing the Iowa Seed Company, of Des Moines, Iowa.

ST. LOUIS seedsmen report their order trade good for this month in comparison with same in previous years.

HENRY A. SALZER, of La Crosse, Wis., has been attending the Methodist Conference at Chicago for some time past.

RECENT California reports indicate increased spread of mildew on the oniou seed crop. Other seed crops are looking well.

HEAVY rains in California May 4–5 have proved of great value to crops generally, especially to the beans at Ventura and elsewhere.

THE late C. C. Morse, the seed grower of Santa Clara, Cal., whose death was reported in our issue of May 12, left a large estate. Mr. Morse was one of the organizers of the Citizens' Bank of Santa Clara and served on the Board of Education.

The Seedsmen's Programme.

The sessions of the American Seed Trade Association in Chicago, June 12 to 14 will be held at the Grand Pacific Hotel. Aside from the usual order of business there will be a question box to supplement the programme of discussions, the principal one of which will be: "Which will be the most popular method for the average private planter to obtain his supplies of seeds in the twentieth century, from 'commission boxes,' from 'small local merchants' or on 'direct orders by mail?'" This will be lead by S. E. Briggs, S. F. Leonard and W. Atlee Burpee and under this head several live issues will be taken up, such as the rate of commission on box seeds, prices, the cost of catalogues and the question of employing commercial travelers. W. H. Grenell will discuss contracts, Chas. N. Page, catalogues and advertising; C. L. Allen, cauliflower and its cultivation; Chas. H. Heath, the pleasant side of business association, and W. C. Langbridge, the successful retail seedsman.

LA CROSSE, WIS.—A heavy hail storm, May 14, destroyed much glass in this vicinity.

CHESTER, PA.—Colflesh, Titlow & Co. have closed and gone to Germantown and the stock has been seized by the attorney for their landlord.

WANTED.
Experienced seedsman to take full charge of vegetable and flower seed department of western seed house. Good salary and position for right man. Must be able to furnish first-class references. Address immediately, giving full particulars,

Park and Outdoor Art Association.

The American Park and Outdoor Art Association is to assemble in annual convention at the Art Institute, Chicago, on June 5, 6 and 7, 1900. The Auditorium Annex has been selected as the official headquarters of the association, where rates will range from $1.50 to $4 per day. The programme will include papers and discussions at the morning sessions of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, to which all interested are invited; stereopticon lectures Tuesday and Thursday evenings, to which the public will be specially invited; and visits to the park systems in the afternoons. On Friday there will be an excursion to the drainage canal, or other places can be visited. A banquet will also be tendered to the association during its sessions.

Mrs. Edwin D. Mead, of the Twentieth Century Club, of Boston, will prepare a paper upon municipal improvement which will be read by President Loring, and Albert Kelsey, President of the Architectural League of America, will give an address upon the same subject at a joint meeting of the two associations on Thursday evening, June 7, on which day the annual session of the Architectural League begins.

A paper prepared by Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, of Lake Forest, Ill., upon "Landscape Gardens" will be presented.

Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of The American Review of Reviews, will present a paper upon some phase of outdoor art relating to our national growth.

William R. Smith, director of the Botanic Gardens at Washington, D. C., and ex-president of the Society of American Florists, will write upon a subject relating to the arrangement and grouping of plants about architectural structures.

William M. R. French, director of the Chicago Art Institute, will present an illustrated paper upon "Composition," giving particular attention to the proper distribution of buildings, of artificial structures and of foliage about such structures.

J. H. Patterson and Edwin L. Shuey, of Dayton, Ohio, have consented to lead in the presentation of work that has been done in this and other countries toward making more attractive the surroundings of factory buildings and employees' homes. To this meeting the general public will be specially invited.

William Ordway Partridge, of New York city, will present a paper upon the proper setting of statuary in public places.

J. Frank Foster, superintendent of the South Park system in Chicago, will present a paper upon park roads, in which he will call particular attention to their maintenance and administration.

The Rev. J. A. Rondthaler, of Chicago, will present a paper upon the influence of public parks upon the morality of a community.

S. M. Millard, of Highland Park, Ill., will present a paper upon a subject connected with outdoor art.

Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., of Brookline, Mass., will present a committee report on advertising bill boards; Prof. William J. Beal, of Michigan, upon prizes for designs; Dr. Wm. W. Folwell, of Minneapolis, upon park census; and C. C. Laney will report for the committee appointed in connection with the work of the Pan-American Exposition.

One of the most instructive and interesting features of the meeting is to be an exhibit of photographs showing the good and bad treatment of various subjects connected with outdoor art and the artist's conception of beauty in various objects in landscape.

Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society.

At the May meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society the following premiums were awarded: For calceolarias, to Wm. Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener; for three ferns in not over 6-inch pots, to Geo. W. Brown, gardener to Robt. N. Carson; for three heads of cauliflower, to Wm. Robertson, gardener to J. W. Pepper; for three heads of lettuce, to John Little, gardener to John Lowber Welsh; for one bunch of asparagus of twenty-five stalks, to Harry Harris, gardener to Mr. Gratz.

First prize for rhubarb also went to Wm. Robertson, while the premium for the best specimen palm was taken by Geo. W. Brown. Wm. Boyce, gardener to Randal Morgan, was awarded first for the best collection of vegetables, and Frank Gould, gardener to John T. Morris was awarded the first premium for the best collection of cut blooms of herbaceous plants.

The following items were also of special interest: A collection of very fine double flowering wall flowers, grown by Frank Gould; a grand vase of assorted roses, exhibited by Wm. Kleinheinz; specimen plant of Weigelia hybrida Eva Rathke in full bloom, exhibited by Messrs. Landreth & Sons. Robert E. Carey, gardener to Thos. C. Price, was also given notice for a handsome vase of mixed carnations, and Michael Punch, gardener to R. Le Boutellier, was awarded special mention for a well flowered plant of Maxillaria tenuifolia. Another novelty, which was possibly shown for the first time in this country, was a small plant of edelweiss, Leontopodium alpinum, shown by Albert Knapper, of Frankford, Philadelphia.

Ten persons were admitted to membership, and fourteen proposed. The society is going forward at a good pace and every indication is that with the end of our first year we will have a fairly established society. J. H. H.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Address all correspondence for this department to Wm. J. Stewart, 67 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Robt. Kift, 1725 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; or to the American Florist Co., 324 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

At New York.

Monday afternoon, May 14, previous to the Florists' Club meeting, the following scores were made at the alleys:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th
Traendly	111	170	161	145	108
Hafner	116	132	143	149	138
Burns	142	139	123	141	137
Thielmann	155	182	125	134	186
Roehrs	125	153	177	152	112
J. Manda	190	132	138	141	114
Butterfield				101
Donlau				126	115

At Flatbush.

Bowling enthusiasm here is tempered just now with the fatigues of the big spring business with which the Flatbush lights have been favored, but from now on steady practice is the order. Scores last Thursday night were as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d
Riley	142	126	145
H. Dailledouze	153	141	122
P. Dailledouze	113	127	134
Wocker	175	167	146
Schmutz	136	132	166
Prosser	101	163	126
Dennis	129	99	136
Papa Zeller	61	85	93
Woerner		100	71
Butterfield		112	104

At Philadelphia.

Bowling enthusiasm is losing no ground in this city, the boys seeming to enjoy the sport as much as ever. W. K. Harris is easily first and keeps his average well up to the one and sixty mark. George Moss is also in the game, his high mark the past week being 204. At the meeting of the bowling club last Thursday it was determined to have a new handicap tournament. Two-men teams will bowl, their averages for the past four months being used as a basis for handicapping. Teams will be selected by drawing and then the committee will decide when they will bowl. This, it is thought, will make a very interesting contest.

The gun club is attending a two-days' tournament at Chambersburg to defend the trophies half won and, if possible, win others. It is not known as yet how they have made out, but they will doubtless give a good account of themselves. K.

To the National Florists' Bowling League.

To an enthusiast of this, which may be called the national game of the American florists, it is a great pleasure to peruse the scores and read the various accounts of the contests as they appear weekly in the trade papers, and note the interest that is taken in the game in the different floral centers of the country.

An evening now and then passed in the company of congenial spirits engaged in friendly rivalry at a game of ten-pins is not, as some who take a narrow view of life seem to think, "time wasted." Such an occasion brings together socially and affords much needed recreation to men whose business demands almost their entire attention, but who manage to get an hour or two occasionally to indulge in this popular game and derive much benefit from the amusement and exercise it affords them.

The inter-city matches that take place from time to time are very interesting events and afford great pleasure to the contestants, as well as their friends, who come to cheer them on to victory or condole with them in defeat, as the case may be. Whatever the result of the game, however, it has no serious effect on the spirits of the players, who have had the pleasure and excitement of the game, besides a good time socially, and return home much benefited by their outing.

The last national tournament, during the convention of the S. A. F. at Detroit, and others that have gone before, still linger as pleasant memories, and from the reports of the games now coming in weekly it is seen that the interest is being kept up, with the hope, no doubt, of capturing some of the prizes at the coming contest during the meeting of the S. A. F. in New York next August. This tournament promises to eclipse all previous contests and will doubtless exceed them more particularly in the number of bowlers engaged and in prizes offered. The New York club has already secured several valuable trophies and the national association also has, in addition to its sweepstake prize of $100 or over, had given to it several handsome cups to be offered as its committee deems best.

In order that there shall be no confusion and that everything in the matter of prizes and schedules shall be ready when the time for the contest arrives, I have appointed a committee to take charge of these important matters and assist the officers of the national organization in carrying them out. The committee consists of John Westcott and George C. Watson, of Philadelphia, and Wm. J. Stewart, of Boston.

It would be well for all clubs intending to take part in this contest to individually get together at once and discuss the situation. The committee would be very glad to have suggestions from any of the organizations about prizes, rules for governing the contest, (although the regulations adopted at the Detroit meeting seem to meet every requirement) or anything that any one has to offer that they think will be of advantage.

The one rule adopted then that I might call attention to is that all contestants must be members of the S. A. F., in some way identified with the business, and also members of the florists' club of the city which they represent. While it is a hardship to those clubs which, after coming a long distance, find they are a player short of the required number, six, it is not fair to the other fully equipped teams to have perhaps a strong bowler substitued, and it leaves the short team open to the imputation that the omission was intentional, with the idea of thus gaining strength.

Any city which desires can enter a team with players having the proper qualifications, already mentioned, without belonging to the National Florists' Bowling League. Membership in this organization costs each club $10 per year, the membership fee being used as a sweepstake to purchase prizes to be bowled for by the members of the organization only. Several of the clubs have already forwarded their dues for this year to the treasurer, J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and I would request all others who desire to join the league to at once forward the amount to him, as with the membership known the committee can work more intelligently and, having the prizes in readiness before the contest, can arrange the schedule so that all shall have an even chance to win.

ROBERT KIFT, President N. F. B. C.

At Chicago.

On the alleys last Friday night Degnan and Hauswirth concluded their ten game match, the former winning out by 103 pins. As Hauswirth wanted revenge a second match of ten games was quickly arranged between the two and five of the games resulted in 797 for Degnan and 757 for Hauswirth.

In the regular club practice May 11 the following scores were made:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th
Balluff	180	155	164	215	222
Evans	119	128	105	...	...
Savage	179	170	132	...	...
Kreitling	125	111	110	..	...
Hartshorne	111	119	130	..	...

Buffalo.

TRADE IS RATHER QUIET AND ROSES VERY CHEAP.—KASTING WINS A WIFE.—WEDDING NOT ANNOUNCED IN ADVANCE.—LEWIS IS BUILDING.

Trade is about the same as last week; flowers are plentiful and quality good. The only addition to the stocks in the stores is pansy plants, which breaks the monotony. A store opening last week called for many roses but the price paid for them was very low; 2 cents each is small but when you furnish them for half it is ridiculous; even florists on the market who pay as low as $50 a year for stalls refused to furnish them. Should any person want an article from one of these stores he pays a regular price, but let him start at either end of our flower stores and by the time he gets to the last one he has got his plants and flowers for almost nothing.

Inquiry for Commissioner W. F. Kasting Thursday morning elected the smiling reply that he was married Wednesday evening and had left for parts unknown. Few were in the secret. The young lady who has assumed part of the park commissioner's duties, I am pleased to say, is Miss Laura La Tour, daughter of Philip La Tour, who is in the florists' business on Genesee street near Humbolt Park. The nuptial compact was consummated at the Genesee Hotel and the bridal party was composed of Miss Margaret Frances Williams, cousin of the bride, as maid of honor, and Fred. P. Keen, best man. Mr. and Mrs. Kasting have the congratulations and best wishes of all and after a trip for a week or two will be at home on Elliott street.

Pan-American matters are booming. Director of Floriculture Scott has 4000 roses to plant for outside parties so far, and by the way Director Ulrich is progressing it will not be long before we have a fine green forest.

Fred. G. Lewis, of Lockport, is about to erect two houses 18x100 for carnations and, with what he has now will have a fine range of houses.

Recent visitors: S. B. Smiley, Lancaster; Fred. G. Lewis, Lockport; Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia. W. A.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—At the Botanic Garden they are rebuilding the roofs and repairing the heating apparatus of four plant houses.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The New Haven County Horticultural Society was organized at a meeting in this city on the evening of May 7. A constitution and by-laws were adopted. Eli Whitney was elected president and Robt. Veitch, Jr., secretary. The next meeting will be held at the offices of John N. Champion & Co. one month hence.

Orange, N. J.

At the May meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, Dr. J. B. Ward gave a very interesting talk on strawberry culture. In the course of his remarks he dwelt strongly on the importance of rich soil, thoroughly prepared, well fertilized and deeply pulverized. He said that he has twelve acres of strawberries altogether and gave a list of the different varieties with their peculiarities and comparative points of value as market fruit. He advocated spring planting as preferable to fall planting and recommended the constant use of the cultivator, not only to destroy weeds but to keep the soil loose and friable. About September 1 he gives a light dressing of nitrate of soda and potash and, later on when there is no danger of smothering the plants, a heavy coating of compost, with a layer of salt hay on the young beds. He advised especial caution about frosts at time of uncovering in spring. After fruiting the ground should be plowed over and a crop of crimson clover or cow peas planted, to be turned over later. A very animated discussion of the subject followed.

SOME GOOD WORK DONE FOR THE FLOWER SHOW.— APRIL EXHIBITION BROUGHT SHARP COMPETITION.—NOTES OF THE WINNERS AND EXHIBITS.

There was considerable interest in the competitions on floral designs which were a feature of the flower show held in late April in connection with the State Fair, and some good work was shown.

On bridal bouquet first prize went to Schindler & Van Geffen, second to J. H. Menard. The winning bouquet was made of Bride roses, adiantums, asparagus and daphnes.

First prize for hand bouquet went to Charles Ebele, second to Schindler & Van Geffen. Mr. Ebele's bouquet was of Marechal Niel roses, white sweet peas and maidenhair ferns.

Schindler & Van Geffen were first for handle basket, with Charles Ebele second. The winners' arrangement was of roses and adiantums with a stalk of Easter lilies at one side and more roses on the handle.

For the best floral design there were three entries, Schindler & Van Geffen, Chas. Ebele and J. H. Menard, the awards being in the order named. The first was a plaque upon an easel, made of galax, Easter lilies, lily of the valley, Marechal Niel roses and adiantums.

The competition on baskets of roses was between the same three florists, Schindler & Van Geffen winning with Marie Henriette, Bride and Beauty. Menard was second with a basket of Marie Henriette and Paul Neyron.

Schindler & Van Geffen are to be judged particularly successful in this exhibition from the fact that it is the first time they have ever exhibited for competition.

SUMMER WEATHER STARTS THE BEDDING PLANT TRADE.—CLUB MEETING FULL OF INTEREST.—A PICNIC PLANNED.—CARNATION MEETING IN SIGHT.—GOOD GENEVIEVE LORD.

The weather has certainly reached a summer standpoint, with temperature of 91° in the shade. Planting out has fairly begun, and almost every market basket you see is topped by a geranium or some other blooming plant. The public planting would have doubtless begun, too, but for the difficulties that our park board seem to have gotten into with the mayor and city council. Let us hope all will pleasantly straighten out again soon.

The last club meeting was well attended and, owing, no doubt, to the torrid weather, the idea of an excursion was taken up, and President Halliday appointed a committee, consisting of C. M. Wagner, G. O. Brown and Wm. Paul Binder to arrange the details. The coming convention of the carnation society, though it seems far away, is the most intensely interesting matter that comes before the club, and was discussed at some length. Committees on ways and means, hall and entertainment and banquet were appointed, so the membership feels as if something had been done to start the work.

Halliday Bros. had an enormous vase of Genevieve Lord carnation in one of their windows last week, sent by the growers, Weber & Sons. Its stiff stems and delicate pink color could not be better. MACK.

Hail at Toledo, O.

The heaviest hail storm known here for fifteen years visited Toledo Monday afternoon, May 7, causing considerable damage. Imoberstag Bros.' down town greenhouses were badly wrecked, about half of their 6,000 feet of glass being broken. S. N. Peck's Broadway Greenhouses are almost a total wreck. Henry Kruger, of East Toledo, lost about 300 lights of 16 inch glass. Mills, ot Starr avenue, lost nearly all of his glass. Although the hail stones averaged about the size of hickory nuts the plants in the greenhouses under the broken glass do not seem to be hurt. Pansies at the above named establishments are a total loss, being literally cut to atoms. The path ot the storm seems to have been narrow and followed the Maumee river, as none of the rest of the florists suffered. No hail insurance was carried, but I think there'll be some lively scrambling to get insured. I. O.

BEAVER FALLS, PA.—On the morning ot May 7 fire destroyed the office and a portion ot the greenhouse of Louis Sutter, including much of the stock of bedding plants and "boarders." The loss is heavy and there was but $350 insurance.

The Treatment for Lady Campbell Violet.

[A paper read by Richard W. Norton, of Heightstown, N. J., before the New Jersey State Horticultural Society.]

To have good flowers we find it very essential to have good plants to start with. We have been successful by dividing the crowns, using only good young plants from the sides of the old crown; but we have abandoned this, as it propagates all kinds of diseases as well as plants, and it persisted in disaster will follow sooner or later.

About the middle of February to the middle of March we select young plants, those having white roots, from good healthy crowns, and to be found in abundance on good clumps, especially on Campbell. These we put in boxes filled with soil; no manure is used. Our object is to get plenty of good working roots. This will pay for the extra labor, if but to combat the red spider alone. Here we have a large lot of plants in a small space, easily syringed and cared for.

We use boxes in preference to setting the plants in beds, as the soil dries out sooner in boxes, allowing more frequent syringing. This is impossible with plants left on the crowns until after the blooming season, as so much water would spoil the flowers for Easter. These plants are shaded from strong sunlight, and handled as cuttings until they have become thoroughly established in the boxes. Give them plenty of fresh air, but avoid a strong draught. In ventilating our houses during the winter months we always open the ventilators on the opposite side from which the wind is blowing. While the violet luxuriates in a cool temperature with plenty of fresh air, yet it is a living, growing thing, so we try to avoid extremes.

In the morning, after the plants have been in a closed house all night, should we open wide our ventilators, suddenly allowing a blast of cold air to rush in, on examining the plants shortly after we would find them more or less wilted, so slightly perhaps as to escape the notice of a novice, but a good grower can tell in the darkest night by passing his hand gently over the plants if all is well. Never neglect these young plants, for on them largely depends the future, failure or success.

About the middle of May we begin throwing out the plants and soil put in the previous year. After all decayed lumber has been replaced with new, and everything is ready for the new soil, we close all ventilators, making the house as tight as possible, and allowing the temperature to run as high as the bright sun of the season will make it. After a day or two of this, when the house cools down at night, we have a fine incubator for insects and fungus. We leave the house in this condition for two or three bright days, then in the evening we take in a liberal amount of sulphur and set it on fire, making a thorough fumigation. In the morning we open the ventilators, giving the house plenty of air; then we have a house as fresh and clean as when new.

To make our beds again, first we bring in sod, the best we are able to procure, cut about an inch thick, placing it grass side down. On this we put about two inches of quite coarse corn stalk manure, from heaps brought from the cow yard in early spring, and since turned over about twice, after which we put on four inches of any good soil.

No fertilizer or manure of any kind is mixed with this, contrary to some of the best authorities. Our object is to get a natural growth and to have the manure and sod in the best condition when most needed; namely, when the plants are blooming. Before setting the plants we see that the house is well shaded. For this we use whitewash, made by putting about a quart of good quicklime in a pail, adding enough water to start it slaking. When the lime is well slaked, but still boiling hot, we throw in a large handful of fine salt, which will make a glaze on the glass that will not easily come off. We go over the house with a brush, putting the whitewash on every spot of glass. This coat is to stay on as long as it will. Next, we mix some clay with water, light colored clay preferred, and go over the house again with a brush. This clay will wear off about right, as the season advances.

Now, bring in the boxes of young plants. If we are able to bring them clean and healthy to the place they are to grow we are a long way on the right road. We set our plants twelve inches apart each way, as we have to grow them rather large to get good, long stems. We not only have to grow a good flower, but the flower must be able to hold its head up a considerable distance from the other end of the stem.

As soon as the plants are in we give the bed a good watering, and, from this time on, we carefully syringe the stock late in the afternoon, or early evening, notwithstanding good authority to the contrary. Never yet have we used tobacco, soap, or anything but clear water to keep our plants clean through the summer. The object is to grow them at this season for all they are worth.

About the first of August we gradually withhold water at night, syringing the plants in the early morning, and using every effort to keep them in the very best condition, for we are now approaching the season when they are apt to be attacked by spot. About the middle of August we give a top dressing of cornstalk manure from the same heap we used in filling our beds. By this time the dressing is in about the right condition. This is put in more to keep the flowers clean than to fertilize the plants. I make special mention of constalk manure, as we find it contains little or no fungus, and is never so strong as to hurt anything, no matter how much is used.

To my mind, over-stimulation is one of the great stumbling blocks of violet growing. By putting a good plant in soil mixed with strong manure or fertilizer we will get a thick mass of small, roundish leaves, with few and poor feeding roots. Subject such a plant to the strong rays of the sun, especially through the glass of a house running east and west, long span to the south, and spot is sure to follow.

About the first of September we try to go over our plants and houses, cleaning them up thoroughly, with the object of having everything in readiness for the blooming season.

Through all these months we have had no return for our labor but about September 1, the flowers will begin to appear. We try to get a good crop about October 1, before they become plentiful in the market. In the first weeks of November there will be very few in the market, the plants at that season having a tendency to moult, life being at its lowest ebb. Never attempt heroic measures then, such as dusting with tobacco or using strong emulsions. In fact, the violet is at all times a veritable little "Johnny Reed" as to tobacco. During the season of which I am speaking, or, in fact, any time, an attempt to force the flowers with fire heat or fertilizing will bring serious trouble. The desire is strong of course, to have flowers when others are short, but be content to go slow, allowing the plants this little respite.

NORFOLK, CONN.—H. A. Siebrecht is laying out the grounds of Carl Stoeckel.

Retzer on Planting Home Grounds.

At the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, Walter Retzer discoursed on this subject at considerable length. His remarks were confined to the general rules of landscape gardening, which, he claimed, ought to be practiced no matter how small the surroundings may be. "Beauty, simplicity and harmony," continued Mr. Retzer, "are the three principal objects to be sought in landscape work and, when they have been obtained, you may depend upon it, the effect will be pleasing to the eye. Beauty without simplicity would not be attractive; many an object is beautiful in itself, and when associated with others its beauty may be enhanced or detracted from, depending upon the colors of the objects placed in contact with it. How often do we see a beautiful bed of tulips, say a bright scarlet variety, and in the immediate vicinity a glaring yellow, with no sort of introduction to each other! Each bed, effective as it would be by itself, loses over half of its beauty by coming in direct contact with the other. Again, take a specimen plant of any of our native trees, bring it in close contact with other trees and how much of the beauty is lost. How grand and majestic appear some of our native oaks, lindens and elms when standing alone and how inferior they appear when grouped with other trees of the same variety.

"Simplicity without beauty would show a lack of taste. What can be more pleasing to the eye than to see nature's beautiful colors all harmonizing, none more conspicuous than the other and each showing itself to the best advantage. Again we cannot omit harmony. It is difficult to say which one of the three principles can be omitted in laying out the surroundings of a residence without causing an eye-sore spot in the general view. Follow the dictates of nature wherever and whenever possible. Even in this a gardener may go to the extremes and try to make a house on a twenty-five-foot lot appear as though it was situated in a forest of native shrubs and trees. We frequently see a little lot so completely filled with plants that not a square foot of lawn is visible, and where all colors, beautiful as they may be in themselves, become completely submerged in the vast quantity of them."

Here Mr. Retzer severely criticised the decorative work of the public parks, especially Lincoln Park, Chicago, and, deprecating the prominence there given to inartistic buildings, he continued: "Architecture and landscape gardening are two distinct arts, but where we have one we frequently meet with the other. Perhaps that is the reason why you so frequently see the name of landscape architect. Architects they may be, but landscape gardeners never. Alas, the architects who are landscape gardeners are very few. It will never do for an architect to even try to practice his art upon a bit of turf. His sharp and angular lines are just the ones we must avoid in landscaping. Nature's beautiful flowing curves are the ones most attractive. Avoid all sharpness in lines and angles. Have nature lines to all your beds. In selecting your colors for a bed take only such as will harmonize. Never under any circumstances place together two primary colors; avoid planting red and yellow or blue in close proximity without the necessary relief between them. Pink in the center of a bed bordered by a scarlet will be heightened and the border's brightness reduced. Any of the colors which nature has given us can be used to good advantage. One must just know where and how to use them."

Commenting on aquatic gardening, Mr. Retzer advocated the planting of appropriate decorative borders around the ponds, which should be, preferably, of irregular outline and in a location as natural as possible. He favored soil bottoms, with frequent and regular changes of water, and stated that good drainage will act as a preventative of the diseases to which aquatics in stagnent ponds are subject. With an abundant supply of water, large overflow pipes properly placed will carry off much of the detrimental dust and insect life which would otherwise accumulate on the surface of the water. For occasional use—in cleaning, renewing the soil, etc., when it is necessary to empty the ponds—it was recommended that a large drainage pipe, with convenient trap, be located at the deepest part.

CARNATIONS.

CULTIVATION OF THE SOIL.

In times of drought prepare for rain; if you can't get it from the clouds, draw on the reserve supply in your soil by constant cultivation. This constant cultivation which I advocate will get your field into such a condition that the first rain that comes will be eagerly taken up by the soil and made use of, instead of running off, as would be the case if the soil were dry and hard.

A dust-dry surface is not often dry to any depth, as the dust acts as a mulch and has little or no power to draw moisture from the bottom soil by capillary attraction. A soil with a good dust mulch loses its moisture only through the plants growing in it and this moisture working from the roots to the outer surface of the leaves builds up and strengthens the tissue and cells necessary to the good health of the carnation. This cultivation would naturally keep all of the weeds down, and that is quite as important as is the cultivating in itself. In dry weather every weed should be looked upon as a robber, for the moisture that passes from the soil through the weeds is just that much loss to the carnation plants.

Worse than weeds, worse than almost anything, is to allow the surface of the soil to become hard and dry, as in this case there is created a capillary attraction between the top soil and the bottom that takes the moisture out through the surface of the soil instead of sending it all through the plants. This double loss of moisture through capillary attraction and that taken up by the plants dries the soil out to such an extent that the carnations suffer even by a slight drought and are almost ruined by an extended one. To get this well fixed in our minds and to fully appreciate the loss to our carnations by such a condition we must remember that it is a natural law for water to move by capillary attraction from a loose soil into a hard one. This then, should fix in our minds the necessity of having the surface of our soil loose, so that what moisture there is in the soil will remain there until used up by the plants.

These rules apply to the greenhouses quite as well as to outdoor culture and the grower who wants to grow cut carnations all summer will also want to stir up the soil between the plants occasionally so that they get the benefit of the heavy waterings needed at this season of the year. If the surface of the beds or benches is allowed to become dry and hard the loss of water through soil evaporation and the extra quantities needed by the plants in the hot weather makes it almost impossible to supply the amount to get the best results.

Benches that are so thickly planted that the growth prevents getting at the soil should have a thinning out, so that the soil can be stirred up several times during the summer, that is if they are intended for summer cut flowers and you want the flowers to be on the top as to quality, and this last point is quite as important for summer flowers as for winter ones. ALBERT M. HERR.

CARNATION MRS. POTTER PALMER.

Some great things have come out of the west and it is no more than fitting that the carnation which so good a judge as James Hartshorne considers to outclass all the varieties now highest in popular esteem should be named for the leading lady of Chicago and the west, and the representative of her sex upon the United States commission to the Paris Exposition, Mrs. Potter Palmer. This bright scarlet newcomer is a seedling, the result of a cross between Jubilee and Chicago, or Red Mrs. Geo. M. Bradt. Mr. Hartshorne raised it in the private greenhouses of H. N. Higinbotham at Joliet, Ill., in the winter of 1897-98. In speaking of it he says: "It is ideal in form, color, stem and freedom of bloom and I do not know of any carnation that can be compared with it in all its points with the exception of size, although all the flowers measure over three inches." It has already been certificated by the Chicago Florists' Club and that after having been exposed to frost, which put the blooms at a disadvantage as to point-scoring. The variety is said to be an extraordinary keeper.

ROSES.

MILDEW ON AMERICAN BEAUTY.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Every spring after I stop firing I am troubled with mildew on my American Beauties. I never have any trouble with it while firing and the fire is kept going as long as the outside temperature is below 60°. How can I prevent the mildew this spring? My plants at present are in a fine healthy condition, free from mildew and every other disease. KANSAS.

Mildew may be prevented by leaving air on the houses continually after discontinuing fire heat; it will not only prevent mildew but the roses will be of better quality. The main cause of mildew is a damp, stagnated atmosphere; ventilation day and night does away with this; of course only a little air is required during the night but just as soon as the sun strikes the house in the morning the ventilators should be opened wider, gradually increasing the same till all are wide open. JOHN N. MAY.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES NOT BLOOMING.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I grow American Beauties and they throw shoots eight to ten feet high, producing but few buds and most of these deformed. Would be glad to know the cause and remedy? I have thought the coils underneath the benches might afford too much bottom heat. What stock would you recommend for grafting American Beauty? I would like to try it in this way on a small scale. R. W.

Many growers have the trouble with American Beauty which this correspondent describes, excepting the deformed buds, which must be due to some local cause, probably thrips. These little pests are often very troublesome in fall and spring; continued fumigating is about the only safe remedy when they are numerous. The piping under the benches is no cause of the trouble unless the pipes are unduly heated and close to the under side of the benches. The best stock for grafting American Beauties is the Manetti, but most growers who have tried this variety grafted claim there is no superiority in them.

JOHN N. MAY.

House and Soil for Carnations and Roses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please advise me as to the best way to lay out and pipe my carnation and rose house. It will be 20 or 24x120 feet and will run east and west. I want to devote about forty feet to roses, with a glass partition to separate them from the carnations. What kind of soil would you advise for each? I can get sod and cow manure, sheep manure and clay, also heavy black soil from the bank of a river which overflows each spring. D. O. P.

The part of the house for roses should be nearest the boiler, as that division should have about one-eighth more heating surface than the carnation division. The correspondent does not state whether he proposes to use steam or hot water for heating but presuming that he intends to use hot water, he should put two-thirds of the piping on the two sides with a little the most on the north side, and the remaining one-third distributed through the center of the house. For the division devoted to roses one 2-inch return additional on each side should be sufficient to maintain the difference in temperature required between the roses and carnations. If the house is to be twenty-four feet wide it will require twelve 2-inch pipes for the roses and ten for the carnations, all of which can be placed under the benches. A twenty-four-foot house can be laid out with two walks, one on each side of the house two feet wide, four benches each three feet nine inches wide, and three walks dividing the same, eighteen inches wide. This allows free access to all the plants from all sides. This, of course, is estimated for an even-span house. If it is decided to reduce the width of the house to twenty feet there will be one bench less in width, or the two outside benches, if preferred, may be placed next to the sides and made about two feet nine inches wide. This makes one less center walk than by the other method. The center benches would of course be somewhat different in width, which is easy to figure out, when the width of the house is finally decided upon. Regarding soil, the same that will grow good roses will do equally well for carnations. Good sod with an addition of one-third or one-fourth good cow manure will probably be much the safer. JOHN N. MAY.

Our engraving illustrates a portion of the summer bedding which formed such an attractive feature of Humboldt Park, Chicago, last year. The accompanying diagram shows the exact form of the beds and borders and the decorative materials employed are indicated by numbers as follows: 1, Corypha australis; 2, Coleus Golden Bedder; 3, Lobelia fulgens; 4, Alternanthera versicolor; 5, Santolina incana; 6, Mesembryanthemum cordifolium variegatum; 7, Alternanthera paronychioides major; 8, Alternanthera amœna; 9, Lobelia compacta; 10, Dracæna indivisa. 11, Alyssum variegatum; 12, echeverias and shells; 13, thuja; 14, Oxalis tropæoloides; 15, nierembergias, 16, Begonia Erfordia; 17, Phœnix reclinata; 18, Alternanthera aurea nana; 19, Thymus variegatus; 20, agaves in vases; 21, Leucophyton Brownii; 22, Centaurea candidissima.

More About Heating.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have a house 20x50 feet, twelve feet to the ridge, which I wish to heat for general stock, affording a temperature of about 55° to 60° at night. The system is hot water and the boiler is to stand on a level with the greenhouse floor. For flows I want to use two 2-inch pipes and 1¼-inch for returns. I intend to run the two flows overhead. How many returns will be needed? NEW YORK.

It is not best to try to heat a house of this size with less than three 2-inch pipes and four would give better satisfaction. With four 2-inch flow pipes fourteen 1¼-inch returns will be necessary, but ten 2-inch returns would give a better circulation unless it is run under pressure. If the boiler will stand the pressure it will be well to connect the water pipes with the boiler and run with the valve open, thus doing away with an expansion tank. If you cannot sink the boiler carry the returns as high as possible.

Hydrangeas Producing Staminate Flowers.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Our hydrangeas have all developed staminate flowers with only a few neutrals acting as rays for the heads; they did the same last year. After flowering we dry off the plants, cut them back and plant out in full sunshine, giving plenty of water. The plants are taken up and potted before frost and placed underneath the benches in a cool house until it is time to give them full exposure to light. In summer they made fine growth and are now very handsome plants with large heads of bloom. Manure was not applied at any time. We wish to know whether our treatment was wrong or whether some plants persist in their evil ways?

SUMMER BEDDING IN HUMBOLDT PARK, CHICAGO, IN 1899.

Our cuttings of last year gave us the same kind of blooms as the old plants.

E. V. C.

I do not think there is anything which can be done to bring out more sterile flowers on these plants. To understand the case, we must remember that this hydrangea is but a sport, or supposed sport, from H. Japonica, a wild Japanese species. All sports have a constant tendency to revert to their original type, or if not a tendency, a liability to do so, and Hydrangea Hortensia is no exception. I do not think anything in the treatment has any influence on it. The origin of sports has never been determined, neither has it why they show a tendency to return to the originals.

This correspondent should throw out his stock and get in other plants well provided with sterile flowers, as it is safe to say culture or treatment have nothing to do with the production of neutral flowers. The common Californian privet, Ligustrum ovalifolium, has a sport bearing golden leaves, and those who have it know how persistently it tries to get back to its green state. Every season it has to be watched, and there are always a great many green shoots to be cut out. Left to itself the golden foliage would entirely disappear in a few years.

I had not noticed the reverting tendency in hydrangeas, but doubtless this is what is the cause of the degeneracy (?) the correspondent complains of, and I know of no other means of combating it than that prescribed above.

LAST WEEK A RECORD BREAKER AS TO HEAT AND DULLNESS.—THE PAST FEW DAYS SEE SOME IMPROVEMENT.—A STEREOPTICON LECTURE.—A BIG WEDDING IN THORLEY'S HANDS.—VISITORS FROM "THE OTHER SIDE."

The past week was a record breaker in two respects; it was the hottest week in May that New York has ever experienced, 90° in the shade being the average; it was the dullest week for business ever known in the "street." Flowers arrived in an almost useless condition, and $2.50 per thousand for roses was rather the rule than the exception, and if it had not been for the steamer trade, the dealers might as well have shut up shop. This week, with cooler weather, prices have stiffened somewhat, but the qualities of stock show the severe drubbing of last week and there is much mildew. With Decoration day close at hand the last spurt of the season will soon be over and another summer with all its attending desuetude will be upon us.

Cornelius Van Brunt delivered an entertaining and very instructive lecture on May 19, at the Museum of the Botanical Garden at Bedford Park. Over 100 colored stereopticon slides showing wild flowers and rural scenery were used. The next lecture will be on June 21, when Prof. E. S. Burgess will talk on the "Fairy Lore of Flowers."

The event of the coming week in trade circles is to be the wedding of the daughter of Senator Clark, of Montana, to take place in this city, Monday, May 28. Chas. Thorley, we understand, is to do the work and as it is a carte-blanche order no doubt he will out-Thorley himself.

William Fell, of the firm of William Fell & Co., Hexham, England, is paying a visit to this country. We believe it is his initial visit and wish him a pleasant and successful journey.

J. I. Raynor is handling the first asters of the season.

MARKET HEAVILY OVERSTOCKED AND LITTLE RELIEF IN SIGHT.—OUTDOOR FLOWERS RIGHT IN LINE FOR MEMORIAL PURPOSES.—WEEKLY SHOWS ARE ON ONCE MORE —SOME GOOD THINGS ON DISPLAY. —TREE PLANTING AND ITS CRITICS.—MOTH HUNTER RESIGNS.

Heavy receipts of flowers and light demand all through last week forced an accumulation on this market such as is rarely experienced here. Rainy weather prevailed, also, and this shut out the street fakirs as buyers, making the situation exceedingly discouraging for the wholesalers. This condition of overstock is likely to continue until Decoration day, until which time there is no probability of any revival in business. The season is such that outdoor flowers promise to be unusually abundant, lilacs, lily of the valley, hawthorns, etc., being exactly in it as to date this time. The effect of this will be to keep values down generally and while lilies and carnations will, no doubt, take a good jump, as usual at Decoration day, there seems but little reason and less opportunity to advance prices beyond recent regular quotations. The advance sale of dried and artificial material is rather slow but the quality of this kind of stock offered is much better than usual and it is more artistically arranged than in the past.

The weekly Saturday shows at Horticultural Hall have begun. On May 19 there was a very attractive display, although the season is somewhat later than usual. Wm. Sim's improved candytuft attracted much attention and was awarded a certificate of merit. Stems four feet high and flower heads four to six inches in length are not usually seen in candytufts. A certificate of merit was given to Arthur Hunnewell for superior cultivation of Schizanthus pinnatus, of which three large plants were shown, and a silver medal went to H. H. Hunnewell for superior cultivation of Cattleya Skinnerii and C. Mossiæ, of which profusely flowered specimens were shown. The Blue Hill Nursery Co. made a nice display of herbaceous flowers, Ed. Powell, gardener to W. J. Clemsen, staged a fine collection of tulips, carnations and promiscuous flowers. F. O. Willard showed stocks and snapdragons, and Mrs. Gill a variety of cut flowers. Morphixia longiflora and M. longiflora rosea from Dr. Weld, both unfamiliar to the visitors to these exhibitions, were very interesting.

A large number of young trees, stated to be 1650, have recently been planted on Boston Common. This is, in part, attributable to the persistent criticism with which the newspapers have been filled for some time, but evidently does not fill the bill, for the critics are still finding fault with the selection, the manner of planting, etc., one correspondent of the Transcript advocating the placing of the Common and Public Garden in charge of Japanese gardeners.

E. H. Forbush, field director of the gypsy moth committee of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture, has resigned his position, owing to the delay and uncertainty in connection with gypsy moth legislation.

The lilacs are in bloom at the Arnold Arboretum and attract throngs of visitors. The grounds throughout look finer this season than ever before.

N. F. McCarthy reports unprecedented demand for all kinds of spring plant stock and a decided shortage in the supply. Prices at auction are exceedingly favorable to the grower this year.

Fred. Dawson is seriously ill with pleurisy at his home in Jamaica Plain.

The first water lilies of the season have made their appearance in Galvin's window.

RETAIL TRADE IS INACTIVE.—USUAL SPRING CONDITIONS PREVAIL.—BEAUTY SUPPLY GREATLY REDUCED.—ONLY TIGHT BUDS OBTAINABLE.— PÆONIES PLENTIFUL.—MEMORIAL TRADE LIGHT.—CRAIGS' NEW ROSES.—IMPORTATIONS WHICH PROMISE GREAT THINGS.

Store business is slow, as it usually is the third week of May. Still, while the demand is light, there does not seem to be any great overstock, as the shipments are cut down considerably, the growers not paying much attention to the crops at present, being too busy preparing their houses for next season. The Beauty supply has fallen of to one-half or one-third of what it was two weeks ago and the quality has retrograded in about the same ratio. The best stock can now be bought for $1.50 per dozen. Why do they cut the buds so tight? Most of the Beauties now look like extra long-stemmed Gontiers. No amount of talking seems to make any difference, for they continue to come in the same way each day and have to be kept two or three days to be salable. Carnations are still good, Ethel Crocker leading them all for color, size of flower, stem and other good qualities, besides being cheap enough to handle in quantity. Ordinary kinds sell for 75 cents to $1; fancy, $1.50 to $2. Sweet peas are now in from the field and sell for 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred. Lily of the valley is in full supply at $3. Pæonies are now becoming plentiful; $4 to $5 per hundred is the price. Robt. Craig & Son have a fine lot, having purchased largely of the Pitcher & Manda stock when it was distributed. W. K. Harris and Jos. Heacock are also large growers of this flower. The next two weeks will see them at their height and a very welcome addition they will be, as orders are booked for a number of weddings the first week of June. The pæony will have the decorative feature of these events to itself, as nearly if not quite all the other large, showy flowers and blooming plants are out of the market. Decoration day trade does not amount to much in this city, except for quite a number of immortelle designs consisting of imitations of G. A. R. badges, flags, shields, guns, muskets or cannons and large "donations" of cut flowers that the various florists are expected to give to their patrons and others, who seem to think they should get them as a matter of course.

Robt. Craig & Son have just received an importation of fine bay laurels; they are choice specimens and should sell well. Two new roses are also to be seen here, one a coppery shade, something like the color of Mme. Capucine. It was raised in England, where it has caught the popular fancy to a degree not common with new things. It is called Sunrise and in vigor and in size of flower is much like the Perle des Jardins. It is also very fragrant. The other is called Killarney; it is a fine shade of pink, much the same as Caroline Testout, but is said to be a great improvement on this beautiful variety. It is of Irish origin, from the home of the Liberty, at Dickson's. Mr. Craig predicts a great sale for these two when their merits become known. K.

THE MARKET TAKES A BRACE.—STOCKS SHORTEN MATERIALLY AND QUALITIES IMPROVE.—PROSPECTS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.—PAPERS, COAL AND OTHER MATTERS.—BIG BUSINESS IN CARNATION CUTTINGS.—HARTSHORNE IS HAPPY.—BUILDING OPERATIONS HERE AND THERE.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

The cool weather of the week, combined with the fact that low prices have caused many growers to throw out their old stock, has brought about a much needed reduction of supply and the market has assumed a much more nearly normal tone. There is still plenty of stock in most lines but long Beauties are scarce and good roses and first grade carnations are none too plentiful although qualities, while still inferior, are somewhat improved. The shipping trade has picked up noticeably and local demand shows signs of life, with the result that pretty nearly everything is selling for what it is worth. Of course the garden flowers are hurting the sale of indoor stock to some extent but there promises to be no great quantities of outdoor material about for Memorial day, so that roses and carnations should meet with fair sale for that occasion. In fact, a great many Memorial day orders are now on file and the aggregate promises to be all that can be reasonably expected. The indications point to considerable supplies in some lines which are not usually procurable at the last of May, Harrisii for instance, and as to prices the wholesalers are very generally duplicating last year's list.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club was fairly well attended. Walter Retzer's paper on the planting of home grounds turned out to be more of a criticism of present methods in park planting than the title would imply, and in the discussion which followed the blame for most park defects was properly charged to politics. W. N. Rudd, chairman of the committee on co-operative coal purchase, requested that all the florists in and around Chicago send him full particulars concerning their last year's coal supplies, including the kind of coal used and the quantity, so as to place him in a position to talk business with the coal merchants. The committee on transportation to the S. A. F. convention at New York next August reported progress and issued a statement to the trade press which will be found on page 1328 of this issue. A query from the question box, developed the fact that at least one grower of specimen chrysanthemum plants in this vicinity is finding it impossible to prevent large plants from blooming prematurely. None of the members present could satisfactorily account for the phenomenon. It was understood that W. L. Palinsky will read a paper at the next meeting, which will be held June 1.

Andreas Simon, of the Staats-Zeitung informs us that he intends visiting the bulb growing district on Bellingham Bay, Whatcom county, Washington, about July 1. Several local friends in the trade have expressed a desire to accompany him, including Edward Kanst, of Washington Park, Charles Stromback, of Lincoln Park, J. Jensen of Humboldt Park, and John Degnan, of Vaughan's Seed Store. Mr. Simon assures us that C. X. Larrabee and T. C. Canfield, of Fairhaven, Wash., will take good care of all visitors. Very advantageous rates have been secured for this trip and Mr. Simon will be pleased to furnish all prospective participants with full particulars.

J. D. Thompson has returned from New York. He is more than pleased with the business the Chicago Carnation Company has done in rooted cuttings this season, the gross sales exceeding 300,000, and he has it from Thomas Galvin that their orders for cuttings of Mrs. Lawson exceed by 600 those of the next largest buyer of this famous variety. The Carnation Company shipped an order of cuttings to Austria one day this week.

James Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., is the happy father of another son, who arrived May 20. Mrs. Hartshorne and the baby are both well. It is Mr. Hartshorne's intention to visit Europe this summer, starting about July 1, and covering the Paris Exposition and many important horticultural points in England.

Adolph Poehlmann has secured land six blocks north of his brothers' range at Morton Grove and is preparing to build six houses 27x250 feet. George M. Garland has the contract and of course the iron gutter is to be used throughout.

Miss L. Hudson, Lily Cohrs on the stage, daughter of J. M. Hudson, of St. Louis, is in town this week with the Castle Square Opera Company at the Studebaker. Miss Hudson reports her father's health much improved.

Albert Fuchs sails from New York to-day via the Hamburg-American Line, for a protracted stay in Europe, returning only to place his boys in school at Notre Dame; he says he will then go around the world.

Peter Reinberg's salesroom is being modernized and somewhat enlarged and the Wietor Brothers are fixing up a bit, having made a three years' lease running from the first of this month.

E. H. Hunt, who has a nice line of high-handled willow baskets, says that they are selling well in the country but that as yet there is no sign of commencement business among the city florists.

George Reinberg will put in two new boilers this year and perfect his heating plant. He is going into fancy carnations next fall and is making every preparation to grow them to perfection.

Three 100-foot greenhouses at Mt. Greenwood Cemetery will be rebuilt this season. Mr. Rudd will use the Garland gutter, and concrete for the walls and arched bench supports.

Bassett & Washburn report a stringency in the labor market. They say that they are falling behind in their outdoor work because of their inability to get laborers at $1.75 per diem.

G. H. Pieser is at home from West Baden feeling equal to the task of paying growers once a week or every day if need be.

Wietor Bros. are still selling pot plants of American Beauty in bloom. They went well at Easter.

The many friends of W. E. Lynch will be pleased to learn that his health is much improved.

TRADE IS BETTER.—COOL WEATHER VERY WELCOME.—SEVERAL GOOD DECORATIONS.—MYSTIC SHRINERS IN CONVENTION.

Trade has improved somewhat since the Mystic Shriners have arrived in the city. The weather has been more seasonable for the last day or so and the cool nights are keeping back some of the outdoor flowers.

Senator and Mrs. Gear gave an excellent dinner May 16, at the Portland, in honor of the Iowa delegation in congress. The dining room was elaborately decorated with plants and the mirror rests and mantels were banked with adiantum surmounted by vases of American Beauty roses. The center piece for the table was in the shape of a star made of Liberty and Meteor roses, the points of lily of the valley.

Representative William Connell, of Pennsylvania, was host, May 17, at a dinner to the Pennsylvania delegation in congress. The tables in the banquet hall at the Shoreham, at which fifty covers were placed, were tastefully spread with adiantum fronds and sweet peas. The principal piece, at the head of the table, was of American Beauty roses and white lilacs. Along the table were smaller pieces, two of Bridesmaid roses and blue cornflowers, one of Bride roses and sweet peas and at the foot of the table was a large one of Bougainvillea glabra. Both decorations were by J. H. Small & Sons.

A. Gude & Bro. had the decorations for the reception hall at the National Rifles' Armory and at the Columbia theatre, the place of meeting of the Mystic Shriners. At the banquet to the Mystic Shriners at the Riggs House covers were laid for 250 guests. The decorations were very elaborate. This was also by Small & Sons. P. G.

LABOR TROUBLES CONTINUE TO THROTTLE TRADE.—PRICES ON GRAND AVENUE.—SEEN AMONG THE NUMEROUS RETAIL STORES.

The situation in this city remains practically the same as reported last week. More street cars are being run each day, under police protection, but the end of the strike is apparently as far away as when it first went into effect. The result is that business is poor, and a great deal of stock is going to waste. Prices on and around Grand avenue range as follows: Beauties, $5 to $8; mixed roses, $1 to $1.50; carnations, 35 cents to 75 cents; pæonies, 50 cents to 75 cents; white stocks, $1; sweet peas, 15 cents and centaurea, 15 cents to 25 cents. Down town the prices vary, but in almost all cases are lower than the above.

Among other varieties of carnations seen at Waldbart's is a fine lot of General Gomez, which make a rich and most attractive display.

The front of Young & Sons' store has been one mass of young plants, including several vegetables, Allegheny hollyhocks at 20 cents each, petunias at $1 a dozen, and many others.

Fred. Foster's place is made attractive this week by many large vases of pink and red pæonies.

F. W. Maas, with the Plant Seed Co., is happy in the recent arrival at his home of a baby girl.

Bunches of sweet peas edged with blue centaurea are finding ready sale. M.

TRADE NOT BRISK BUT LITTLE SURPLUS ACCUMULATES.—BEAUTIES IN DEMAND.—WHAT THE GROWERS ARE DOING.

Trade has been rather slow for the past week. There is a good demand for long-stemmed Beauties, but tea roses and carnations sell only fairly well. Funeral work has kept down the surplus of stock although flowers are plentiful. All the spring flowers are cut and sweet peas, pansies and marguerites take their place. Prices on cut flowers are keeping up well for this time of the year. Good Beauties retail at $5 per dozen, tea roses $1.50 and carnations 50 cents per dozen.

The Park Floral Co. is making some very fine window decorations and they are well appreciated by the public.

Mrs. R. Mauff is cutting some good Beauties and Glauber & Webb are cutting some fine Brides, Bridesmaids and Woottons.

Fred. Hall is cutting sweet peas by the thousands. All kinds of bedding plants are selling well this spring. DENVER.

JEWETT CITY, CONN.—A. A. Young, Jr., is preparing to erect a carnation house 36x108 feet which shall include all the latest improvements. He has placed the order for the iron frame construction with Lord & Burnham, Irvington, N. Y. Mr. Young will also erect a central boiler plant to heat his entire range.

EXCELLENT CALCEOLARIAS AT FOREST HOME.—THE FORSYTHIA IN FAVOR.—A WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT.—TRADE NOT HEAVY.—NOTES

One of the finest displays ever seen here has been the calceolarias grown by James McGregor at Forest Home Cemetery. Many of the flowers were as large as a fifty-cent piece. The colorings can hardly be described. When looking at them, one is at a loss to know why azaleas are so popular at $1 to $2 each and these plants so little seen in stores. William Freytag, I think, is the only commercial florist in this city who has grown a creditable lot.

Announcement of the marriage of C. E. Newbury, of Mitchell, S. D., to Jessie E. Fulford, of Kimball, S. D., has been received. We hope to have a like item to record about one of our Milwaukee boys before another month.

This spring has added much favor to the reputation of the forsythia as a decorative shrub, both for growing upright and training over walls in almost any situation.

You can get all the ordinary cut flowers you want now at quite reasonable prices. Parrot tulips have been in evidence lately and are appreciated.

Frank Dilger has marketed his usual supply of Spanish iris and ixias, both of which sold well.

One of the best delivery wagons is run by E. Haarsh.

Syracuse, N. Y.

The storm of wind and hail which swept through the Onondaga valley on May 17 did a great amount of damage other than that to greenhouse establishments, although they of course were the most vulnerable of structures. Henry Burt estimates his loss in glass at 1,500 lights and one house is almost a complete wreck. Henry Morris was fortunate in escaping with the fracture of about 400 lights and the loss of some stock. L. A. Guillaume lost 1,000 panes at his Salina street place, but at his range in the valley he escaped untouched although the damage was all about him. L. E. Marquisee had 800 lights of glass broken but his principal loss was in his carnation field, where he had 60,000 plants exposed to the pelting ice.

The market gardeners all report more or less damage to their greenhouses and crops. W. J. Park suffers the loss of about 1,000 panes of glass in his greenhouse, beside damage to vegetation. George B. Harper was a heavy loser, and T. K. Gibbs had 200 lights of glass broken. Reports from the storm-stricken region show that the damage to the growing crops will be very heavy.

LOWELL, MASS.—Oakes Ames, assistant director of the Harvard Botanic Garden, was married on May 15 to Miss Blanche Ames, granddaughter of the late General B. F. Butler.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The meeting of the reorganized horticultural society at J. N. Champion's on the evening of May 14 brought together a very gratifying attendance. A full board of officers was elected, including Eli Whitney, president; Robt. Veitch, Jr., secretary; S. H. Moore, treasurer; ten vice-presidents and a board of managers, consisting of thirteen members with J. N. Champion, chairman. It was voted to hold an exhibition of strawberries and roses some time during the month of June.

IT is probable that no previous season has seen such large sales of dormant roses.

AGAIN this season there comes a demand for English ivies, for window boxes and similar purposes, which exceeds the supply.

IN our issue of May 19 it was stated that the late C. F. Baker was a member of the S. A. F. We now find that Mr. Baker was not a member.

THE Howard & Wilson Pub. Co., of Chicago, publishers of Farm, Field and Stockman, made an assignment May 16. It is understood the paper will be continued.

THE production of American window glass does not now exceed 50,000 boxes per week and will cease for three months June 15 unless the blowers agree to a proposition to prolong the fire two weeks.

Bromeliads as Floral Receptacles.

ED. AM. In defense of the east, I beg to state that as long ago as 1890 W. A. Manda used bromeliads in this way to great advantage at the exhibition held by Pitcher & Manda in Madison Square Garden, New York.

Pan-American Exposition Notes.

The past two weeks have brought about considerable changes in the landscape work of the grounds. Many hundreds of large trees, mostly maples, elms, poplars and horse chestnuts, have been brought to the grounds and planted. The lake connecting the canals is about completed and the banks planted with a large assortment of shrubs. In the music garden have been planted several thousand hardy roses in masses of 500 of one variety. Two thousand of these are an exhibit by Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, N. Y. With the careful planting they have received and the heavy enriched loan they are in they should make a splendid show in 1901. Rudolph Ulrich, the landscape gardener, is the busiest of men. The grounds surrounding the service or administration building are seeded, sodded and planted and have already a most finished appearance. Work is progressing rapidly on all the most important buildings.

OBITUARY.

MRS. HARRIET SNYDER.

Mrs. Harriet Snyder passed away this week at her home at Grandville, Mich., upon the one-hundredth anniversary of her birth. She was the grandmother of L. C. Lincoln.

LOUIS DONNELLY.

An accidental death has overtaken another of Rochester's florists, Louis Donnelly, of Donnelly Bros., who have their glass at Charlotte. Mr. Donnelly had started for New York on business, Saturday, May 19, and the next day his lacerated remains were found beside the railroad track near Newark, N. Y. The young man, for he was only 35 years of age, once worked for the Jackson & Perkins Co., and it is presumed that he left the train at Rochester for the purpose of calling upon his old employers. He was well liked in the trade and is spoken of as one who had a bright future before him. He and his brother William had a good business, handed down to them by their father, who established it years ago. Recently they had grown bedding plants principally and were in the midst of their greatest prosperity. Mr. Donnelly had never married.

HERKIMER, N. Y.—James Barclay is making extensive alterations in his range of houses, thoroughly modernizing the establishment.

MANCHESTER BY THE SEA, MASS.—W. J. Stewart addressed the North Shore Horticultural Society on Friday evening, May 18, his subject being "My Garden." Mr. Stewart and F. L. Mathison were guests of H. Thiemann, gardener at the seaside cottage of Senator McMillan.

ADDRESS

W. A. HAMMOND,
107 East Broad St.,
Richmond, Va.

New Haven, Conn.

Trade remains about the same, with the announcement of some large June weddings. Cut flowers seem to hold on pretty well, the demand for good stock being about equal to the supply. The plantsmen are very busy at the present time, bedding out and getting ready for Memorial day. This has been a rather late season, there having been a very heavy frost on May 10, doing a good deal of damage to small fruit trees and the like.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Champion have returned from a trip to Boston and Providence.

John H. Slocombe intends erecting two new violet houses this summer 12x150.

Recent visitors: Mr. Cheesman, representing Vaughan's Seed Store; C. S. Van Waveren, of Segers Bros., Holland; J. Austin Shaw and Mrs. Shaw, New York.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

VISITED CHICAGO: Robert Livingston, of A. W. Livingston's Sons, Columbus, Ohio.

THE Plant Seed Co., St. Louis, reports the season better than for several years past.

PROSPECTS are bright for a good meeting of the American Seed Trade Association in Chicago June 12 to 14.

WE understand that a new seed establishment, employing 200 hands, is to be located at Paradise, Lancaster county, Pa.

ROBERT W. CLUCAS, of the firm of Clucas & Boddington Co., sailed for Europe May 19 per S. S. Etruria for an extended business trip, and incidentally to see the Paris Exposition.

SOUTH FRANCE, May 5.—The drought of the past sixty days has been very severe on the seed crops. Unless we have rain before the end of the month a great part of the carrots, beets, sweet peas, etc., will be destroyed.

FIFIELD, MICH.—The seed house of Harry N. Hammond was destroyed by fire May 20. The loss is estimated at $35,000; insurance, $18,000. Insurance to the amount of $18,000 was canceled two weeks previous to the fire, the origin of which is unknown. Hammond will rebuild.

ERFURT, May 8.—So far the weather has not been favorable for field work. Winter set in about the middle of September with heavy snow and sharp frost which remained with little change until the beginning of April. The weather then became extremely hot and for this reason but little has been planted, much of that planted perishing.

Free Seeds Not Enough.

A western congressman recently received the following note from one of his rural constituents to whom he had sent a consignment of garden seed: "Kind sir and esteemed friend, I have the seeds, They came this morning and suit very well. specially the cabbage seed which grows well in this soil. please send me two loads of fertiliser and a new harrer and if you could send me a man for a couple of days I would be obliged. With this help I know the garden stuff will turn out al rite and I will send some to you and the president. Your grateful well wisher and Supportre." — Newspaper Clipping.

WANTED.

Experienced seedsman to take full charge of vegetable and flower seed department of western seed house. Good salary and position for right man. Must be able to furnish first-class references. Address immediately, giving full particulars,

"Western," care Am. Florist, Chicago, Ill.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
W. J. PETERS, Pres.; D. S. LAKE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

PROF. S. W. FLETCHER, of Cornell University, in his experiments at crossing, has found that blossoms covered with manila sacks seldom develop perfect fruit. He recommends cheese cloth sacks.

R. DOUGLAS'S SONS, of Waukegan, Ill., who have one of the largest collections of evergreens in the country, have presented Prof. John Craig with a number of specimens of varieties lacking in the collection on the grounds of the Iowa Agricultural College at Ames.

Japanese Maples.

At the close of May there are no more attractive shrubs on the lawn than the Japanese maples, and especially is this true of two of them, the old blood-leaved Acer polymorphum atropurpureum, and the cut-leaved purple, A. polymorphum dissectum atropurpureum. These are both "blood-leaved" and make a grand display for several weeks, after which there is less depth of color, but still enough the whole season through to make them worthy of their name.

Looking at some of these plants to-day I was reminded of how long it takes for many plants to become appreciated. These maples are to-day but fairly well known, yet, to my knowledge, they have been in at least one nursery in this country for over thirty-five years. About Philadelphia they are well distributed, and they are much prized, as they present a mass of color on the lawn when but little else is obtainable in the same line. Rhododendrons flower about the time the maples are in good display, but there are but few of them of the same rich red color.

The two sorts named above are the best for dark red foliage. The green-leaved variety will be required in a collection, as its leaves are finer than the fern-leaved beech. The leaves of A. Japonicum aureum are divided but little. The color is greenish yellow at first, deepening as the season advances until finally of a rich golden hue. A. reticulatum is green and white, not an attractive sort when by itself, but having a place when a group of different sorts is being formed. A. ampelopsilobum and A. cristatum are of a deep bronze green and are very handsome either by themselves or planted with others.

There are various other sorts all having some merit, but the one for the nurseryman and the florist to look to for the best result is the common blood-leaved variety. It took a good while for nurserymen to get up a good stock of this sort, but by layering and grafting it is now increased more rapidly, bringing the possession of them within the means of all that own a garden.

These maples are not difficult to transplant, even after having pushed into growth in spring. But it will be found to pay those who have them to sell to pot a few in the fall or early spring, fall preferably, to fill late orders for them. To many persons they are unknown, and it is only after the plants are full of fresh foliage that they are seen and desired, and then it is that the pot plant sells. A moderately shaded place on the lawn suits these plants, though they do very well in the full sun, especially if the roots are kept cool by being in grass or by being mulched. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Pastimes at Quakertown.

A new club has been formed among the Philadelphia bowlers. The "Friday-Nighters" is the name of the new organization; a new president is elected every week; it seems a sort of South American way of doing but is said to work all right. Large or small scores are all the same to these sixth-day bowlers, their object being to have a good time. They selected an off night on the alleys so as not to be disturbed. G. C. Watson is the Chief Mogul and says their Friday night seances are simply "out of sight."

The struggle for place on the New York team goes on merrily. Anderson put up an average of 168 in four games last Tuesday and the other top-notchers are not far behind him. The two-man team handicap tournament will start soon and some fine rolling is expected.

Anderson won first place in the gun club's tournament of last Tuesday at the Wissinoming grounds, for the Westcott medal, breaking twenty-four targets out of twenty-five at known and unknown angles and sixteen doubles out of twenty.

Florists' Rules for Bowling.

Keep your ball well toward the center,
Rather slightly to the right,
Over twixt the first and second,
Ever keep this well in sight.
Send it down with force and judgment,
Curve it slightly if you can;
Have your mind set on the game, and
Each man strive to beat his man.
Lay aside your jokes and stories;
Lay away all kinds of cares,
Banish all your thoughts of flowers
Only think of "strikes and spares."
In shirt sleeves and bowling slippers,
Live a life of youth and mirth,
Ending then the game you'l vouchsafe,
"Rolling beats all games on earth."

CUT FLOWER TRADE DULL BECAUSE OF SUMMER.—GREAT PROFUSION OF OUTDOOR BLOOMS.—DOINGS OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Summer and the dull season travel hand in hand and arrived together. Not in many years have our gardens been adorned with such a profusion of bloom and of course it kills the trade in most lines of cut flowers. It seems that the roses have been particularly luxuriant with bloom, Marie Henriette excelling all others to such an extent as to nearly conceal the foliage. With all this wealth of flowers the sale of plants this spring has been heavy and prices have been profitable, particularly for good stock. The prospects are for a brisk business for some weeks, the demand turning particularly to roses.

At the May meeting of our horticultural society we were able to bestow two medals upon members as rewards for their displays at the State Fair. The one for commercial florists was awarded to E. Valdejo and the one for gardeners to Harry Papworth. They were well earned and their receipt was followed by refreshments of both a liquid and satisfying nature.

A committee has been appointed to make arrangements for the celebration of the approaching anniversary of the society. The organization is on a firm financial footing and can afford to give its members a good time.

Orange, N. J.

The distribution of 5,000 chrysanthemum plants to the public school children of the Oranges and Montclair took place on May 18. Besides these, 1000 salvias were distributed, having been donated by W. A. Manda, of South Orange. The plants distributed were donated by John N. May, W. A. Manda, Peter Duff, Malcolm MacRorie, George Smith, John Hayes, Popkin & Collins, A. D. Rose, J. C. Williams and John McGowan. A neat manual containing instructions on the care of chrysanthemums and suggestions for the beautifying of city dooryards was given out with the plants. The committee having the matter in charge was J. B. Davis, John Hayes and J. C. Williams. The committee, with the assistance of Malcolm MacRorie, divided the field and made a personal distribution of the plants among the school buildings. The area contains twenty-four school houses, which were visited.

Kennicott Bros. Co.

CHICAGO, May 26, 1900.

TO THE TRADE:

The Kennicott Bros. Company has done all that was possible in the way of making arrangements for a full supply of stock to meet your wants for Decoration Day, as we know it to be the largest day of the year; last year our Decoration Day business made a new record for us for one day's sales.

Knowing that trade has been better all along than it was a year ago, we have made arrangements, for meeting every possible demand. We have put aside plenty of Pæonies, more than 1000 dozen, and shall have the stock of one of the largest shippers of Jasmine buds, the grandiflora, at least 35,000, possibly 50,000. Our regular shippers are being notified of our needs and will, as usual, do all in their power to place the stock in our store in the best possible shape that this season of the year will allow, and we therefore expect to outdo our record day of last year.

It pays to buy of the Kennicott Bros. Company, as you can feel safe; sure of getting your order filled, and filled right. Regardless of what others say or advertise, our standard and motto is:

Buyers get the Chicago market price at time of shipment from the oldest, largest and most reliable cut flower commission house in the west.

Stock for Decoration Day will consist of plenty of common ferns, Adiantums, Harrisii, roses, carnations, daisies, some tulips, also asparagus and smilax, besides pæonies, jasmine buds and all other items of seasonable material.

Our price list appears on page 1335, of this issue, subject to change without notice, for of course we can't see into the future and, as above stated, all buyers will, and always do, get the Chicago market price, day of shipment, the same as though they bought over the counter. The best is always the cheapest and if you buy it of "K. Bros. Co." it is as good as is to be had.

Yours respectfully,

KENNICOTT BROS. CO.

THE GOOD & REESE CO., SPRINGFIELD, ...OHIO.

Omaha.

TRADE IS VERY GOOD AND PROSPERITY LEADS TO MUCH BUILDING.—NOTES OF MANY DOINGS.

The members of the trade in Omaha are all enjoying the high tide of prosperity. Business was never better than last winter and even now, when cut flowers are unusually plentiful, there is no surplus. Bedding plants have sold at a great rate since spring arrived and stock is already becoming scarce. The result of all this business is that nearly every one is planning to improve his facilities, either by building new houses or remodeling old ones.

Over at Council Bluffs J. F. Wilcox is putting up the largest addition in the west. A. Donaghue is preparing to rebuild a lot of his glass and put up several new houses. Lewis Henderson is rebuilding and adding one house. Peterson Bros. will build a house 20x100. Hess & Swoboda are rebuilding a house 18x80 and adding a palm house 14x100.

L. Henderson is rejoicing over the advent of a baby boy in his family and says the youngster is a mascot and has brought a boom to his business.

Charles Stewart, formerly of Chicago, has taken charge of the cut flower department of his brother, S. Stewart.

Arnold Ringier was in town last week and reports good business. GRIPPE.

Bangor, Me.

The spring season is somewhat backward, there having been several severe late frosts, aud the cold, damp, weather retards bulbous stock; still spring settings are for the most part out. Bedding stock has been selling slowly, but there is a good outlook. On the whole there is little to complain of.

Carl Beers has launched out as a horticultural auctioneer, something of a venture here, but results were satisfying enough to warrant his opening another store on the main street, which will be used as an auction and salesroom. Here he proposes to hold semi-weekly auctions of his own stock, as well as undertaking commission and brokerage business, whereby he will dispose of the stock of any and all who place such in his hands.

Beers is, without doubt, a great hustler. With at present 20,000 square feet of glass, he proposes building four more modern houses to be devoted entirely to roses and carnations. The heating will be hot water under pressure. He will also build in Houlton, Me. Salesmen will conduct sales this spring in all the larger towns of the eastern part of the state; he will thus enliven competition.

As to the other florists here, they are also hustlers. Adam Sekenger has done a bigger and better business than ever and a glance through his large and well ordered establishment shows all the facilities for a good trade. Mrs. Allen does a thriving business, though on a somewhat smaller scale than the two before mentioned.

Bangor and vicinity is one of the finest lacalities in the United States for the florists' business. It seems wonderful that a city of 30,000 people can support five florists with a total of probably 120,000 square feet of glass. V. V.

HOPKINSVILLE, KY.—T. L. Metcalf, who recently purchased J. K. Postma's business, is building an additional greenhouse 30x80, using the best of construction.

The first shipment of cape jasmine buds was made May 16. Few people have an idea of the immensity of this industry, but it adds many dollars to the incomes of the gardeners in this section. Orders are on file for many thousands and by the time the season will be fully opened a carload of the buds will be handled here daily. C. W. Benson is one of the largest dealers. He has several acres of fine bushes and buys many thousands from the smaller growers to fill his orders. Major G. W. Durant is the pioneer of the business and has the largest plat of cape jasmines in the south, about twelve acres solidly covered with bushes six to eight feet high. He frequently ships 40,000 in one day and realizes from $150 to $200 per acre from his flowers. The popularity of this flower is widespread and orders come from every considerable city in the United States and even from Canada. Properly packed the buds will carry for a week and open out as fresh and fragrant as though on the bush. These flowers are much in demand for Decoration day and orders for hundreds of thousands are received to be shipped out for that occasion. The season only lasts about three weeks and is about ten days late this year. The average price is 50 cents per 100 f. o. b. here. During the season the air is redolent with the rich perfume from the thousands of bushes white with bloom, and many people find employment gathering and packing the flowers. This comes just upon the heels of the strawberry season and keeps the cash coming in.

The South Park Floral Company has its fine new range of six houses well on the way to completion. This will add 60,000 feet of glass to the establishment and will be devoted exclusively to American Beauties, with which the firm has had excellent success, in fact producing stock the equal of any in the country. The old range will be given over to Bride, Bridesmaid and Perle, with which they have obtained no mean results. Messrs. Heller consider themselves fortunate in getting their glass for this new range, all 16x24, double strength A, for $3.21 per box. They have just purchased four acres of Indiana real estate on which there is as fine rose soil as can be found anywhere and they will begin drilling for natural gas next month; if they have luck in this equal to their other successes they will get an abundant supply of fuel at little cost, for the gas is all around them. They have just given the Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, an order for a boiler of the largest size turned out by that concern.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Hoyt Bros. have removed their store to a new location, 720 Riverside, which they have christened "The Palm."

The Clematis Disease.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Some time ago I wrote to Mr. Koster, of Boskoop, Holland, for information upon the clematis disease, not being fully satisfied with the conclusions in the article, translated from Moller's Deutsche Gartner-Zeitung, which appeared in the AMERICAN FLORIST at about that time. I had heard of Mr. Koster's success with the clematis and here is his answer to my interrogatory:

"The clematis has been grown for many years at Boskoop, at first in only moderate quantities, but with the increased demand in the American market provisions were made to supply that call. The original way of growing the clematis was to increase them by layering, a very slow and tedious method of propagation, but once in possession of a number of young plants the grower was sure to lift that number two years later, when they had attained marketable size. With the advent of propagating houses in Boskoop the clematis was grafted upon viticella roots with satisfactory results at the beginning.

"We began to propagate the clematis extensively in our nurseries about eight years ago, when the sale in America assured the disposal of every plant grown; prior to that time only a few clematises had been grown in our nurseries, which my father established in 1840. At the start we had no difficulty. The young plants were set a foot apart with fifteen inches between the rows. They were very carefully staked with rods three and one-half feet long and during the whole summer were continually tied up. Before winter set in each plant was cut back four or five inches above the ground, the stakes were removed and the plants left wholly unprotected from winds and frost. The removal of the stakes was to prevent any lifting by the frost, which would prove fatal to the tender shoots.

"The following spring larger stakes were used, to which the plants were carefully tied and, as a rule, did well for the first months, until they had reached a height of about five feet. Then came the disease. Beautiful, strong plants which did not show the least sign of any sickness were seen to wither and their death was but a matter of two or three days. It was a pitiful sight to see whole nurseries of clematises devastated by the ravages of this unknown destroyer. Not one grower escaped and you can readily understand that there were as many theories as to the cause of the trouble as there were growers. We, of course, began to investigate.

"Our first thought was of the blight and we had many a thorough trial with bouillir cordelaire, but without success. One thing which made us skeptical in regard to the blight theory and which told us that the death of the plants was due to some other cause was the fact that many plants, after showing no life for some time, would suddenly send out new shoots, occasionally to a height of six feet. This proved the healthy condition of the roots and caused us to examine the diseased shoots under a microscope. The result was the discovery of nematodes which exactly fitted the description of violet nematodes given in a recent issue of the AMERICAN FLORIST. We could almost say, as it was there said of the violet: 'The death of the plants attacked is caused either by the presence of the worms or by their feeding on the juices of the plants.'

"After discovering these pests the great question was as to the remedy. We cut the plants back as far as possible as soon as cold weather was over. To accomplish this a little earth was dug away with the fingers, laying bare the roots of the plant; then the cut was made as low as growing shoots could be seen. This trial was a perfect success. It was a delight that first summer to walk through our nurseries and see the rows of clematises untouched by disease, every one blooming and growing as had not been seen for years. Everybody in Boskoop was surprised at our results and there was no end of guessing as to what Koster & Co. had done to their clematises. For three years we were able to keep the secret; then everybody began to cut their clematises back, without knowing just why, and those who did the work well had success once more.

"Now what had the cutting back to do with the disease? By this method new, healthy shoots were started below the surface, inaccessible to nematodes, and very different from the old method, whereby new wood was permitted to grow on parts of the growth of the year previous, damaged by frost, rain and hail, leaving the bark full of holes and cracks. We have told some of our American customers about our method but few have had success with it because they have not cut the plants back low enough and have not staked the plants properly when the young shoots appeared.

"That those who treat the plants properly have success is proven by a letter from the firm of H. A. Dreer, in which the writer says: 'Now I want to tell you about the clematises which I cut back the way you suggested, but with very little hope of their ever coming to life again, as we were not able to get at them until the first week in July. They started very slowly at first but now about fifty per cent have made a growth of from two to four feet and more of the plants are still coming up, and with only one exception the several thousand plants are perfectly healthy. If the present hot weather does not affect them I believe we will save at least seventy-five per cent where we formerly lost ninety per cent.' " JAMES JENSEN.

Planting Aquatics.

It is very difficult for weather prophets to predict accurately a few days ahead, to say nothing of weeks in advance, the kind of weather we are likely to experience, and after the experiences of the past season it will be difficult to say just when certain horticultural operations should be performed, as the condition of the weather may be just the reverse of what may, in general, be anticipated. It will be prudent for all cultivators to note just what the most favorable conditions are for certain operations and to seize the opportunity when it presents itself, rather than to follow any hard and fast rules for such matters. As experience is the best schoolmaster, many practical lessons may have been learned during the past season. There are always those who are ready to take risks and if these planters are not overtaken by mishap they may repeat the experiment, and others may follow their example, but either may rue it.

A large number of hardy nymphæas may, as a rule, be planted in April, especially in the middle Atlantic states, but even here a number of varieties with soft rhizomes, of the odorata type, will suffer, and it is not infrequent that one hears complaints that such and such a plant never grew. Although these plants are hardy in a certain sense they are very liable to suffer if removed or transplanted when the conditions of the weather are such that they do not start into active growth at once. If they do not grow they will assuredly rot. The same state of affairs is even more pronounced in the case of nelumbiums of all kinds, and it is not unusual for people to call for these just as early in the season as for hardy nymphæas, and with fatal result. It is an unnatural desire to obtain, in the shortest period, a full grown and developed plant, but nature will not be forced and we must learn patience.

Perhaps no better month than June can be selected for planting hardy nymphæas, as well as tender; also nelumbiums and victorias, especially the latter where no artificial heat is applied. In the case of hardy nymphæas they take hold at once and some varieties will give a good average of flowers, but if not, there is the assurance of an established plant and an early start at the right time the following spring. The same holds good with nelumbiums, and while it may be too late to procure tubers, pot grown plants will do even better. In no case expect the same results from a newly planted specimen as from an established one, be it the first or second season.

With the first spring-like temperature there is a general feeling that tender plants should be out, but if stock is moved and we experience such sudden changes as befell us in April and May this year, we come to realize that tender nymphæas are very sensitive to such changes. The end of May or beginning of June is by no means late for planting these. Have the plants as well advanced as is practicable and if the weather is settled, the temperature of the air and water at summer heat and climbing above it, the plants will grow at a tropical gait.

Victorias may be planted in May if artificial heat can be given and the young plants protected overhead as well as by the desired water temperature, but where no heat is applied do not risk victoria plants out of doors before the middle of June. One must be guided by the conditions of the weather and locality. In mountainous districts, high latitudes and where cold nights are experienced in summer, it is risky to plant at all, even such a pronounced hardy variety as Victoria Trickeri.

During the past two or three years an insect pest has put in an appearance early in the season in different sections. This is a leaf miner. Its appearance is somewhat similar to a rose-leaf slug, having a large head and diminishing to the other extremity. Its presence is easily detected by a fantastic scroll or etching on the leaf and on examination it will be found that the larva has tunneled and consumed that part of the leaf. The leaves so affected soon become of little benefit to the plant, which is considerably weakened. This pest succumbs very readily to an application of weak kerosene emulsion with a spray pump. A sporatic disease sometimes attacks aquatic plants and the leaves present symptoms similar to the violet spot. This also succumbs to an application of weak Bordeaux mixture, the old formula or ammoniacal solution. This fungicide also destroys various forms of confervoid growth, often seen in ponds, having an appearance of thready scum. A weak solution will have no ill effect on fish.

SPECIMEN PLANTS.

We have just finished shifting our specimen plants into 11-inch pots. Good, rich, turfy loam, with an admixture of charcoal and a sprinkling of Clay's fertilizer, was the compost used. Good drainage is essential. Our soil is light, so we pot firmly. The plants must be watered sparingly until new roots are formed. To get them waterlogged now would mean a serious loss of foliage. Of late years it has been our custom to grow our specimens indoors and in this case we have complete control of the watering. Where outdoor culture is practiced it would be advisable to keep the plants in frames until a good start is made, and this would shed water in case of a heavy rain. When growing plants outdoors they should be plunged in some clean material like coal ashes or sand, about three feet apart so as to give plenty of room for watering, tying and other incidental work. It is also advisable to place a brick under each pot to keep out worms and ensure the free passage of water.

Stopping is an important operation, and one not generally understood. No regular time can be named for this work; it should be done almost every day, or as soon as a shoot is observed outgrowing the others. The idea is to keep the plants evenly balanced. It should never be necessary to stop the plants hard, as the shoots thus treated do not break so well as when merely the tips are taken. Neither can any date be named for discontinuing this operation. W. H. Lincoln makes a good plant naturally; so do many others. In a general way we stop pinching about the tenth of August.

Indoors the plants must be kept free from insect pests by frequent fumigating. Red spider will give a good deal of trouble and, if neglected, will injure the buds at blooming time so that they fail to expand properly. Outdoors the nomad spiders, and ladybird beetle larvæ do good service in keeping down insects, and frequent sprayings during bright weather help, and besides, are conducive to the growth of clean healthy foliage.

AT THE MAIN ENTRANCE TO THE GREAT EXPOSITION.—A PROMENADE WITHOUT RIVAL IN THE WORLD.—HISTORY OF THE CHAMPS ELYSEES.—SPLENDID SHOWINGS OF FLOWERS AND FRUIT AT THE EXPOSITION.—MANY WIDELY KNOWN GROWERS COMPETE. — AMERICAN APPLES WIN PRIZES AND SPECIAL MENTION.—NEW YORK, ILLINOIS AND MISSOURI THE LEADERS.—VARIOUS OTHER MATTERS OF INTEREST.

The Porte Monumentale, which is the main entrance to the exposition, is, as is well known, located on the Place de la Concorde, close to the gardens of the Tuileries. At that same place begins the beautiful Champs Elysees, leading to the Bois de Boulogne, which are without rival in the world. About 400 years ago that famous promenade was covered by small residences surrounded by gardens, meadows and cultivated land. Mary de Medicis bought that part of the land extending along the Seine and had it transformed, in the year 1616, into three alleys lined with rows of elms and closed at both ends with iron gates. The princess and her court used the promenade, then just as nowadays known under the name of Cours la Reine, for taking a drive when in need of an airing. The trees planted in 1616 were cut away and replaced by others in the year 1723. The rest of the land, extending on the opposite side towards the Faubourg St. Honore, was tillage and rabbit hunting ground. In 1670 that extensive plain, covering the whole quarter called the Roule, was also planted with trees and converted into avenues interspersed with lawns. The new promenade, was at first denominated Grand Cours, but soon after received the name of Champs Elysees, which has never been changed.

The central alley, which was the most spacious, began on the Place de la Concorde and ended on the Place de l'Etoile, where afterward the Arch of Triumph was erected. In 1765 the superintendent, de Marigny, had the whole Champs Elysees replanted and remodeled. Numerous alleys were added and the old ones improved, and for a long time no changes were made to de Marigny's plan, if we except the two equestrian statues called Marly's Horses placed by the Convention at the entrance of the grand avenue, and which still exist on the same spot, and the establishment of several fountains under the reign of Louis Philippe. It is true that several cafes, a circus, a panorama and, on the occasion of the Universal Exposition of 1855, the Palace of Industry were constructed, but all these attractions did not allure the Parisians. The carriages going to the Bois de Boulogne and the neighboring inhabitants having leisure, were, when no festivals were given, the customary visitors to the long, monotonous and dusty avenues. To remedy the evil the city council conceived the idea of transforming into gardens, flower beds and groups of rare shrubs the greater part of the Champs Elysees. On each side of the leading entrance to the Palace of Industry two large fountains were constructed. Around the palace summer concerts (cafes chantants) were established, and scattered among the trees all kinds of amusements and various theaters were erected. The scheme met with great success and has made the Champs Elysees the most popular promenade of Paris, and probably the finest in the world. Its superficies is about 190,000 meters (yards) and the expenses for transforming it have amounted to less than $300,000. The old Palace of Industry, which for many years was a very popular building, well known to all foreigners, was pulled down a couple of years ago to make room for two new palaces which rank among the finest buildings in Paris and will add largely to the success of the exposition.

We are just now enjoying the second show of flowers and fruits at the exposition. Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co. secured several first prizes, one for a splendid collection of vegetables, including the leading kinds of radishes, lettuces, onions, peppers, etc.; another for several grand lots of calceolarias and single and double cinerarias, and a third one for their collection of annual and biennial open-ground flowers, which comprised nearly their whole catalogue. We noted among these flowers the following as deserving to be grown on a larger scale in the United States: Collinsia bicolor candidissima; erysimum, dwarf compact, golden yellow; Eschscholtzia Douglasii, Gamolepis Tagetes, Kaulfussia amelloides, Layia elegans, Leptosyne maritima, Linaria reticulata aureo-purpurea, Calendula pluvialis, Myosotis alpestris, indigo blue; Nycterinia selaginoides, very nice border plant; Schizanthus Grahami, bright rose; Gilia dichotoma, Sphenogyne speciosa, Venidium calendulaceum, all of which are annuals very easily grown.

Ferard, Paris, showed a beautiful collection of perennial plants, with perfect specimens of aquilegia, hybrids of cœrulea; Alyssum saxatile compactum, Alyssum maritimum, double white; Doronicum gloriosum grandiflorum, Doronicum Pardalianches, Erysimum ochroleucum, with very large flowers; Heuchera sanguniea, Lychnis Lagascœ, Phlox divaricata two fine varieties, white and blue; Phlox Nelsoni (new) Phlox nivalis atropurpurea, Primula Auricula, Primula Japonica, Primula cortusoides amœna grandiflora, Pyrethrum carneum, single, very fine; Viola cornuta Papilio (new), Trollius Japonicus, etc.

Lemoine, Nancy, staged a grand collection of double lilac flowers, with several novelties not yet named. Among the older kinds attracting the attention may be mentioned: Negro, dark colored; Mme. Casimir Perier and Alphonse Lavallee, both white; Abel Carriere, light lilac; Charles Baltet, lilac, and Virginite, rose. He exhibited also several varieties of deutzias and some plants of the new Deutzia discolor floribunda, which is a splendid shrub. Defresne, Vitry, won the first prize for his great collection of standard roses, Levesque, as member of the jury, not competing with his fine collection of bush roses. Nabonnand, Golfe Juan, got the first prize for a good show of cut roses and carnations.

Simon, the cactus grower, as usual had the finest display of phyllocactus and epiphyllum. His phyllocacti Edouard Andre, Talleyrand, Jules Simon, Neuberti, Dr. Hernu, crenatus roseus, Raveandii, Kermesinus magnus, Mr. Forest, aurantiacus superbus, Abel Chatenay and Rose Unique were grand plants not easily rivalled. Moser had the best collection of Azalea Pontica and Azalea mollis. Seidel, of Dresden, was in the field with a beautiful show of Azalea Indica and secured first prize for it. His specimens of Azalea Indica Hesee, carmine; Le Flambeau, deep scarlet; Wm. Scheurer, red, Hermann Seidel, rose, and Schnee, white, could not have been better grown. The following firms also received first prizes: Dalle & Cappe, for their orchids; Vallerand, for his gloxinias and bulbous plants; Dessert, for his pæonies; Nonin, for his Primula Auricula; Paillet, for his pæonies and clematis. Billiard & Barre received a second prize for a collection of cannas in flower.

Your countrymen had a fine display of apples and secured several first prizes. The shows of the New York state commission, Illinois State Horticultural Society and Missouri State Horticultural Society deserve special mention. The Crimean united exhibition of apples and pears, although not large, also received a first prize with good conditioned specimens of the following apples: Reinette Simirenko, Reinette d'Oberdeck, Reinette Grand 'mere, Reinette de Champagne, Reinette d'Orleans, Reinette d'Angleterre, Reine des Reinettes, Calville White Winter, Kosoubasch, Sary Sinap, a curious egg-shaped apple, and the pears Bergamotte Esperance and Wergouleuse.

The leading feature at the last meeting of the horticultural society, held on May 9, was a collection of lilacs. The following sorts, Casimir Perier and Mr. Lemoine, both double white; Lucie Baltet, distinct rose color; Marie Legraye, very large flowered single white; Berenger, very large flowered dark lilac; Souvenir de Louis Spath, fine single dark colored; Macrostachne, single, charming rose-colored, were among the best.

After having been threatened, four weeks ago, with the loss of their crops through an excess of moisture, our farmers began, at the end of April, to fear the same fate through the drought which was then prevailing. The rain which fell in March and during the first fortnight of April had endangered many crops. Then came a spell of cold weather and a parching wind which baked the surface of the soil and made a crust which was very detrimental to the plant growth. Our growers were anxiously waiting for some rain to transplant their radishes and other roots, when, on May 6 and 7, we had two storms followed by heavy rains which were a great boon to the farmers around Paris. The growers in western France were less lucky and complain bitterly of the drought. But, on the other hand, it is perhaps fortunate that there is little moisture in the atmosphere, for, after a spell of warm weather in the beginning of May, the thermometer is again dropping at night almost to the freezing point and one frost would result in a loss of millions to the vineyardists, who just now are in their most critical period. The fruit trees with their roots going deep into the soil did not suffer from the effect of the changeable weather. They are fast flowering and, although the northerly, cold, dry wind caused many flower buds to drop, there are so many left on the trees that if only one half result in fruit we may rely upon a good fruit year.

The amateur rose growers complain bitterly that most of their tea and yellow-colored varieties were killed last winter, while the hardier kinds did not suffer.

The exposition is progressing and by the beginning of June will be in good shape. PARISIAN.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE BREAKS ALL PREVIOUS RECORDS.—UNUSUAL DEMAND FOR ALL COLORED FLOWERS.—ROSES VERY SCARCE. — COUNTRY DEMAND AT ITS HEIGHT. — HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY ENDORSES PLANS, LETS CONTRACTS AND SELLS OUT ON TREMONT STREET.—RHODODENDRON SHOW POSTPONED ONE WEEK.—BEGONIAS WIN CERTIFICATE OF MERIT.—HEMLOCK HILL ENDANGERED. —DAHLIAS AND SALMON.—OTHER NOTES.

Decoration day caught everybody napping in Boston this year. Growers who had roses by the thousands last year could count but hundreds this time. The shortage seems to have been general and the demand upon the wholesalers from the entire New England territory—the best flower consuming district on the continent — was something unprecedented. That roses and carnations, buyers selection as to color and quality, could not be obtained, appears to have astonished the incredulous natives beyond measure and the poor wholesalers had to take many a walloping over the telephone and otherwise, at the hands and tongues of enraged buyers who would not take no for an answer. The fancy grades of roses, however, were not wanted; they seldom are for Decoration day. Ordinary quality at every day prices had the call and many thousands more roses could have been disposed of to easily pleased buyers at from $4 to $6 a hundred. As it was every remnant was eagerly seized and the same may be said of carnations, particularly the colored sorts. There was a lively call for colored flowers of any kind. If any one could have placed 10,000 pæonies or double red tulips within reach a good profit would have been available. Of astilbe and single stocks there appeared to be almost an over-supply. The unusually cold spring had necessitated, apparently, a little over-forcing on the astilbe at the last moment, for when allowed to remain out of water a little while it seemed to wilt sooner than usual. Lilies were in brisk demand although, like the astilbe, most of those seen showed traces of flimsiness due to a high temperature. Outdoor flowers were different in character from what we are accustomed to see at Decoration day in Boston. Lily of the valley was in perfect condition; lilacs just opening and snowballs, hawthorns, deutzias, etc., were much missed, nothing of that kind being yet in bloom, even in the most favored spots. The record was surely broken on violets, there being quite a few of them in from various sources. The plant business broke all previous records. Country trade was proportionately much better than that enjoyed by the city retailers.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society's property on Tremont street has been sold for $600,000, the building to be vacated on or before May 1, 1901. On Saturday, May 26, a special meeting of the society was called by President Appleton to take final action on the plans for a new building presented by the building committee for approval, and to consider the request of that committee that $60,000 more be appropriated in addition to the original amount of $225,000 for the construction of the new hall. But slight opposition to the recommendations of the building committee was manifested, the beauty, convenience and appropriateness of the proposed new structure being beyond criticism, and the society's endorsement was given by a vote of 182 in favor and 14 in opposition. Contracts were signed on May 29, and building operations will begin at once. The location, which was secured at a cost of $225,000 for the land one year ago, is at the junction of Massachusetts and Huntington avenues in the Back Bay section of the city and directly opposite the new Music hall now nearing completion.

The annual rhododendron show which was scheduled to take place on June 6 and 7 has, owing to the backwardness of the season, been postponed until June 12 and 13. There was a small exhibition at Horticultural Hall on May 26, the most interesting feature being a group of begonias from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., including B. semperflorens Boule de Neige, Gloire du Montet, Nancy and Triomphe de Lorraine; also B. Glorie de Lorraine nana compacta, Profusion and Vesuve. A certificate of merit was awarded. Boule de Neige is a grand double white and attracted especial admiration.

The plan of the Metropolitan sewer commission provides for a tunnel under the famed hemlock hill at the Arnold Arboretum. Great concern is felt lest this should endanger the lives of the hemlock trees that cover the hill. It is hoped that a slight change in the route of the sewer may be agreed to for the safety of the grove, which is the finest in this section of the United States.

Welch Bros. have had a rarity this week, for the season, in some fine dahlia blooms. A still greater attraction on Saturday was a handsome salmon which lay in state in the ice chest. It bore an inscription dated at Bucksport, Me., stating that it had been caught by F. H. Moses directly opposite his office. Maine men are to be envied at all times.

Mrs. Peter Barker died at her home on Pleasant street, Canton, on May 28, after a long illness. Her husband, one son and one daughter survive her.

Messrs. P. O'Mara, Warren Bird and Prof. L. C. Elson were guests of the Horticultural Club at its May meeting.

There was a sharp frost in this section on the night of May 28, and market garden crops were generally injured.

H. E. Hartford has failed. Liabilities estimated at $1,237.05; assets none.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE SATISFACTORY BUT NOT INCREASING.—WHOLESALERS BUSY WITH SHIPPING BUSINESS.—PRICES.—CEMETERY PLANTERS RUSHED.—MICHELL TO ENLARGE HIS BUILDING.—RHODODENDRONS IN FINE SHAPE.—VARIOUS DOINGS.

Decoration day, the last floral holiday of the season, was a success from a trade point of view. The weather was perfect, the demand good for flowers and prices satisfactory. The floral feature of the day is not gaining ground in this neighborhood, at least. There are, of course, quantities of flowers used for cemetery adornment, in addition to the regular everyday business, but the demand for this purpose is, if anything, diminishing. The wholesale men say they never were so busy at this time, having to guard every consignment of flowers received, so that shipping orders taken earlier in the week should not remain unfilled. Prices, on account of the out of town demand, jumped up considerably, carnations advancing 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Roses were also moved up a notch or two, $6 to $8 being asked for the best teas and Kaiserins, Beauties selling for $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Pæonies were a great help, large quantities selling for from $4 to $5 per hundred. Sweet peas were also in demand at from 300 to 400 for $1. They are in from outside now and are becoming very plentiful. There was an abundance of lily of the valley at $2 to $4, the former for "frame" flowers, the latter for the outside stock. There were but few longiflorums, Mr. Craig, who has made a specialty of these for Decoration day for several years past, not forcing any this season.

The "cemetery florists," those adjacent to the cities of the dead, have had a very busy time. Westcott Bros. and Alhurger, at Laurel Hill, have had all they could possibly do, while the same story is heard from their brethren in other parts of the city. There are now scarcely any bedding plants left for sale, the growers of this class of stock having sold out cleaner than at any time in the past ten years.

H. F. Michell has had a fine business the past season and especially so this spring. He has just closed a contract for a large addition to his already large store. The back building is to be raised four stories, which will bring it on a level with the front part, and then an additional floor is to be built over all. This will almost double Mr. Michell's storage capacity and gave him much needed room for his rapidly growing business.

The rhododendrons in the park are now at their best and are indeed a beautiful sight. Some very fine specimens of Ghent azaleas are also in bloom. Japanese maples, of which there is quite a collection, are also very fine, their new and brilliant colored foliage making them noticeable for a long distance.

June weddings will now keep the boys busy for the next week or two. There are quite a few rather elaborate affairs booked that should use up a quantity of flowers and bring out some new ideas in decorating.

Rupert Kienle has moved a few doors nearer Chestnut street, into the store lately occupied by Alfred Hoag. In his old store he has placed a stock of cigars, to smoke out, so to speak, any would-be competitors.

Albert Knapper has a novelty in the shape of some pots of edelweiss. They are in 3 inch pots, each with a flower and create quite a sensation, particularly with people who have seen them blooming in Switzerland.

Jacob Becker will soon be off to Europe. Azaleas for next year will receive his particular attention, which means something extra fine in his Easter stock in 1901.

EVERYBODY TIRED OF THE TRADE-STIFLING STREET CAR STRIKE.—NO IMPROVEMENT YET APPARENT.—A GROWER MAKES HIS PILE.—OTHER NOTES.

The street car strike is still on, and in consequence business has not improved over last week. Decoration day has cleaned out considerable cheap stock; otherwise trade is as poor as last reported. This is the twenty-fifth day of the strike and to say that the florists, who are one of many classes, are disgusted with the state of affairs is putting it mildly. The southern and northern portions of town must be reached by wagons, and no one takes the trip either way unless it is absolutely necessary to do so. A few retailers are getting $1.50 to $2 for mixed roses, while the average is 75 cents. Some fine coreopsis is seen, which brings 10 cents to 15 cents. Carnations on the street have firmed up to 15 cents, but this grade can not be compared with that bringing 25 cents in the stores. Cape flowers sell for 5 cents each.

The Eden Floral Company, located at 3838 Finney avenue, is advertising its business for sale at a reasonable figure, as is also J. Van Campenhondt, a grower on St. Louis avenue. The latter says he has made all he wants and wishes to retire to his home in Belgium. Good for him.

The unusual sight of a florist's store without flowers on view is presented this week at the Art Floral Company's place on Morgan street. The windows and counter are tastily decorated with palms and other green goods exclusively.

A well known Washington avenue drug store has been selling flowers at cheap prices. It seems well that there are such outlets for stock that otherwise would be dumped out by many florists and wholesalers.

Young's have on sale lemon lily at $1 per dozen stems. This is a plant of pure yellow color and delightful fragrance.

Strong, well-flowered plants of double feverfew are exhibited in Ostertag Bros.' window on Washington avenue.

THE grower of bedding material who is not getting profitable prices has only himself to blame this season.

IT is asserted that the prices of small sizes of window glass, under 20-inch, is likely to advance because of shortage in supply.

J. H. TROY, of "The Rosary," New York, informs us that bromeliads were used as floral receptacles in England many years ago.

THE straws which show which way the winds blow seem to all be drifting toward New York at a pace which insures arrival in August.

G. H. CRANE has been, without doubt, the carnation of the year so far as the demand for cuttings goes, and one good grower has kept a record which shows a production of 92.5 cents worth of cut blooms per plant thus far since benching last fall.

The Sweet Pea Conference.

The sweet pea conference and exhibition, in celebration of the bi-centenary of this flower, will be held at the Crystal Palace, London, Eng., July 20 and 21. Papers will be read as follows: "The History of the Sweet Pea," by S. P. Dicks; "The Evolution and Improvement of the Sweet Pea," by J. Eckford and C. A. Curtis; "Classification of Sweet Peas," by W. P. Wright; "Sweet Peas in America," by W. T. Hutchins; "Some New Points in the Cultivation and Decorative Use of the Sweet Pea," by H. Dunkin. The secretary is Richard Dean, Ranelagh Road, Ealing, London, W., Eng., to whom all communications should be addressed.

Copiousness and Consistency.

It is unfortunate that some horticultural writers and writers for the florists' press sacrifice accuracy, consistency, conciseness and all other desirable qualities in grinding out enough drivel to fill a certain amount of space. We are forcibly reminded of this in glancing over the effusions of a gentleman who seems to have a contract to fill two pages and upward weekly—we did not say weakly—in one of our contemporaries. He poses as a final authority on all subjects under the sun, from public policy to private morals. One may derive a deal of quiet amusement from some of his gems of inconsistency if time is taken to extract them from the mass of twaddle in which they are buried. For instance, on May 3, he says: "Instead of leaving experiments to government schools, every greenhouse has its maniac, victim or subject, and the result is pitiable." Now on May 24 he states: "Ours is mostly a trade of experiment and we should not hesitate to indulge in it when planting out."

If any one takes it seriously, this sort of stuff is likely to do great mischief. The first quotation refers more especially to fertilizers, and there can hardly be a more pernicious assertion. Every intelligent and progressive grower is experimenting in this line, carefully, cautiously and on a small scale, to be sure, but continually adapting to his own needs and carrying further the excellent work of the schools, and yet this gentleman must call all such men maniacs. On the other hand if there is any part of the business in which experimenting is reprehensible, it is when planting for some one else. One has no right to take a customer's money and plant anything which he does not know from previous experience will surely be a success. It must be tried on the dog first.

STORY OF A VERY BUSY WEEK.—MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS AND BREAKS ALL RECORDS.—RED FLOWERS IN GREATEST FAVOR.—SHIPPING TRADE VERY HEAVY.—OUTDOOR ARTISTS TO CONVENE NEXT TUESDAY.—PÆONIES JUST COMING.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF VARYING IMPORT.

There is not a dissenting opinion as to the increasing importance of Memorial day from the florists' point of view. Last year the Memorial day trade eclipsed previous records for the season, and this week the area of totality, as the astronomers said of the little affair of the sun, included every wholesale house in this market, and to say that last year's sales were thrown into shadow means a very great deal. It is true that a large proportion of the business was on shipping orders, but the local buying was rather more than usual. A peculiarity very generally noticed was that the trade, instead of being confined to the second day preceding the holiday, extended over the two days preceding, and Tuesday's sales were very nearly as great as Monday's, which is quite unusual. Of certain kinds of material there was enough and to spare, but of roses, particularly Beauties, Meteors and Perles, there was a marked shortage. In fact, Beauties began to be hard to obtain several days before the demand showed any considerable increase. There were pæonies enough to supply all legitimate trade and leave large quantities of inferior stock for the fakirs, and carnations were in equal supply with the single exception that reds were in such demand that some indifferent material was forced to uses for which nothing but the best will usually suffice. Of the specialties there were all that the market required, cape jasmine, pansies, sweet peas, lilies, corn flowers and others, but pretty nearly everything sold out with a little forcing upon occasion. The only items of which there could be any complaint were white carnations, Harrisii and marguerites. Of course Wednesday wasn't much, but Thursday brought an excellent business, and on the whole this week has been eminently satisfactory.

The indications point to an eminently successful meeting of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association, at the Art Institute next week Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The gentlemen in charge have assurances of an attendance which will be representative of the outdoor artists of the country, and a sufficient sum has been contributed by friends of the work to insure a satisfactory entertainment. Not the least of the pleasurable features of the programme are the opportunities afforded of visiting some of the parks and other places where examples of the horticultural progress of the middle west are to be seen.

Last year the only pæonies in this market for Memorial day were those held in cold storage. This year they are just beginning to come in, the local growers having thus far cut only a few, and those the early red. They were sold by thousands this week.

Cannas are in strong demand again this season. The favorites, like Leonard Vaughan, Egandale, Chicago and Mme. Crozy have been sold out for a month; 2½-inch stock has retailed at $1.50 and 4-inch at $2 per dozen.

J. A. Budlong reports as a marked feature of the season's trade in rose plants that Meteor is little in demand, and yet Meteor roses have been at a premium in this market almost all winter.

E. E. Pieser says that there were more flowers in this market on Monday and Tuesday of this week than in any two days of the years that have gone before.

Bassett & Washburn state that May 29, 1900, has gone on record as the day upon which they shipped the greatest number of boxes of cut flowers in their business experience.

George Reinberg is pretty well sold out of carnation cuttings, in which he has done a big business this year, but is still shipping a great deal of rose stock.

Gus Lang is making something of a success of the plant business down town. Just now it is a lot of young rubbers which he is displaying.

From present indications there will be Harrisii all the year around this time, Poehlmann Bros., among others, having a good many yet to come.

F. F. Benthey is wiring his establishment for electric light preparatory to a thorough cleaning up.

W. E. Lynch has been attending to business during the past few days, though still weak from the effects of his recent attack of pneumonia.

A. L. Vaughan reports good business in bulbs, but says the season closed much earlier than usual.

McKellar & Winterson are equipped with a nice line of commencement specialties.

A. De Thier succeeds James Jensen as superintendent of Humboldt Park.

New York.

SUPPLY SHORTENED AND PRICES WELL MAINTAINED.—MEMORIAL DAY TRADE NOT REMARKABLE BUT GOOD.—MARKET WELL UNDER CONTROL.

Cool weather for the past week has shortened up the cut flower product; consequently there has not been an overabundance for the Decoration day supply. While the high-class trade has been anything but brisk, still the general demand has been sufficient to keep the market pretty well cleaned up, so that at present writing wholesalers' ice boxes are empty, except for odds and ends. A fair percentage of roses that can be classed as good for the season are coming in, and these are disposed of readily at fair figures. The cut of American Beauties has shortened up within the past ten days and of those received a large proportion are imperfect. When passable, they sell fairly well this week. Carnations had been going at from 50 cents to $1 50 per hundred up to the day preceding Decoration day, when they advanced to $1.50 and $2.50 for such varieties as Scott, White Cloud, Hill and red varieties. Fancy sorts are not in sufficient demand to bring very much more. The supply of Jacqs and Brunners is insignificant. Harrisii lilies have advanced to $6 and $8 under the pressure of the holiday demand. There is the usual quantity of snowballs and other outdoor flowers in market, but they are not wanted. Pæonies are in and bring from $6 to $8 when in good condition. Decoration day trade is generally reported as good by the wholesalers, owing to light shipments, whereby the market has been kept under control and steady conditions maintained.

The first summer exhibition of the American Rose Society will be held in the winter garden of the Eden Musee on June 12, 13 and 14. Many valuable special premiums are offered. Schedules can be procured from Leonard Barron, secretary, 136 Liberty street, New York.

Plant trade has been excellent all the spring and has been unprecedented this week. Price seems to cut little figure with the buyers so long as the quality is right.

I. Eisenberg, of Steinway, Long Island, was before the magistrate last Monday morning, charged with cruelty to a horse.

David Ward, father of C. W. Ward, of Cottage Gardens, died at Pontiac, Mich., May 29.

August Rhotert will sail on the Fuerst Bismarck on June 28, for Europe.

Messrs. Hodgson and Siebrecht went to Newport this week.

Alfred Dimmock sails on June 9.

MEMORIAL DAY BROUGHT UNEXPECTED ACTIVITY.—STOCK RATHER SHORT TO MEET INCREASED DEMANDS.—PROSPECT FOR A GOOD PARTY FOR THE CONVENTION. —DOINGS OF THOSE IN THE TRADE.

Decoration day brought a rush of business much greater than was expected. Flowering plants of all kinds, from the small ageratum to lilies and hydrangeas, found a ready sale. Shipments from local florists to points throughout the state were certainly greater than ever before on a similar occasion. Pæonies, so useful for showy effects, owing to the lateness of the season, were not available, and carnations and roses were heavily drawn upon to supply the popular demand for cut flowers. Most growers' carnations were heavy in crop but were easily disposed of at the good prices that have prevailed here all this season. Roses, too, are abundant, but so far there has been no considerable surplus; however, the local supply is fully sufficient to meet the demand except for Beauties. The cold weather up to the present time has greatly delayed outside planting and the season will be necessarily short for such work, but orders are coming in fast and it is quite certain that the amount of planting will be equal to if not greater than last season.

Interest in bowling is now very active, regular practice nights bringing out all the aspirants to high scoring and the team will soon be selected to go to New York in August. But others besides the bowlers are already making plans to attend the convention and it is safe to say that a very satisfactory number will attend from this town and vicinity.

Chas. Schwible will soon remove to a larger store a few doors above his present place, where he will have all the facilities of an up-to-date establishment, including a large conservatory in the rear, heated with hot water.

The Michigan Floral Co., of Brighton, has sold its stock and leased the three greenhouses to the Lakeview Co., composed of C. E. Cole and Chas. A. Kaischen, of Detroit. Wm. Gray, formerly of this city, is at present in charge of the place, which will be enlarged and improved this summer and devoted to carnations and roses.

Robt. Flowerday is at home again from Europe and reports a very interesting and pleasant trip.

Harry Balsley has been reappointed park commissioner and is president of that board. J. F. S.

St. Paul.

SHORTAGE IN THE SUPPLY OF GOOD BEDDING PLANTS.—WELL GROWN PLANTS EASILY BRING GOOD PRICES —MEMORIAL DAY AND COMMENCEMENT SEASONS BUSY. —GARDEN FLOWERS NEARLY DONE FOR. —SIEGER BUILDING A BIG ADDITION.— NOTES OF HIS DEVICES.

The shortage of good bedding stock is becoming more apparent. Choice geraniums especially are very scarce and the best plants are worth $10 per hundred at wholesale. There is plenty of inferior material on the market, for many growers, in their eagerness to grow as many plants as possible, have crowded them too closely, with the inevitable result of a lot of drawn up, scrawny plants that will never become first-class. Good stock, whether it be in cut flowers or plants, will always command good prices and will do more toward destroying "ruinous competition," so-called, than all combinations of growers and retailers possibly can. A good article will always sell on its merits.

The hot weather has brought all blooms out with a rush and first-class cut flowers are really scarce. In roses, Kaiserins are very nice, while some very good Brides and Meteors are being cut. Bridesmaids, however, show the effect of the heat. Carnations are quite plentiful and some very nice blooms are still to be had. The demand for cut flowers has been very brisk and is increasing daily. The school commencements throughout the northwest have already begun and every little town where sweet girl graduates dress in gauzy white calls for its quota from Flora's kingdom and helps to fill the florists' coffers. For Memorial day the demand was heavy. Lilacs and snowballs were all gone and pæonies not yet opened in this section. Cape jasmines from the sunny south and roses and carnations constituted the great bulk of the stock.

R. C. Sieger is erecting quite an extensive addition to his plant. His three houses have been lengthened to 200 feet each and he will soon begin the erection of four more, each 200 feet long, three of them being fourteen feet wide, the other eight feet. Some of the houses will be short-span-to-the-south, others even-span. Mr. Sieger is a firm believer in the short-span system but raises the gable higher than most builders and gives the north span a steeper pitch. By placing two benches in the center and a narrow one on the north side he claims all plants will receive the same amount of sunshine, even in the shortest days. He uses butted glass, 14x16, the rafters being square, without grooves for the drip. He says that these grooves become more or less clogged anyway and in time cause the rafters to rot. This entire range will be devoted to roses, carnations and violets. American Beauty, Liberty, Bridesmaid and Bride will be grown in winter, Kaiserin, Carnot, Meteor and Beauty in summer. In carnations he will put in White Cloud, Flora Hill, Mrs. Bradt, Triumph, Jubilee, Tidal Wave, Daybreak and G. H. Crane. Mr. Sieger's roses have long been known as among the finest brought to this market.

We were visited by quite a storm May 13, almost cyclonic in character, accompanied by hail. The heaviest losers were the Warrendale Floral Co., Christ. Hansen and L. L. May & Co., all suffering by hail. The Warrendale Co. and May & Co. had hail insurance but Hansen had dropped his. FELIX.

A special shoot between members of the Philadelphia Florists' Gun Club for the Westcott trophy was held on their grounds at Wissinoming on May 22. The conditions for this trophy are: Fifty targets, fifteen known angles, fifteen unknown angles and ten pairs of doubles, handicap added to the score. Out of the first thirty targets A. B. "If you want to make fine scores you must have a good ball, which you must get down fine and then use no other." So says "The Deacon," and what he says goes, for he is now high man. He has just had a new ball turned out, made of gum. Now, "by gum," we don't mean rubber, although "Wm. K." might take the stump of one of his large specimens and have a ball turned to suit his grip. The last arrival is from the white gum, a wood very tough and quite light in weight. John Walker has a ball he calls "Gen. Buller," and when "Buller" is working great scores go on the board. In fact, pet balls are now quite the thing, and nearly all the "cracks" have balls with special finger holes or slots to suit their grip. The two-man handicap will commence June 10 and great rolling is expected. K.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE SHOWS NO INCREASE IN THE BISON CITY.—PATRIOTISM ON THE WANE.—BUSINESS WARRANTS INCREASED PRICES JUST THE SAME.—A VISIT TO PALMERS'.—DEATH OF MRS. SAGE.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Decoration day has come and gone and trade in general shows a decrease in cut flower orders for the day. Decoration day is no longer what it used to be; the younger generation seems to lack that spirit of patriotism which was so apparent a few years ago. However, individual orders were good and prices took a decided upward shoot, while the quality of roses went the other way. There were no pæonies and carnations. Roses, lily of the valley and lilacs were the only flowers available in quantities. Carnations at $3 and $4 per hundred at Decoration day does not seem just right, but there are some who pay it and get prices accordingly, but for the good of the business some distinction should be made in the price of flowers between Easter and Decoration day. The store windows are now a sight to behold.

A wheeling party journeyed to Lancaster Sunday and called upon W. J. Palmer & Son. We were escorted through the whole place and some amateur photographs were taken by one of the party. Palmers' Brides and Bridesmaids were a grand sight and the cut of Beauties is fine. They are growing sweet peas in three carnation houses, which were solidly in flower and perfect. Another house has a solid bed of Kaiserins which are fine; last week the cut was 2,500.

We are informed of the death of Mrs. E. B. Sage, of Red Rock, who has been ill for a long time. The Buffalo Florists' Club extends sympathy to Mr. Sage, who is one of our members and a regular attendant. W. A.

THE KENTUCKY CITY SEES CONSIDERABLE BUILDING UNDER WAY.—SCHULTZ BRINGING HIS PLACE UP TO DATE.—OTHERS GETTING READY FOR MORE GOOD BUSINESS.

Jacob Schultz is preparing to make great improvements to his range. He will rebuild four houses for miscellaneous plants, using larger glass and new material throughout. Then he will put up a fern house 10x180 and a violet house 12x140. A new boiler house will be built, 20x65, separated from the houses and with a second story covered by glass for the use of large plants. Two new boilers will be installed, of the same pattern as those used by E. G. Hill for his carnation houses. These improvements will cost between $6,000 and $7,000.

C. H. Kunzman is building another carnation house. It is 24x120 and twelve feet to the ridge. The south wall will have two-foot glass ventilators its entire length. There are to be three five-foot benches, leaving space for four walks. Mr. Kunzman is also excavating an eight-foot cellar 20x55, which will be covered by a potting shed. In the fall he proposes to build a house 8x120 for propagating carnations.

C. W. Riemers is building a packing room 24x30, with a cooling cellar 16x24 and capable of holding two tons of ice. Mr. Reimers has a device for heating the water used in his houses. When one man is watering the temperature is at 58° and if two or three are at work the supply only falls to 56°. He will have 30,000 asters for cut flowers this season and has them all planted. H. G. W.

HARTFORD, CONN. — John Coombs is hoping for the speedy completion of the Universalist block, to which he will then remove his store and be excellently located.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—W. W. Kimmell recently had a minister of the gospel arrested for passing a forged check. The reverened gentleman's friends produced the money to reimburse the florist.

BUSINESS CONTINUES BRISK.—PÆONIES IN SPLENDID SHAPE.—DECORATIONS FOR SOCIETY.

Trade is very good. The commencements and receptions are keeping everybody on a move. Stock is plentiful and the quality good for this season. The weather is cool, which is quite a drawback to the sale of bedding plants. Pæonies are grand this year and are in great demand and bring fair prices.

Wednesday night, May 23, President and Mrs. McKinley gave a reception in honor of the Mystic Shriners. The East Room was tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and crotons, the corridors and parlors with plants and large vases of pæonies and all were brilliantly illuminated. It was the largest gathering seen at the Executive Mansion during the present administration. The Marine Band furnished the music.

Representative and Mrs. Dalzell entertained Wednesday night, May 23. Quite a number of Meteor roses were used by A. Gude & Bro., who had the decoration.

P. G.

ITHACA, N. Y.—Arthur H. Bool has leased the establishment of the Bool Floral Co., and will conduct the business at 215 East State street.

MONTCLAIR, N. J.—A. D. Rose reports a brisk business in window boxes and records sixty-five boxes five feet long, which he has planted individually as one days' work.

BURLINGTON, WIS.—A. Helfrich has organized the Burlington Floral Co., of which he becomes president, to handle his business, and proposes enlarging his glass and reaching out for larger trade.

MEMORIAL DAY TRADE SURPASSED PREVIOUS RECORDS.—FLORIST BECOMES A GARDENER.—BEDDING TRADE ACTIVE.

The quantity of flowers handled for Memorial day exceeded all the records of the city and the proportion of carnations was unusual, particularly of white. One feature of Memorial day trade is that every florist appears to have more or less orders from customers he never sees at any other time.

A. L. Mock, who until recently owned the establishment known as the Paris Floral Co., and was a candidate for the position of park superintendent, has accepted the position of gardener for Chas. Allis, who is establishing a fine summer residence in Wauwatosa, Wis. Conservatories are soon to be built and a lily pond will be one of the features in the landscape.

Bedding plants are being set out at a lively rate and the best scarlets are already scarce. Every one doing bedding or planting of any kind is very busy, but the flower trade generally is only moderate. C. B. W.

Park and Outdoor Art Association.

It was on Monday morning, June 4, that Secretary Warren H. Manning and his assistant, Miss Edith Canning, opened headquarters in the Green Room of the Auditorium Annex Hotel, Chicago, for the fourth annual convention of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association, which was, in many respects, destined to eclipse all previons gatherings of the association. The society is growing apace with the increased interest in the subject of outdoor art and the attendance was representative of that interest from New Orleans to St. Paul, from Omaha to Boston. President Charles M. Loring, whose absence had been feared because of ill health, was warmly greeted on Tuesday morning, when the members assembled in beautiful Fullerton Hall, in the Art Institute, where the first order of the day was an address of welcome by Mr. Taylor, representing Mayor Harrison. Mr. Loring responded briefly and then the routine work of the meeting was taken up and promptly dispatched.

The reports of Treasurer O. C. Simonds and Secretary Manning detailed the work of the year and were most favorable in comparison with the conditions at the Detroit meeting a year ago. The report of Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr., of Brookline, Mass., for the committee on checking the abuses of advertising signs, was deferred, but Prof. Wm. J. Beal, of Michigan, was ready with the report of the committee on prizes for designs. In this document the committee recommended that this society offer prizes for amateur outdoor work of various classes and that it encourage such organizations as woman's clubs and local improvement associations to do the same. In this connection Mr. MacBride, of Iowa City, related the circumstance of such a prize competition on flower beds which took place last season in his town and in which there were over 100 competitors, although the prizes amounted to only $10. Dr. Wm. W. Folwell, of Minneapolis, reported for the committee on park census that the present census law makes no provision for special enumeration of parks and the compilation of park statistics and that such will be impossible without further legislation. J. A. Ridgway, for the committee on park accounts, reported that letters had been sent to all park accountants inviting them to offer suggestions as to the proper methods of handling park accounts, but that the responses had been so meager as to afford no basis for completing the work. On Tuesday afternoon the members of the association repaired to the Field Columbian Museum, in Jackson Park, where they were met with carriages by the Board of South Park Commissioners and brought back to the city via the Midway Plaisance, Washington Park, Drexel and Michigan boulevards.

On Tuesday evening an excellent audience greeted J. H. Patterson and E. L. Shuey, of the National Cash Register Company, Dayton, O., who told of the manifold benefits derived from their efforts to improve the surroundings of their factory and the homes of the operatives. Stereopticon views were used to show what has been done in this line and the session was not only one of the most instructive but most entertaining of the convention.

At the session Wednesday morning Secretary Manning read the paper of Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, entitled "Landscape Gardens." The writer dealt exhaustively with her topic and showed herself possessed of a fine knowledge of the fundamental principles of the art of gardening. She handled certain well known abuses in so free handed a fashion that President Loring, at the close of the reading, compared Mrs. McCormick to the gentleman with the shillalah who made it a practice to hit a head wherever he saw it. The second order of the day was the reading of the report of the committee upon checking the abuses of advertising bill boards. This was preceded by the presentation of stereopticon views showing the bill boards on several of Chicago's boulevards and streets adjacent to the parks. These were from photographs taken by the Municipal Art Association of Chicago and were briefly commented upon by a representative of that organization. In the committee's report, which was a document of several thousand words, it was advised that the association exert its influence in every way to create public opinion in opposition to the bill boards, preferably taking up the work through the secretary's office and proceeding along definite and continuous lines. In the debate which followed Mr. Hanford, of Detroit, Mr. Parker, of Quincy, Ill., and others related incidents in which the bill board had been overcome by diplomacy, right or the force of public opinion.

The session of Wednesday closed with the paper of W. M. R. French, Director of the Art Institute, on "Trees in Composition," which was the most pleasing feature of the week's programme. Mr. French was once a landscape architect and knows the value of a tree as well as any man. He proceeded to show that to the landscapist, either painter or gardener, the tree is a very important factor, and illustrated his remarks by sketching with crayon on rough paper as he spoke, drawing his landscape first as it should not be and then remedying the defects with a few deft touches. The conclusion of his remarks was the signal for the most hearty applause of the session, although the hour was very late. The afternoon ride through the west side parks was somewhat interfered with by the rain.

On Wednesday evening the members of the association were banqueted at the Auditorium, the discussion of the viands being followed by extemporaneous remarks by a number of those gathered about the board. Flowers for the occasion were donated by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago Carnation Co. and Weiland & Risch. Hauswirth decorated the central fountain for the hotel.

Thursday morning's session was the occasion for the presentation of three papers, that of J. Frank Foster, superintendent of the South Park System of Chicago, dealing with the subject of park roads in a most thorough and practical manner. S. M. Millard presented the subject "Art in Landscape" and Rev. J. A. Rondthaler, who proved to be the silver tongued linguist of the convention, told eloquently of the influence of public parks upon the morality of the community. The paper of William Ordway Partridge was read by title only. President Loring was unable to preside at this session and the chair was occupied by S. A. Foster, of Des Moines, Ia.

The election of officers, as per the recommendations of the executive council, resulted in the choice of L. E. Holden, of Cleveland, O., as president. Mr. Holden is president of the Plaindealer Publishing Company and was, until June 5, a member of the Cleveland board of park commissioners. Vice-presidents J. C. Olmsted and E. J. Parker, Secretary Warren H. Manning and Treasurer O. C. Simonds were re-elected. It was voted to meet in Milwaukee in 1901.

Resolutions were introduced showing that it was the sentiment of the dominant members of the society that the organization should be more directly guided to meet the needs of park people and several suggestions toward the desired end were favorably considered. In the afternoon the members were taken for a drive through Lincoln Park and to the nursery of P. S. Peterson & Son.

On Thursday evening the society held a joint session with the Architectural League of America at which a paper by Mrs. E. D. Meade, president of the Twentieth Century Club, of Boston, was read, treating of municipal improvement more from the view point of the architect than that of the landscapist. On Friday the society was taken down the drainage canal upon the steamer Hinda, the craft which bore Admiral Dewey upon his famous voyage down the big ditch which has, in this fin de siecle year, supplanted the stock yards as the one sight which no guest within Chicago's gates may be suffered to depart without seeing.

Among the members present from outside Chicago were: F. W. Salway and P. H. Warder, Cincinnati, O.; Wm. W. Folwell, Wyman Elliott, J. A. Ridgway, H. W. Jones and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Loring, Minneapolis; M. P. Hurlbut, E. C. Van Leyen, J. R. Coryell and J. C. E. Hanford, Detroit; Thos. B. Meehan, Germantown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Olmsted, Brookline, Mass.; Thos. H. MacBride, Iowa City, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Johnson, and E. Barker, New Orleans; G. A. Parker, Hartford, Conn.; W. J. Stevens, Carthage, Mo.; E. J. Cornish, E. J. Ellison and W. R. Adams, Omaha; Sidney A. Foster, Des Moines; J. H. Patterson, E. L. Shuey and W. A. Sinclair, Dayton, O; C. J. Maloy, Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. J. V. N. Standish. Galesburg, Ill.; J. D. Y.; E. J. Parker, Quincy, Ill.; Rebecca L. Richmond, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Wm. Scott, Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. Warren H. Manning, Boston; Miss Edith A. Canning, Warren, Mass.; C. E. Lewis, H. J. Weber, W. A. Starke and August Rebhan, Milwaukee.

Notes on Plant Growing.

The season of most active growth for plants in general being now at hand, no time should be lost in patching up the depleted stocks, either by purchase or propagation. Greenhouse space is too valuable to be empty during the summer months though overcrowding will not produce the highest grade of stock, and it seems worth remembering that a house comfortably filled with plants each individual of which is perfect, and consequently salable, will give a better net result than one of similar size that is overcrowded with a lot of drawn and spindly stock, much of which may only be sold as culls.

That worthy favorite, Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, than which, as our friend Wm. Scott has recently written, there is no better fern for the house, will doubtless occupy many more greenhouses during this season than ever before, its conduct and results having been so uniformly satisfactory in the past. The most approved method of growing the Boston fern during the summer is to plant out the young stock on a bench containing four or five inches of well enriched soil, in fact much the same compost as one would use for chrysanthemums, but giving the ferns sufficient protection from full sunshine to ensure a deep, rich color for the foliage, for light green fern leaves are not nearly so popular in the American market as they seem to be in some European centers.

Plenty of water, both overhead and at the roots, will be required by these ferns as the weather grows warmer, but some care should be given in its application in order to prevent washing the soil over the lower fronds, for mud-stained leaves detract much from the ornamental value of such a plant. The lifting and repotting of the Boston ferns should be so timed in the fall as to allow a few weeks for re-establishment in the pots or pans before the plants are offered for sale.

Great quantities of dormant stems of Cycas revoluta are now annually imported and offered by the large dealers, these being on the market at about this time of the year usually, and forming a paying investment to many growers. With carefully selected stems there is but little loss, and starting them into growth does not present any great difficulties, the main points being about as follows: Pot the stems into as small pots as possible, and set them firmly, using a good rose soil, after which they should be placed in a warm palm house, or similarly shaded structure, and given a good watering to settle the soil and start the sap in the stems. If the pots containing the cycas stems are plunged in a hotbed the growth will appear more quickly, but has the disadvantage of getting ahead of the root action, which will produce plants with a fine head of fronds but no foundation, this state of affairs giving rise to no small dissatisfaction on the part of the final purchaser. A little more time given to the proper hardening of the growth on these newly imported plants would save many a complaint made to the retail dealer.

The present is also a good time for the topping of Ficus elastica, another of the standard house plants of the period. If the stock plants of ficus are kept in a warm house, the tops carefully mossed and kept continually moist, there is but a very small percentage of loss in this operation, it being probably the safest method of propagation, not only for ficuses but also for several other foliage plants. The method of growing on young plants of Ficus elastica by means of planting out in the open air is a very reasonable one, and has already given some very good results, the plants so treated producing large leaves of fine color and good substance. Plenty of manure should be given, and also careful cultivation in order to avoid having any damaged foliage, and unless it is south of Washington it would scarcely be advisable to plant out the young ficuses before June 1 unless the season is a particularly favorable one.

At about the same time of the year araucarias may be placed outdoors, but in the latter case a lath shelter to screen the plants from the full effect of the sun is necessary, and frequent syringing during the dry and hot days of midsummer is required to avoid the attacks of red spider and thrips. In fact one of these lath structures with the open side toward the north or west often proves a very useful storage place for various plants that have been used for decorative purposes during the preceding winter, giving them just enough protection from the sun and wind to allow for their gradual recuperation. Boston's New Horticultural Hall.

Contracts having been signed and active work having begun on the magnificent new home for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, plans for which have been under consideration by the building committee and architects for the past year, we take pleasure in presenting herewith diagrams of the complete plans as adopted and a view of the structure as it will appear when completed. The location is on Massachusetts avenue between Huntington avenue and Falmouth street giving a frontage of 210 feet on the former and of 94 feet on each of the two latter named streets.

The treatment of the exterior is what might be termed a free use of the English renaissance, and the principal features of the facade are the strong, rusticated corner piers and the colonnade of brick pilasters supporting an entablature. The building is to be two stories in height. The first story windows are arched and the second story windows are designed in conjunction with stone and metal balconies. The windows, as regards their divisions, recall somewhat Hampton Court in England. The entrances, three in number, are placed in the center of the Massachusetts Avenue facade, each occupying one of the thirteen dais, into which this front is divided.

The building will be constructed of eastern water-struck brick laid, Flemish bond, in white mortar, and the trimmings are to be of Indiana limestone. The ornamentation is to consist of the carving of the limestone, such as the capitals of the pilasters, the brackets supporting the balconies, etc., the seal of the society, which appears directly over the central entrance, and the decorations about the windows flanking this seal; and further, the building is to benefit largely by the free use of more or less richly colored marble, which is to be set into the brick work, enclosed with Indiana limestone, carved. The name of the society in bronze on a marble panel, appears in frieze directly over the entrance. The distance from the sidewalk to the main cornice is 56 feet and the cornice is surmounted by richly modeled terra cotta cheneau.

The Huntington Avenue facade consists of five dais, treated in a manner similar to the main front. On the Falmouth street side is placed the large entrance to the main exhibition hall, sufficient in size to allow of driving in with teams so that exhibits may be unloaded expeditiously and safely, regardless of the weather outside. This exhibition hall is to be treated in brick and is lighted by large windows extending the entire length of one side and by abundant overhead light from a monitor in the roof. The floor will be of screened gravel. This hall 52½x123 feet in area, is accessible from the entrance vestibule, as is also the smaller exhibition hall at the front, which is 28x57 feet. On the Huntington avenue end of the building is placed a lecture hall, 48x68 feet, raised some four and one half feet above the floor of the exhibition hall and connected to same by a loggia 28x52 feet.

In the second story, on the Huntington avenue end, and directly over the lecture hall, is located the library, which is to be fitted in the most approved manner with book stacks grouped in alcoves. On this floor is also placed the newspaper periodical room, the herbarium, a room for special study and separate rooms for the librarian and for cataloguing. The treasurer's office is upon this floor and a studio with dark room is provided for photographing rare plants, etc., that may be exhibited from time to time. In the basement are three committee rooms, one of them 46½x36½ feet. This latter is intended as a supper room on occasions when the lecture hall is being used for parties, and is connected to a service room and kitchen at the rear. A service room is also to appear on the first floor directly above and is to be connected by dumb waiter, which allows of the lecture hall being used for similar purposes in connection with the large exhibition hall.

The heating apparatus is to be placed in the basement; the system of heating is to be that known as the Plenum Fan System—to be supplemented somewhat by direct radiation. The toilet rooms are placed conveniently on the several floors and ample storage rooms for tables, vases and other furniture are conveniently located. Water faucets are provided at frequent intervals around the sides of the large exhibition hall, with a thorough drainage system, thus allowing the free use of water with hose or otherwise as may be required to keep plants on exhibition in good condition and permitting the continuance of the larger shows for a period of two weeks or more if desired. As stated in our issue of last week the entire cost of building and land is to be about $510,000. The building committee consists of Pres. F. H. Appleton, Prof. C. S. Sargent, Wm. J. Stewart, Geo. A. Nickerson and Chas. F. Curtis. The architects are Wheelwright & Haven and the contract exclusive of heating and ventilating has been let to C. A. Dodge.

A Ten Years' Retrospect.

[Read by Wm J. Stewart, Secretary of the Society of American Florists, before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, June 5, 1900.]

A decade seems a fairly long time when one is looking forward, but it passes rapidly and, looking back, we are astonished at its brevity. The young man lives in the future, but as age comes upon him he is inclined more and more to indulge in meditation over by-gone days. If one who has reached or passed the meridian of life wishes to retain youthful associates and retard as long as possible the evidences of his rapidly accumulating years, let him watch out and avoid getting too much into the habit of everlastingly telling what happened ten, twenty or forty years ago. A little of it is all right, but carry it beyond a reasonable limit and one is apt to find his listeners reduced to a bunch of old fogies like himself. Knowing this, I have approached the subject assigned me by your committee with some misgivings, not being disposed as yet to line up in the columns of "has beens." Without, however, indulging too freely in tiresome retrospect or exploring too deeply in ancient history, we may, perhaps, spend a brief time profitably in reviewing our achievements for the past decade and thus acquire fresh courage and incentive to face the problems which await us in the future.

Ten years ago the Society of American Florists was in its sixth year. The Buffalo convention had passed into history. The Boston fraternity were busily engaged in the work of preparation for the approaching visit of the national society to the Hub. The Florists' Club of Philadelphia was already a prosperous young organization with a proud record and a promising outlook, while here and there throughout the country the good example set by them was being imitated and florists everywhere were awakening, for the first time in their lives, to the grand social and material advantages afforded by these useful local bodies.

So ready had the national society found the field and so effectively had it started in on the work to which it had pledged itself that, even then, the record of its services in the cause was one of which it might rightly feel proud. From the convention reports of the period we learn what questions were being discussed and what important problems we were endeavoring to solve. The standard flower pot had just been adopted and the trade was in the transition period from the old, unsystematic conditions to the improved order of things, which it now seems hard to believe we could have dispensed with for so long a time. Yet, as with all reforms, the change was not made without opposition nor was it accepted with unanimity even by those who would benefit most. A perusal of the records of the trade exhibitions at our annual conventions will bring us to realize, as much as anything else, the great practical strides we have been making, and the many devices and improvements that date their introduction from their exhibition on these occasions bear testimony to the ingenuity and genius of our colleagues whom we are thus encouraging to develop those practical and mechanical industries so closely linked with our own profession.

The comparative merits of steam and hot water heating for greenhouses furnished a prolific theme for discussion in the earlier days and how hot the supporters of each system were wont to get! Scientific versus practical education for young gardeners—ah! there was a veritable jaw breaker. While it is true that questions such as these are rarely settled for good and all and that the lapse of time is often the only tribunal that can determine the facts, yet the educational value of their discussion can hardly be over-estimated. Jumping over the intervening years, who will say that, in our profession to-day, both practical and scientific knowledge do not exist in much greater degree than ever before, or that we have yet reached that stage where we have a sufficient supply of either of them? Although we scarcely realize how great is the advance until we sit down and compare the olden time with the present, the problem of the higher education is slowly but surely settling itself. The floricultural "world do move" and, whether or not we individually desire it, we have all been advancing steadily with it, so that, to set back the average intelligence of the florists' trade as it exists to-day to the average as it was ten years ago, would be a calamity as great as, if not greater than, it would be to reconstruct every feature of our modern greenhouses according to the standard existing prior to that time.

McMillan's memorable satire on the prevalent style of formal gardening was the most notable feature of the Buffalo convention. It precipitated a controversy that extended over several years and was the severest blow ever dealt in this country against the artificial and abnormal in gardening. The seed planted at that time has been bearing fruit ever since. The reform in the matter of plant nomenclature which has taken place can scarcely be realized except by those who knew what were the conditions existing up to a dozen years ago and who remember the delight with which the agitation of the subject and the appointment of a committee by the S. A. F. was welcomed by the suffering trade all over the country. Thanks to that movement, plants are no longer renamed at will by unscrupulous or ignorant dealers and humbug has given way to reliability. Few committees ever accomplished so much with so little effort. There were a few short, sharp tussles at the outset and then publicity and public approval took up the work and helped prepare the way for the systems of registration which are proving so serviceable to-day in protecting the right of the originator and of the buyer.

Thus we find our entire profession elevated in a practical way through the interchange of experience and intercommunion of bright, intellectual minds which our trade organizations, together with the invaluable co-operation of an enterprising trade press, have made possible. With aggressive persistence and far reaching effort the campaign of education goes forward. The fittest are forging to the front as greater intelligence gives a well-directed impulse to enterprise. The floricultural trade is becoming barren ground for adventurers. Catalogue men and advertisers are more careful in their representation of the goods they offer, not alone because of a higher integrity but also because they know that they are dealing with a more enlightened clientele. It doesn't pay, nowadays, to misrepresent varieties; it doesn't pay to ship stale flowers as fresh; it doesn't pay to raise "any old thing" for the plant or flower market; the buyers are too well informed to be handled that way any longer. On the other hand, the man of doubtful responsibility or unsavory record finds it more and more difficult to obtain credit, as the old, loose habits give way to correct business methods. For the remarkable progress in cultural skill, too, the improvement in varieties of florists' flowers, and the advancement in gardening art along rational lines, we are deeply indebted to the influence and work of our societies. It was organization that gave us the chrysanthemum shows and made possible the tremendous wave of popularity that flower enjoyed. Organization has in a few years raised the carnation to an eminence which it could not otherwise have reached in our lifetime.

Looking back over ten years and comparing men and conditions as they existed then and as we see them to-day, there are in evidence a much smaller percentage of those who "know it all." Positive opinions are not so prevalent and instead of the "knowing shake of the head" is seen a healthy desire to learn and to improve. The intolerance that in the past fostered a disposition to mislead the enquirer has given way to a generous spirit that recognizes our obligations one to another, engenders that good feeling between business rivals whereby each recognizes that he, individually, does not hold a patent on all the integrity and that his fellow florist is not necessarily a rascal because he does business on the same street. The incentive in all this is organization, which, by bringing us into personal contact with each other, has enlarged our business capacity, strengthened our executive ability and developed our common sense so that, instead of wasting time and effort in trying to pull one another down, we unite with a will to uplift the whole outfit. Even this is uphill work. Deep seated prejudices cannot be attacked without stirring up opposition and the process of correcting abuses involves trouble for somebody's toes, always.

In the AMERICAN FLORIST of ten years ago last September we read the following: "From its inception the Society of American Florists has been a chosen mark of the critics. At first they would hardly allow it a twelve month in which to die and be buried. When that period had passed, a rousing meeting closing the year and a new prediction must be hazarded, they saw swift decay in the rule of cliques and in other dimly outlined evils. The filth annual meeting just closed has proven no exception in its disappointment to this class. They said the end had been reached and all the changes rung, the florists had learned all the society could teach. What a further disappointment will it be then to know that the universal opinion is that in all that makes the gathering of real benefit to the florist the last is still the best." Well, the S. A. F. is still a very lively corpse and apparently growing more tenacious and invincible every year.

And how has the Philadelphia club been progressing during all this time? Sorry to remind you of it and wouldn't do it except for the sake of comparison, but according to the records of the bowling tournament at Buffalo in 1889, Philadelphia had the honor of having made the lowest score in the series, 571. Glance at the score books to-day and tell us whether organization is helpful or not! Invincible with the balls, the gun or the shuffle-board—more trophies in the show case than are possessed of by "the whole push" of florists' organizations put together—the Florists' Club of Philadelphia is a "peach" and a shining example of what organization and a fraternal standing shoulder to shoulder together can accomplish.

In Boston our social opportunities in societies and clubs seem to have developed a fondness for good living rather than for athletic diversions and the only active florist's organization has a banquet at every meeting. Thus we are assured of having every member in that sublime condition consequent upon a well filled interior, when he is at the highest degree of geniality. I trust you will not accuse me of unseemly boasting, but I am inclined to think that Boston stands as pre-eminent in gastronomy as does Philadelphia in athletics. Her trophies won in many a hard fought tournament are not to be seen in any show case but are evidenced in the ample and constantly increasing waist circumference of her representatives! Yes, Boston is matchless, too, in her own favorite game and she is about to build a horticultural hall big enough to hold all her solid men without crowding and still have room left for our friends from everywhere, whom we hope to be able to welcome on and after May 1, 1901, in one of the grandest edifices ever dedicated to horticulture.

The individual benefits in numberless ways through the wholesome contact with his fellows which organization encourages. How many eloquent orators, how many astute parliamentarians, how many exquisite singers have come to light under the quickening influence of this great developer, entertaining us unselfishly and brightening our existence by their admirable social traits that otherwise might have remained dormant for all time. The evolution of the "Brave Old Duke of York" is alone a triumph sufficient to justify the formation of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia if it never accomplished another thing. Its gifted yet unpretentious exponent has given more genuine pleasure in its tuneful strains, so artlessly rendered, than has been derived from any other social feature of our national gatherings. Philadelphia is well supplied with such congenial spirits. Your grandest trophies are not exhibited in that show case that adorns your club room but are safely stored in the breasts of a thousand fellow florists who have tasted your boundless hospitality, well lubricated with the good cheer which John Westcott dispenses so liberally. I recall, by the way, that Mr. Westcott, ten years ago, gave it as his opinion that a retailer should make not less than 100 per cent profit on all flower sales. Wonder whether his views have changed any with the lapse of a half score of years?

Notwithstanding all the good accomplished, there is still plenty to do, many things proposed but not yet a reality. A reliable chart of the hail belt is wanted; all the scoundrels are not yet blacklisted, the imaginative newspaper horticulturist still revels in wonderland and the "crape chaser's" own door bell is still minus the crape. We are yet without the blue dahlia, although in New York you can now buy the wonderful "Tuba rugosa" which "blooms in three weeks, thirty-six distinct colors on one plant," for a few pennies. The national flower still blushes unseen, the mealy bug continues regular at his meals and the eel worm still has a wiggle on. The "floral artist" has not quite ceased to construct steamboats of carnations nor the landscape artist to build Jacob's ladders of alternanthera and the "mossback" is growing mossier and mossier and more difficult to stampede as the years roll on.

Organization is concentrated power. It gives courage to the faint hearted; under its beneficent rule intellects are awakened to activity, the strong help to sustain the weak and the weak help to encourage the strong; selfishness is eliminated as we learn the humane principle that what concerns one concerns all and our eyes are opened to the utter barrenness of a life where trading and hustling, brow beating and slave driving, untempered with neighborly forbearance, unselfish deeds and kindly consideration for the feelings and welfare of our fellow man, is the one controlling idea.

Help your society; it will help you. The societies are as yet only feeling their way and cutting out their work in the rough. How tremendous would be their power if every florist in the land was enrolled and would undertake to do for the common good as his share, even one quarter as much as he has benefited from the work of others! In the coming ten years we may expect to see a greater proportionate advancement than for the past decade in everything that goes to make our profession honorable or honored. Just how great the stride depends upon individual effort. If our organizations would attain to their highest usefulness, every member should be enlisted as a worker and this can only be done by making our scope so comprehensive that each individual, whatever his circumstances, will see in it something to fit his case.

There are many broad questions and far reaching issues that can be dealt with much more effectively by the national society than by the local organizations. It is one of the duties that the local club owes to the cause generally and to its members individually, to foster the interests of the national society within its own ranks. This advice, however, is superfluous in Philadelphia. The fullest measure of loyalty and earnest support has here been ever given to the S. A. F., from its inception up to the present moment, and were Pennsylvania's part in the annals of the national organization blotted out, it would be an irreparable disaster. To urge you to show up in goodly numbers at the coming convention in New York is also unnecessary, I know. It goes without saying that if any other city in the country is ambitious for the honor of sending the biggest and merriest delegation to that great event, they will have to do some tall hustling. But you'll make no mistake in coming.

New York is fully aroused and will acquit herself nobly. The enthusiastic support being given to those entrusted with the work of preparation is remarkable. It comes from all sides—rose growers, carnation growers and plantsmen; bulb dealers and supply men, wholesalers and retailers; seedsmen, nurserymen, builders and boiler men—all seem actuated by the same generous rivalry and emulation as to who shall do the most. And the resultant gain to New York floriculture it is impossible to estimate. No doubt there will be some croakers; they are with us always. Some men croak incessantly and the only apparent reason is that there's a pleasure in being a croaker which none but croakers know. In spite of them, in spite of their unfriendliness, and our own inevitable mistakes, we have every reason to believe that co-operative and fraternal sentiment is stronger to-day than ever before in the history of American floriculture. Of the past we have a right to feel proud; for our future we have good reason to feel confident. Let us so direct our organized effort that the historian of ten years hence will find in our acts much to praise and nothing to condemn.

THE TEMPLE SHOW THE MOST IMPORTANT HORTICULTURAL EVENT OF THE YEAR.—SPACE INADEQUATE FOR THE WEALTH OF FINE STOCK SHOWN.—A GREAT VARIETY OF EXCELLENT MATERIAL STAGED.—SHOW AN ADVANCE OVER PREVIOUS YEARS.—ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY SELECTS TULIPS FOR DISTINCTION.—E. G. HILL BUYING PELARGONIUMS.—SOME FINE SORTS FOR THE AMERICAN TRADE.

The Temple show has for some years been looked upon as the most important horticultural event of the season and it seems to increase in importance each year. Unfortunately the space at the disposal of the Royal Horticultural Society is limited, and quite inadequate to the demands of exhibitors. The space available this year, May 23 to 25, was only 12,000 feet, while the demand was for 30,000 feet, the result being that many good things were crowded out, while many of the exhibits were packed too closely to be seen to advantage. However, taking it as a whole, it was a grand show, the most important addition being the large groups of hardy subjects arranged on the lawn in the open. Orchids were again the principal feature, both trade and private growers being well represented, and the exhibits included many very striking novelties. Fruit trees in pots were an imposing feature and consisted chiefly of peaches and nectarines. Those from the gardens of L. de Rothschild, which are close to the society's Chiswick gardens, showing that it is still possible to grow fruit to perfection close to smoky London. Roses were well shown but did not include many startling novelties. Carnations were largely in evidence, especially the Mamaison type, a new crimson named H. J. Jones being considered a great acquisition. Of other sorts suitable for pot culture Herbert Cutbush, brilliant scarlet, which gained an award, may be looked upon as a great improvement. Only one exhibit of cannas was made but these were very fine, both culture and varieties being all that could be desired. Though too early in the season to be seen at their best, some good exhibits of begonias were made, the flowers of the double varieties being of enormous size. Both double and single varieties show some advance in size of flowers and habit of plants.

The hybrids of Azalea mollis and A. Sinensis were well shown, Anthony Koster, Alphonse Lavellee, Wm. A. E. Endz and Glory of Boskoop being very conspicuous and worthy of the consideration of all growers. The varieties of Azalea Indica were also exhibited, grown in English style as pyramids and also as grown in Ghent, round, flat specimens so densely covered with bloom that no foliage could be seen. Rhododendrons were well displayed, the variety Pink Pearl being one of the glories of the show. One group was edged with Sedum palustre and made a pretty effect. This hardy plant is worth looking after. Two large groups of caladiums were shown of fine quality; among the new sorts Mrs. James H. Veitch was noticeable. Gloxinias were well staged, both culture and varieties being superb; but there was an absence of the fine spotted varieties. Ferns were well represented but there was an absence of novelties. Herbaceous calceolarias were very conspicuous, four exhibitors being excellently represented.

Some very good arrangements of alpine plants were made and these proved quite an attractive feature of the show. A large frame of twenty-four tubs containing different varieties of nymphæas was a novel feature, but with the exception of N. stellata, which was very fine, they were not far enough advanced to be very attractive. Cut flowers were very numerous, one of the most interesting displays being sweet peas in upwards of fifty varieties. Tulips, especially of the Darwin type, were largely shown; Spanish irises were bright and attractive; all classes of herbaceous subjects which flower at this season were well represented. The special arrangements of cut flowers which often prove such an attractive feature of a show, were entirely eliminated. Some fine examples of fruit were much admired, but unfortunately there were no "tasting orders" so we could not test the quality. Altogether the exhibition may be regarded as an advance on previous years and on the whole the arrangements were carried out in a most satisfactory manner, reflecting great credit to all concerned.

The Royal Horticultural Society has made a trial of tulips in the open ground this season, the bulbs being supplied by several of the leading growers and importers. From the very large number of varieties grown the following were selected by the floral committee as being worthy of distinction: David Tenier, Cottage Maid, Imperator Rubrorum, Tournesol, double; Thomas Moore, La Reine, La Belle Alliance, Queen of the Netherlands, Pink Beauty, Dussart, Admiral Reinier, Hector, El Toreador, Joost Van Vondel, and the white variety Grand Duc de Russie, and Duchess de Parma. Of the above H. J. Jones was the largest contributor, having sent ten out of the seventeen varieties. In most instances the same varieties were sent by several growers. There are many fine varieties left out of this list, but I believe these have previously received awards, and the old varieties named are those which had not previously received recognition. I think it would have been far more useful to horticulture if a list of the best varieties of the various colors had been given without regard to previous awards, and the new varieties specially noticed. However, those not already acquainted with the above named sorts will not do wrong in adding them to their list for the coming season.

Ivy-leaved Pelargonium Mrs. J. G. Day is a recent addition to the hybrid, semi-double section. It is of a free branching habit, the flowers are produced in good trusses and are of a vivid scarlet. It is certainly a great advance and likely to become a leading market plant of the future. Mr. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was much struck with it when he visited H. J. Jones's Lewisham nursery and secured a large stock of it. Mr. Hill also secured stock of another of Mr. Jones's introductions, a hybrid between the zonal and ivy-leaved, named Achievement. The large, full, double flowers are of a soft shade of pink. Mr. Jones received an award from the Royal Horticultural Society for this several years ago, but it is not so generally grown as it deserves to be. To grow the ivy-leaved pelargoniums successfully requires care. They should be potted in a fairly good compost pressed very firmly. They must be kept growing, but must not be over-fed, for this will result in vigorous growth and little flower, but if too much starved the results will be equally disastrous. For early spring flowering a little more heat may be given than for the zonal section, with plenty of light and air, and above all see that the plants are kept free from green fly or other insects. With a little care in their culture there is no class of plants which is more appreciated. Gallee is another which every grower should add to his stock if he does not already possess it. H.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—LOW PRESSURE PERIOD SUCCEEDS THE MEMORIAL DAY ACTIVE DEMAND. — PRICES ON ROSES VERY LOW.—PÆONIES ARE PLENTIFUL. —NOTES OF THE EUROPEAN TOURISTS AND PISCATORIAL EXPERTS —THE DENIZENS OF "EASY STREET" BOOK PASSAGE FOR PARIS.—RAYNOR WINS A RAFFLE.—OTHER NOTES.

It did not require many days to restore the low pressure conditions of the cut flower market, which had been so effectively disturbed by the inroads of the Decoration day demand. In place of telegraph boys with urgent calls for roses at $4 or $5 a hundred, after the lapse of three days, we were back to Greeks willing to consider offers at $4 or $5 a thousand, and other flowers have taken a similar drop. So far as roses are concerned there is, however, little probability of a continuous deluge. Growers are not likely to postpone their overhauling and replanting any longer for the sake of the paltry sum that inferior material will bring in the market, and the demand on account of June weddings, school commencements and steamer departures can be relied upon to take good care of the finer grade stock for at least three weeks of this month. Outdoor roses have not yet begun to make any great impression. As to whether they will or not, in their season, depends upon the sort of weather we get. A few scorching dry days, such as almost invariably occur at the height of the rose season, will make short work of the outdoor competition. The only samples yet in evidence are the Jacqs and red material begins to feel the effects of these and the red pæonies. The latter are very plentiful; in fact there are pæonies in immense quantities everywhere, and of all colors, and they have got down to a pretty low figure. Sweet peas, which took a stiff position last week, have got back in price to where they were before Decoration day, but are improved decidedly in quality. Gardenias, stephanotis and white orchids are being called for and since the outdoor crop is finished, lily of the valley has advanced.

Thos. W. Weathered sailed on the Lucania, June 2, and B. Suzuki will sail for Europe, and eventually Japan, on the Etruria on June 9. Accompanying him will be Chas. Fremd, of Rye, N. Y., who may be induced to go the entire trip to the Mikado's dominions. On the same steamer Alfred Dimmock is also booked. Between the society of such a versatile artist as Mr. Suzuki and the prospect of congratulating his countrymen around St. Albans upon the progress of South African events Mr. Dimmock is not likely to find the trip a bit tedious. Mr. Suzuki's partner, Mr. Iida, will take his place at the helm during the former's absence, having arrived overland on May 23, via Seattle, which he reached on May 7 per steamer Tosa Maru. Another western arrival is L. G. Pfunder, of Portland, Oregon, accompanied by his two daughters, enroute to the Paris exposition, where Mr. Pfunder goes as secretary of the United States commissioners. He will sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Joseph E. Rolker is packing up his canes and golf sticks preparatory to sailing on the Kaiser Frederick, June 7, and J. M. Keller's medicine for sea sickness is addressed to steamer Graf-Waldersee, which sails in latter part of June. Julius Roehrs says he has not made up his mind yet as to a transatlantic voyage. If nothing but "making up our minds" stood in the way there are a few of us left here who wouldn't take many minutes to settle it. How comfortable it must feel to live on "Easy street"! Andrew McKnight has gone away on a fishing trip and several others of the craft have been detected gazing in the windows of the fishing tackle stores and making memoranda of steel rods, brown hackles, multiplying reels and mosquito liniment. Maybe these latter will have just as much fun as their more ambitious colleagues who go to Paris.

John I. Raynor has won a bicycle at a raffle. He says it is the first thing he ever did win and that had it been anything of any use to him he never would have been so lucky. He will exchange it for a steam yatcht or a roof garden or will have it gilded and hung up over the desk as a mascot.

A. Herrmann is enlarging his office. He reports business in all kinds of florists' supplies as far in advance of the record for March, April and May.

MEMORIAL DAY BROUGHT MUCH BUSINESS. —THE PRESIDENT SENDS WREATHS TO CEMETERIES.—HEAVY RAIN.—A GARDENER'S ACCIDENT.—HYBRID LILIES.

Memorial day was a busy season all around. Pæonies played a prominent part and were fine and plentiful. Roses and other outdoor flowers were fair. In general prices were good. Services at Arlington Cemetery were very imposing, and the decorations were elaborate and tasteful. Many beautiful designs could be seen at the graves of the most noted men. President McKinley had seven large wreaths made at the White House conservatories, of roses, pæonies, cycas leaves, asparagus and adiantums, one each for the graves of Gen. Sheridan, Gen. McCook and Gen. Carroll, at Arlington; and one was placed on the tomb of Washington at Mount Vernon; another went to the tomb of Gen. Grant, one to the tomb of Gen. Logan and one was placed beside the monument to the unknown dead at Arlington.

At the propagating garden they have been hybridizing Lilium longiflorum and L. Harrisii. Seed was sown in May, 1899, but did not germinate until October, and began to flower in May, 1900. Most of the bulbs are about an inch in diameter and in 4-inch pots. The flowers are as fine as from any imported bulbs I have seen. The flower stalks come from the side of the bulb and are from ten to fourteen inches long, with one flower.

Henry Pfister, head gardener at the White House, met with a painful accident some weeks ago, lacerating the muscles and rupturing a blood vessel in his left leg while in the act of springing from one of the fountains, and his friends will be pleased to hear that he is about again, although compelled to use crutches.

Saturday, June 2, we had a severe thunder storm. Three and one-half inches of rain fell in about three hours and many cellars were flooded. The lower parts of the Botanic Garden were under water. A. Gude's residence at Anacostia was struck by lightning but very little damage done. P. G.

WEDDINGS CONSUME QUANTITIES OF MATERIAL.—ROSES GROWING POOR.—SWEET PEAS AND PÆONIES LARGELY IN EVIDENCE.—THE PREVAILING PRICES.—JUNE MEETING OF THE CLUB.—A WEDDING IN THE TRADE.—DAVID, THE SON OF WILLIAM, OBEYS HIS FATHER'S CALL.—NOTES.

Numerous June weddings have given the artists fresh opportunities to show what they could do. All classes of trade have been benefited in this direction, as both large and small affairs have been chronicled in the columns of the daily press the past week. In addition to this there have been a number of commencements at which quantities of flowers were used. Beauties are getting scarce; each succeeding week sees a quantity of last season's stock thrown out to make room for the new plants. This together with the very changeable weather, one day warm the next cool, keeps the dealers on the jump to get good stock; $1.50 per dozen now buys about the best, although a few of the selects grade a bit higher. Teas are fast going down the hill; the flowers are getting much smaller and most of the foliage is thick with mildew. A few Kaiserins are the exception, some growers having fine stock, and there are also some good Meteors; $5 to $6 is asked for the best of the teas, while the finest Kaiserins command $8. Outside Jacq roses are coming in good shape; in fact all the outdoor roses look well, the cool weather bringing them on slowly; $1 to $2 per hundred is the price. The Crimson Ramblers will be out next week and from present appearances will make a handsome display. Carnations are still in good supply, although they are getting much smaller; $1 per hundred buys the best common, while the fancies bring $1.50 to $2. Sweet peas are now a great factor and are largely used; 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred is the price. Pæonies are in everybody's way, they are so numerous. The streets are lined with them, although they are so bulky and so cheap that the fakirs say there is nothing in them. They were a great help to the decorator, however, and many a wedding display would have had to be laid out on new lines without them; prices have varied from $1 to $3 per hundred.

The June meeting of the Florists' Club last Tuesday was fairly well attended.

The feature was the paper read by Secretary Stewart, of Boston. The essay committee did a good thing for the club when they imposed this task on Mr. Stewart. His history of what has been done by organization in the past decade was very complete and, presented as it was, in his original style, was much enjoyed. He received a rousing vote of thanks for his effort. The subject for the next meeting is "how to get the most practical good out of the coming convention." John Westcott is to tell us how to do this. Everybody knows that as promoter and manager of personally conducted tours to conventions, Mr. Westcott stands without a peer, and we have no doubt he will be able to tell us just how to be most benefited by such a visit. Mr. P. Shaw, (P stands for poet) of New York, made a few remarks in his usual happy style and told of the warm reception that is being prepared for the visitors to the S. A. F. convention in his city next August.

David Scott has left us. We are sorry to lose David; he was not long here, but he soon demonstrated that he was a good fellow, an efficient, earnest worker and a gentleman. He left rather suddenly. In fact his father needed him and, being a dutiful son, David obeyed the call There was something said, some time ago, about a young man who could not get up in the morning, but nobody hereabouts believed it of David. The "old gentleman" will have to get a move on if he beats David now. He has spent a winter in Philadelphia and he will set a pace that will keep most of the boys about him hustling to keep up with him.

Alexander B. Scott was married to Miss Sara Coburn Burpee, sister of W. Atlee Burpee, last Wednesday afternoon at Fordhook. The happy couple have the best wishes of the entire trade for a long and happy life.

George C. Watson and several friends from this city will accompany Secretary Stewart on his annual June fishing trip to Maine.

Robert Craig has been spending a few days in Washington. K.

MARKET AGAIN OVERBURDENED WITH CHEAP MATERIAL.—PÆONIES THE ONLY ITEM WHICH HAS HELD ITS OWN.—MILDEW ON THE ROSES.—HORTICULTURISTS GATHER AT THE ART INSTITUTE.—A VARIETY OF JOTTINGS OF GREATER OR LESS INTEREST.

The cut flower market has been gorged again this week and the surplus has extended all along the line, including every item of supply with the single exception of pæonies. Of these the available stock varied from day to day but there is apt to be an end to the condition of moderate supply with a few warm days to bring out the buds. Of roses and carnations the cuts have assumed large proportions and a considerable portion of the stock was necessarily forced out through the medium of the street Greeks. There are now large quantities of sweet peas, but Blanche Ferry continues to outnumber many times over all the other varieties in market. The cape jasmines are about done for but the outdoor lily of the valley is coming in of extra fine quality, some of it being almost as good as the average forced stock. It goes without saying that the increase in supply has been attended by deterioration of quality in all flowers, but it is really remarkable that, with the varied weather we have been experiencing, the stock grades up as well as it does. With the heat of summer at one moment and the approach of frost the next, it is not unnatural that all the blooms should show the effects and that roses should be badly mildewed with all but the most careful growers.

Brant & Noe have completed their new range of six houses and have them planted with Beauties. They report trade as particularly good this week, and are glad to have the help of their big field of pæonies, from which they are just beginning to cut, to help supply the wants of their customers.

Warren H. Manning, of Boston, secretary of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association, which has been in session here this week, was called to Lake Geneva to-day to advise as to the best methods of improving the McCormick estate there.

Joseph Reeve, Walter W. Adams and Elmer M Jerauld, all with J. C. Murray, of Peoria, Ill., spent a couple of days in the city within the past week. They report business as having been excellent, especially the plant trade.

Thomas B. Meehan, of Germantown, Philadelphia, has been in town this week and will remain until the close of the nurserymen's convention, having a report on custom house affairs to present to that body.

It would have afforded Walter Retzer a great deal of pleasure to have heard what Mrs. McCormick told the Park and Outdoor Art Association this week about the offense to art perpetrated in Chicago parks.

The pæonies are blooming at P. S. Peterson & Son's nursery and the display is worthy of the admiration of the many visitors who make an annual pilgrimage to Rose Hill for this show.

Chas. B. Weathered, of Thos. W. Weathered's Sons and treasurer of the New York Florists' Club, is a visitor who will be in town for a few days.

Poehlmann Bros. report that the sale of chrysanthemum plants is fully up to their expectations and indicates no decrease in plantings this year.

George Reinberg began to cut new Beauties and Meteors this week and the blooms were excellent for the first of the new crop.

Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, assistant superintendent of horticulture at the Pan-American Exposition, arrived in town Thursday

C. H. Fisk is sitting up nights at Randall's and feels that he is in his proper element once more, for business is good there.

McKellar & Winterson say that baskets are meeting with a heavier sale than has been noted in several years past.

The nurserymen will gather at the Chicago Beach Hotel next week and the seedsmen at the Grand Pacific.

Alfred Hildred reports the spring trade excellent in the vicinity of 3030 Indiana avenue.

Phil. Hauswirth is greatly pleased with his new location in the Auditorium Annex.

TRADE VERY GOOD.—STOCK ABUNDANT BUT SOME LINES SHORT OF DEMAND.—EVERYONE PLEASED WITH MEMORIAL DAY BUSINESS.—A TOUR OF THE VARIOUS ESTABLISHMENTS.—NOTES OF INTEREST HERE AND THERE.

Business for the past week has been very good and a great many flowers were disposed of. Roses are not plentiful and prices are good considering the quality. First-class Beauties go readily at $6 per dozen and there are not near enough to go around. Brides and Bridesmaids sell at $1.50 per dozen for select stock, poorer quality at $1. Carnations are quite plentiful and hold up well in price, Crane at 60 cents, Flora Hill, 50 cents; Scott, Cartledge and Bon Ton, 40 cents per dozen. Sweet peas are in great abundance and the quantity disposed of at 35 cents per bunch is enormous. Pæonies are in their glory, coming in just right for commencements. Wilmore, of dahlia fame, is sending in some extra large blooms which find a ready sale at $2 per dozen. Memorial day was a hummer so far as business is concerned. The call was for cut flowers in general, pot plants going very slowly. Glauber & Webb had an immense stock which was well cleaned out. The Park Floral Co. made a very fine window display and Phil. Scott says that sales were something great, the day being nearly as busy as Easter. A little further up Sixteenth street Charlie Thiess found the only fault to be that he ran out of stock. American Beauties had first call and it was the busiest Decoration day on record. The Gallup Floral Co. claims it their best Decoration day also.

At the Park Floral Company's greenhouses everything looks neat and clean and the stock is very good. Roses and carnations are particularly fine and in full crop. Sweet peas in the large carnation house are one mass of bloom. The varieties being forced are Extra Early Blanche Ferry, Prima Donna and New Countess. Mr. Bloy, the foreman shows a batch of 1000 lily of the valley which will be just right for commencements. A house recently planted with American Beauties is showing excellent breaks. All Brides and Bridesmaids are grafted and Beauty is being tried in large quantities. A fine batch of Japanese longiflorums are coming on for the June weddings, also Lilium auratum and L. speciosum, which will come a trifle later.

At the greenhouses of the Colfax Avenue Floral Company the ever genial Mr. Beer is as busy as a hen with thirteen chicks. Cut flower business has been very good there and as the place is in the direct line to the cemetery they have a fine plant trade. They are building two houses for carnations and expect to add more later on.

It has rained for eight Sundays in succession. What do you think of that for a dry climate! June 2 we had quite a hail storm, but fortunately it did no damage.

There is soon to be a match game of bowling between the Colfax Avenue Floral Company and the Park Floral Company employes.

At City Park Superintendent Graham has set out many thousands of bedding plants and everything is in excellent shape.

Phil. Scott seems to best the venerable John Berry at bowling. Mr. Berry doesn't like it and plainly says so.

Al. Mauff, of Harman, is very busy rebuilding some of his houses. MUM.

MILWAUKEE.—Fred. Holton, of Holton & Hunkel Co., was married, June 6, to Miss Lillian M. Loell, at the residence of her sister, 790 Booth street, this city. The wedding was celebrated by relatives only. Mr. and Mrs. Holton will be at home shortly after a brief trip in western and central Wisconsin. Mr. Holton is one of the most popular young men in the trade, and has the congratulations and kind wishes of numerous friends.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO., CHICAGO.

It is none too early to make arrangements for attending the S. A. F. convention at New York in August.

PROF. B. T. GALLOWAY, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., states that the carnation crop in this country represents an annual value of over $4,000,000 and that it is constantly increasing.

A FRENCH writer states that mustard and other cruciferous weeds may be destroyed in grain fields by spraying with a solution of sulphate of iron. The work should be done when the weeds have four or five leaves. The solution recommended is a twelve per cent one, using about thirty-six gallons to the acre.

New York Convention, Important Notice!

Members of the Society of American Florists who have attended previous conventions and know something of the discomforts of waiting in line for an opportunity to pay assessments and procure badges do not need to be reminded to forward their dues to the secretary in advance and thereby contribute to their own comfort and facilitate the secretary's work. To those joining the society this year, however, this advice is given with much earnestness. The crowd at the New York convention will be unprecedented. Dues cannot be paid while meetings are in progress and hundreds of applicants will be demanding attention before the opening session on the morning of the first day, the possession of a badge and membership receipt for 1900 being absolutely necessary before any individual can sign the roll book and receive invitation cards for the various entertainments provided by the New York Florists' Club, including the ladies' ride, which is planned for the afternoon of the first day. Memberships paid at any time during the year expire on December 31, so there is no advantage in deferring payment until August. On receipt of $3 from those who have paid membership dues for 1899 and of $5 from all others, certificate and badge for 1900 will be mailed promptly from the secretary's office. Preserve your certificate and bring it to the convention with you.

Lighting Conservatory by Acetylene Gas.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please inform me whether acetylene gas, to be used for lighting, would be injurious to plants in a conservatory? T. McH.

Although I have had no experience with acetylene gas in a conservatory I think I am safe in saying that the effect will be about the same as illuminating gas, and that the injury will vary with the thoroughness with which the gas has been washed. When the generator for acetylene gas is in the cellar there will always be danger from escaping gas, as if it is allowed to reach the plants in the conservatory the results would undoubtedly be disastrous. L. R. T.

Cucumber Troubles.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Under separate cover I mail sample roots and stems of cucumbers, just as taken from the bench. Please let me know what is the trouble and the best way to avoid it. SUBSCRIBER.

The cucumber roots sent in by "Subscriber" are infested with nematodes. These worms live in the soil and attack the roots of nearly all plants. After soil once becomes infested with nematodes and the plants are put out, treatment will avail but little. Much of the trouble from nematode worms may be overcome by carefully selecting the soil and handling it in such a way that it will be thoroughly frozen before it is brought into the house. Sterilizing the soil by means of steam has resulted in much benefit, and where conveniences for carrying out such work are at hand, not only the nematodes, but also other organisms likely to prove injurious to plants, can be killed. A steam pressure of from forty to eighty pounds is necessary to properly sterilize the soil. All parts of the soil must be permeated and the whole heated to a temperature of not less than 200° for several hours. A number of large growers are practicing this method, and notwithstanding the expense, they find it pays.

B. T. GALLOWAY.

Diameter of Smoke Stack.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—We are going to put in one boiler of sixty horse-power (grate surface 4 feet x 4 feet 6 in.) and one of fifty horse-power (grate surface 3 feet 6 inches x 4 feet). We expect to build a smoke stack sixty feet high and wish to know the proper diameter, also whether it should be of greater diameter than one forty feet high? J.

In a general way the height of a smoke stack is proportioned to its diameter and a stack sixty feet high would have a greater diameter than one only forty feet. On the other hand the efficiency of a smoke stack is increased by adding either to its height or diameter and a large smoke stack forty feet in height may be as effective as a smaller one that is sixty feet high. The size desirable for two boilers of the size mentioned depends upon the style of boiler and the size and number of the tubes, but when the chimney is of ample height, as it seems to be in the present instance, it is a good plan to have its area about equal to the area of the tubes in the boilers. MARKET GORGED TO DEMORALIZATION.—ONLY SALES ARE IN BULK AT RIDICULOUS PRICES.—CONDITION IS UNPRECEDENTED.—NOTES.

The cut flower market here is in an utterly demoralized condition. Never before has such a sudden and complete collapse taken place directly following Decoration day. On that day wholesalers' ice boxes were completely empted; two days later their storage capacity was entirely inadequate for the accommodation of the vast accumulation of material of every description that came in, but for which there was no outlet. Since then conditions have remained the same. Roses received are of excellent quality, but with the exception of a few sales for high grade Kaiserins, Beauties and Bridesmaids no opening for their disposition is offered excepting to the street fakir, and at prices, in bulk, that are unquotable. Carnations have taken a similar tumble. There are plenty of sweet peas, pæonies, etc., and some longiflorum lilies that missed Decoration day, but throughout the list there is practically nothing doing. Outdoor roses have not made their appearance in this market yet.

Superintendent Pettigrew has planted about 400 hardy nymphæas and the same number of nelumbiums and other aquatic plants in Ward's pond, Jamaica Plain, this season.

D. J. Murphy, formerly with H. F. A. Lange, Worcester, has gone to take charge of the Fairfield Greenhouses at Springfield.

ADDRESS

W. A. HAMMOND,

107 East Broad St.,

Richmond, Va.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

We have been having bad weather, good weather, all kinds of weather, including a Decoration day trade that was immense. A heavy demand was anticipated and the supply was the largest in years, but sold out clean. Business in cut flowers is now dull, quantities of carnations and roses going to waste. Lilies are about over and what there are go slowly at $1 50 per dozen. A Chicago Greek has commenced operations at the curbstone in the downtown district and sweet peas are being peddled from house to house at 5 cents per bunch. The bedding out season is now at its height and the trade in hanging baskets and boxes is much larger than last year.

Otto Baumann, of Manistee; Frank A. Goecke, of the Petoskey Floral Company, and J. N. Burroughs, of Hastings, Mich., were recent visitors. Mr. Burroughs is building a new greenhouse and was looking for a boiler.

B. E. Wadsworth, of Toronto, Canada, has taken charge of Crabb & Hunter's establishment as foreman. G. F. C.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER RODGERS, Pres.; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

MRS. T. B. SHEPHERD, of Ventura, Cal., who has been quite ill for several weeks, is now able to attend to business.

W. ATLEE BURPEE passed through Chicago, June 7, on his way west. He will meet Mrs. Burpee in California and on his return expects to sail for Europe about July 10.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. E. Button, of the Haines Seed Co., Denver, Colo.; A. Forbes, of Peter Henderson & Co, New York; Miss Ph. Headworth, of Vaughan's Seed Store, New York.

DEALERS in blue grass seed say the crop this year will be fully sixty per cent larger than that harvested for many seasons. Farmers have been unusually successful, and the seed will be of superior quality. A great deal of the seed goes to Germany.

LARGE numbers of seedsmen, wholesale and retail, will visit Chicago next week on the occasion of the annual meetings at the Grand Pacific Hotel of the American Seed Trade Association (June 12-14) and the Wholesale Seed Merchants' League (June 15).

CANADIAN pea growers report long continued dry weather and frosty nights through May, but recently the weather has turned warmer, the night frosts have ceased, and a very fine rain has visited the district, making a great improvement probable in the next ten days. The prospects on the whole now seem favorable.

Settlement of the Leonard Loss.

The loss on the five-story Leonard building at 147 West Lake street, Chicago, owned by C. T. Boal, which was destroyed by fire on the evening of November 1, 1899, was settled June 5 at 80 per cent of the $15,000 insurance, through the agency of R. W. Hosmer & Co. Six companies held risks and all have agreed upon a settlement except the Orient, with a policy of $2,500, which is likely to be arranged on the same lines. The delay is caused through a deal now in progress for the taking over of the Orient's business on a cooperative basis by the London and Lancashire. S. F. Leonard, who occupied the building as a seed warehouse, had $76,500 insurance. Of this sum $45,000 has already been paid. It has been an open question since the fire, which started in the New England Mills adjoining, whether the Leonard building collapsed or was destroyed by fire. The matter was taken to the courts and seemed likely to remain in litigation for a number of years, when the representatives of the different companies came forward and offered to settle. The basis of settlement on the seed stock was sixty-five per cent, which leaves a balance of only $4,725 in process of liquidation.—Chicago Tribune.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting at the Vanderbilt building on Thursday, May 31. Geo. Glassman and Wm. P. Mobam were elected to membership. Thomas Cockburn read an excellent paper on the cultivation of small fruits, which incited a very interesting discussion.

NURSERYMEN say that the Hubbardston apple has been asked for frequently of late.

ORLANDO HARRISON, of J. G. Harrison & Sons, has been elected mayor of Berlin, Md.

ANOTHER session of congress has come to an end without action upon the nurserymen's inspection bill.

THE twenty-fifth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held at Chicago next week, June 13 and 14.

THERE are 110 varieties of lilacs at Highland Park, Rochester, and Ellwanger & Barry have a still greater number of sorts at Mt. Hope Nurseries.

C. A. SEAMAN has retired from the Sedgwick Nursery Co., Sedgwick, Kans., of which he was president, and the management will hereafter be vested in J. P. Schemerhorn.

PROF. J. L. BUDD asserts that the apple called North Star should be known as Dudley's Winter, as that is the name given it by J. W. Dudley, who grew it from seeds of Duchess.

FUNERAL WORK MAKES TRADE FAIRLY ACTIVE. — SCARCITY OF HIGH GRADE STOCK IN MANY LINES.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

Last week, especially the latter part, proved to be very good for funeral work. Several parties report having been nearly swamped with orders on Friday and Saturday. Sunday being the feast of Pentecost in many of the churches, business in the larger portion of the city was brisk. In the wholesale market there is a scarcity of high grade roses, which includes Beauties. In fact all stock of first quality has been none too plentiful this week. Jacq. roses are about over, only a very few were received Wednesday, but sweet peas, centaureas and other stock of this kind is in abundant supply. Only an occasional pæony is seen, and the receipts of irises and callas are getting low. There is only a very limited demand for these flowers at present but throughout the season outdoor stock in general seems to have been in brisk demand.

George Waldbarth contemplates taking a trip to Europe as soon as his busy season is over. He is to make some alterations in his store, adding about twenty-two feet to its depth, which will contain an office to be fitted out with all the latest conveniences. A visit paid him last Sunday afternoon found his stock of cut flowers practically cleaned out.

Shaw Garden was thrown open to the public last Sunday. In accordance with Henry Shaw's will, a Sunday in June and one in September are the only two Sundays in the year on which visitors are allowed. Over 7,000 people passed through the gates, and the garden was pronounced by all to be in better shape than ever for this time of year.

The Ostertag brothers and one helper leave to-night for Elkins, W. Va., to handle the decorations for the wedding of Vincent Kerens, son of R. C. Kerens, the politician.

OUR PASTIMES

Announcements of coming contests or other events of interest to our bowling, shooting and cycling readers are solicited and will be given place in this column.

Gunners, Attention!

All gun clubs intending to compete in the shooting contest at New York city next August are requested to communicate at once with Wm. J. Elliott, secretary of the committee on sports, of the New York Florists' Club, 54 and 56 Dey street, New York city.

At Philadelphia.

There appears to be nothing lacking in the bowling enthusiasm, there being practice games whenever the opportunity offers. There are a number of associate members who are constant bowlers, and the visitor to the alleys rarely wants for a partner or opponent should he care to play. The following is a list of the averages for May, including all bowlers who have rolled ten games or over:

Player	Games	Av	Player	Games	Av
Moss	55	158	Baker	58	131
Harris	83	153	Scott	10	130

With Philadelphia Gunners.

The gunners have their weekly meet, rain or shine, and are always ready for a friendly brush with a rival team as well. Last Tuesday, in connection with their handicap event, they shot a five-man team match with the champion De Lancey school team of this city and won by the close margin of four points. The special contest for the high gun trophy resulted in a tie between Landis and Anderson. In the shoot-off, Anderson won by breaking 24; Landis 23. Summaries:

At the meeting of the bowling club on Monday it was decided that the convention tournament team be selected from members making the highest averages on three games rolled on each meeting night during June and July, only those present at not less than five meetings out of eight to be eligible. CAPTAIN TRAENDLY.

convention. An unprecedented number of teams will compete for the many valuable trophies that are to be offered and the local team, under the auspices of the New York Florists' Club, is actively preparing to give the visitors a hearty welcome and incidentally snatch a trophy or two just to show the proud Philadelphians, boasting Buffalonians and vociferous Chicagoans that they must not expect to have things all their own way. We take pleasure in presenting herewith the portrait of F. H. Traendly, captain of the New York aggregation. The scores published in these columns weekly sufficiently indicate his bowling ability; the portrait shows you how he looks when sitting for his picture; but neither scores nor picture convey any idea of his capacity as a whirlwind coacher in the heat of battle when enthusiasm waxes high and coats, vests and collars are superfluous. So look out for him and his faithful followers next August.

W. M. SCOTT, entomologist for the State of Georgia, says that the peach leaf-curl is particularly bad in the northern part of that commonwealth this season.

Heating Vegetable Houses.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Would it be possible to heat a vegetable house 16 or 18x40 feet for lettuce and radishes, with 1-inch pipe on the sides if I run a 2-inch pipe through the center? If so how many pipes should be used? Would the house be more serviceable running north and south than east and west? Which would you advise, solid beds or benches, to obtain the best results? How would it do to have two beds? D. O. P.

The questioner does not state whether steam or hot water is to be used. For steam the plan proposed would give good results. In addition to the 2-inch steam pipe, from seven to ten 1-inch pipes will be needed according to the width of the house, the section where the house is located, its construction and exposure. For use with hot water 1 inch pipe is rather small, although it would answer. As a supply pipe it will be best to use a 2½-inch, unless two 2-inch are put in. Fourteen or fifteen 1-inch returns should suffice. Seven or eight 2-inch would be far better. The houses may be run in either direction if other conditions make it desirable, but for a narrow, even-span house, north and south is generally preferred. There is little choice between benches and well-drained solid beds. The best results will be obtained with two beds or benches and three walks.

INTERESTING SESSION OF THE FLORISTS' SOCIETY. — DOINGS OF THE BERTERMANNS.—VARIOUS ITEMS IN THE TRADE.

There was an interesting meeting at Garfield Park on the evening of June 5, the rain giving everybody an excuse to stay until a very late hour. The subject for the evening was "Rose Soil," which was thoroughly discussed. The coal committee reported progress. Alvin Schreiber, of Bertermann Bros., had on exhibition a vase of several varieties of carnations, exceptionally fine for this time of year; also a vase of dahlias. Fred. Huckriede, Robert McKain, and J. T. Huntington were appointed a committee to arrange for the annual outing of the society.

J. A. E. Haugh, of Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson, was in the city this week. He reports business flourishing. As the firm is planning an extension of their place and a thorough overhauling of the heating apparatus, Mr. Haugh is looking for pointers on the latter. They will put in two large boilers.

Wm. Bertermann left here Monday morning for Columbus and New York, thence going to Europe. John Bertermann and son, Irvin, have gone to Put-in-Bay and Canada for a few days.

The Bertermann Floral Company has been dissolved, and henceforth will be known by the old name, Bertermann Bros.

The planting season is over and everyone is well satisfied, bedding plants having been sold out cleanly. H. J.

RACINE, WIS.—Mrs. C. W. Pike has given up her business for a year's trip to Arizona and the west.

The May meeting of the Westchester County Gardeners' Association was held May 26, with President Shore in the chair. The attraction of the evening was the exhibition of flowering shrubs by Messrs. Williamson, Anderson and Fraser. Conspicuous in Mr. Williamson's exhibit was Leucothœ Catesbæi and Cytisus laburnum. Mr. Anderson had a fine lot of Magnolia Watsoni, one of the prettiest of the magnolias. Mr. Fraser brought a large collection, perhaps the most striking feature of which were the panicles of the manna ash, Fraxinus ornus, a tree seldom seen in collections but worthy of more attention among ornamentals. An interesting discussion on the pruning of shrubs took place, participated in by Messrs. Duncan, Williamson, Freund, Shore and others. The committee on the annual excursion reported on the arrangements being made and the members present favored Philadelphia as the point of interest to be visited this year.

Lowell, Mass.

Decoration day brought a busy season but everything went off smoothly. Flowers were in great demand, stock good, plenty of it, and it brought good prices. Patten & Roberts' business this year went far ahead of last season, for besides the usual rush, there was lots of funeral work, and every one was kept on the jump for three days and nights. This enterprising firm has just put out one of the finest delivery wagons ever seen in Lowell. It is all black, with gold trimmings.

McManmon has had all he could attend to, selling plenty of bedding plants. Whittet & Co. report good trade.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thresher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. ☞A CHILD can run it.

Just the thing to fight crab grass.

It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

BATCH OF HAPPENINGS JUST INSIDE THE GOLDEN GATE.—SOME BUILDING IN SIGHT.

Angelo Vauttone, with Pelicano & Co., has been laid up for two weeks with a severe fracture of his leg, the result of a fall. The doctor says it will be a month or six weeks before he can work again.

Charles C. Cohen is soon to take unto himself a wife. His bride to be is a very pretty and accomplished young lady and his many friends are offering their warmest congratulations.

Domoto Brothers are building a range of four large greenhouses which will be principally devoted to growing the varieties of carnations originated by John H. Sievers.

E. W. McLellan is to put up a considerable addition to his range of glass this season, with the intention of devoting it to Bridesmaid and Liberty roses.

J. H. Sievers & Company are cutting some very fine carnation blooms, which, in the retail stores, easily bring from $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

Charles Hasalbacker is bringing in some very fine Kaiserin roses, in fact the best that have been in the market this season.

Miss Cohen, formerly on Sutter street, has opened a new store on Polk street.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

Between now and the middle of July, most of the chrysanthemums for exhibition and commercial purposes will be planted upon benches. As there are practically no new ideas to offer as to culture, it seems as though there was but little that could be said upon this subject that would be of interest. However, there may be some beginners who are just taking up this line of work, to whom a few words of advice might be acceptable.

Those desiring early flowers for commercial use, or extra large blooms for the exhibitions, should lose no time in planting. It is inconsistent to expect extra early flowers of good quality if the plants are started late. The sooner the plants are established after June 1, the better the results, all other things considered. It is very often the case that early varieties are sought and even planted as late as the last of July or sometimes the first of August, and probably with the expectation of early blooms. When we take into consideration that buds of early kinds are selected between August 10 and 20, it is quite evident that the plants cannot become sufficiently established in so short a space of time. If the desire is for exhibition blooms the present is none too early for planting, as it is quite important that the plants should be in full vigor, and on an average from two to three and one-half feet in height by September 1, at which date we expect some of the early sorts to form their best buds.

The same soil and style of benches as employed in growing roses and carnations are the most desirable for chrysanthemums, although it will be necessary to see that there is sufficient space between the bench and the glass to allow the plants ample head room. Houses running east and west are much easier to plant than those running in the opposite direction, as it is unnecessary to give so much consideration as to how tall or short the varieties grow, inasmuch as each variety can be planted in blocks, and receive full benefit from the sun without being overshadowed by those adjacent, while in houses running north and south, if a dwarf variety is planted between two tall ones, it is very apt to suffer for the want of sunlight. We generally plant about eight inches apart each way, and prefer to have the soil fairly firm before beginning.

It was formerly considered necessary to shade the houses at planting time, but this we have discontinued entirely and give them the full benefit of the sun, believing such a course gives shorter jointed plants of greater vigor than can be produced by the shading process. Young, thrifty plants from small pots are the best; in fact, we prefer those that have not been potted more than a week or ten days, so that the young, active roots are just breaking through to the sides of the pot. Such stock will immediately start off, so that in a few weeks it will be in good, vigorous condition. It sometimes happens that such stock is not at hand, and for want of means or other reasons, it is deemed impracticable to procure them.

Those having plants that have not been potted for a considerable time, and possibly have attained the height of twelve or fourteen inches, being destitute of leaves at the bottom, and considerably hardened, may use them and expect very fair results. In planting such stock remove the lower leaves up to a point where the plant is in fairly soft condition, or rather where the bark has not become hardened, and plant down to this point. This will necessitate layering them, the same as tall and weak tomatoes are often planted in the field. The whole stem will make root in a short time. When first planted the bench gives rather a peculiar appearance, with all the plants laying tight to the ground, but the soft tips will soon assume an upright position and in the course of a few weeks appear as though they had been selected stock.

If no provision has been made for stock of the late kinds, such as flower for Thanksgiving and later, no time should be lost in getting the cuttings into the sand. If they are soft, given plenty of water and carefully shaded, they will make roots in about ten days. Pot as soon as the roots are half an inch long, and this will give fine stock for planting next month. Cuttings of the earlier kinds may also be put in now for single stem pot plants and small market plants.

ELMER D. SMITH.

GRAFTING CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—You will oblige by informing me as to the modus operandi in grafting chrysanthemums. E. B. J.

In grafting chrysanthemums select the end of a shoot or branch with soft growth on the stock plant, cut the top away and make a slit about one and one-half inches deep in the remaining portion of the shoot, from the top downward, using a sharp knife. The incision should be made so that it will receive the base of the scion, or graft, which should be cut in the form of a wedge. For stocks and scions select material with stems of about the same age and diameter. Inserting the scion in the stock, tie firmly with raffia. Remove the raffia when a union has been effected, a condition generally recognized when the scion commences growth. Cool spring weather should be chosen for grafting such plants as chrysanthemums. Keep the point of contact, i. e., where the scion joins the stock, moist until the former is well established and shade the plants during the same period. Select varieties for scions which bloom about the same time as the stock plant. Splice grafting may also be employed with almost as much success as the above method. J. S. W.

ROSES.

PLANTS TO BE CARRIED A SECOND SEASON.

To obtain the best results in running rose plants over for a second season the plants should be gradually hardened off, starting at about July 1. While they should not have quite as much water at the roots as formerly, syringings overhead should be given daily to keep down insects and the plants should have all the air possible day and night. Gradually withhold water at the roots till the wood becomes quite solid, but do not let the leaves wither when the plants reach this condition, which, if carefully treated, should be the case in four to five weeks. At this stage thin out all the small wood and shorten the strong shoots back to good, prominent eyes, but leave enough green leaves on each plant to keep the roots healthy.

As soon as the pruning is completed and all the dead leaves and other rubbish have been cleared away, scrape as much of the old soil off the surface of the benches as can be removed without injuring the roots; replace this with a rich compost of soil and manure in about equal proportions and give the whole a watering only sufficient to settle the new compost. Go over the plants and tie the strong shoots down so as to cause even breaks. From this time on they should be syringed liberally overhead twice daily in hot weather.

As the eyes break into new growth the water at the roots should be gradually increased until all the soil becomes moist, but do not saturate it at any period until the plants are well furnished with good, healthy foliage, or they are very apt to assume a pale, sickly color and the foliage will flag and burn under strong sunshine. An abundance of air at all times during the above operation will greatly help the plants to make a good start. After they are fairly under way again the same treatment as for newly planted stock will be required.

The accompanying etching shows the main floor of the Grand Central Palace, Lexington avenue, Forty-third and Forty-fourth streets, New York, as it will be arranged for the S. A. All indications point to the largest trade display in the history of the organization, for the opportunity is a rare one and applications for space are pouring in.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL FLOWER SHOW AT THE EXPOSITION.—SALLIER EXHIBITS A WORTHY NOVELTY.—A NEW RHODODENDRON.—FLORISTS' SYNDICATE SHOWS SOME GOOD WORK.—EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA AN EXHIBITOR.—SHOW OVERRAN ITS QUARTERS.

The third flower show of the exposition has just closed. The more we advance in the season, the larger is the number of exhibitors and the greater the variety of the plants shown. Conspicuous in the most recent show were the tuberous begonias. The collection exhibited by Mr. Billard, and for which he received the first prize, was wonderful in regard to size and color. His double variety named Albert Crousse, of a tender, dark pink color and immense size, was so remarkable that it was favored with a special prize. Mr. Gentilhomme had a collection of ericas which attracted great attention and won a first prize. Among the finest varieties may be mentioned Erica perspicua hybrida, E. Cavendishii, E. ventricosa coccinea minor, E. ventricosa tricolor, E. ventricosa magnifica, E. depressa major and E. candidissima. This is a class of plants which ought to be taken more in hand by the florists. The exhibit from Sallier was noteworthy for a group of Eremurus robustus (see illustration) the new plant from Turkestan. The plants shown by Sallier have withstood our winters without injury. It is a splendid plant, of which the flower spike, measuring often three yards, springs up from a vigorous growth of leaves. The spike, which may be compared to a hyacinth flower of gigantic size, varies in color from white to fleshy rose and even yellow, according to the plants or to the varieties. It may be grown in any good soil which is not over wet. The seeds sprout easily after having been soaked for a brief time in tepid water. The seedlings should be kept in a cool part of the greenhouse or in a cold frame and set out in their permanent location early in spring. The only drawback to its popularity is the length of time required to bring the plants into flower. It appears that not less than four to five years are necessary to flower them, but those who are willing to wait so long will be rewarded for their patience. The eremurus leaves the gyneriums, tritomas and other such plants far behind. Sallier also exhibited a fine bright red salvia of very large size, called Gloire de Stuttgart.

Nonin was, as usual, first with his display of geraniums, which embraced a great and pleasing variety of colors. The kinds attracting the greatest attention were Paul Crampel, Colomba, La Lorraine, Leconte de l' Isle, Jean Lorraine, Mme. Chate, Mlle. Fernande Viger, Mme. Parisot, Jeanne Hardy, Lakme, Mlle. Crozy, Solferino and Behrens. Halope, from Cherbourg, staged a new rhododendron, not yet introduced, which he calls R. Halopeanum, which attracted much admiration and received a first prize. It is a hybrid of R. Griffithianum and R. arboreum, is of a splendid white color, suffused with pink, and of immense size. Desire Bruneau had the most effective group of flowering shrubs and his collection included the best weigelias, cytisuses, loniceras, genistas, tamarix, azaleas, etc. The coveted award for orchids went to Dallemagne, who had, among other plants, a grand lot of miltonias. Thiebaut had an extensive collection of tulips and other flowers from bulbs, which made a fine display. Vilmorin had a unique collection of calceolarias, conspicuous among which was the richly colored variety called Le Vesuve. The same firm made a new departure in exhibiting a collection of seedlings in pots of the leading vegetables and flowers, for which it was awarded a first prize. Vilmorin also exhibited a new tulip named Parisienne La Merveille, which is of great size and brilliant red color and received a first prize.

The florists' syndicate, Chambre Syndicale des Fleuristes de Paris, showed many pretty arrangements in bouquet and floral work, a description of which would take too much space. Orchids served as ground work in many cases and the dressing with asparagus leaves and with ribbons was not less frequent. Moser made a very simple but appropriate arrangement for a dinner table. It consisted of a number of pæonia flowers lying on the cloth without the use of a basket or any moss. No great device is necessary to set up the flowers above their own foliage and the effect is charming.

Foreign exhibitors were few in number. The Emperor of Austria, however, sent in a collection of plants from his private grounds, among which was the celebrated Asclepiadex Pockea Capensis (?) which is said to have been brought from the Cape of Good Hope a hundred years ago and which is claimed to be several centuries old. The plant could never be propagated either by seeds or cuttings and has little, except its age, to attract our attention. Besides the plants mentioned, fine collections of irises, cannas, clematises, pyrethrums, pæonies anemones, amaryllises, etc., were shown.

On account of the large number of exhibits, the Horticultural Palace could not shelter them all and the big collections of roses, rhododendrons, azaleas, and bulky flowering shrubs had to be transferred to the Salle des Fetes on the Champs de Mars, where ample room was provided for them. The separation was, however, to be regretted, as the distance between the two palaces, although not great, prevented many people from attending the show at the Champs de Mars.

The American Rose Society's Exhibition.

The summer exhibition of the American Rose Society opened at the Eden Musee on Tuesday, June 12, continuing two days. Scarcity of entries made the outlook rather dubious and the fact that the private gardeners' classes were scheduled for the second day kept some of the best exhibits out until that time, with the result that the general effect on the opening day was rather disappointing. But an examination of the exhibits in detail revealed some very interesting things, especially among the small flowered varieties of multiflora and Wichuraiana types. A display of new hybrids of Wichuraiana and rugosa with everblooming sorts, from W. Howarth, of Glenville, Ohio, although it had suffered somewhat in the long journey, contained some very pretty things, one of them, a cross between Wichuraiana and Agrippina, being particularly admired. W. A. Manda showed a group of his hybrids of similar character, in fine shape, two of the best being Improved Universal Favorite and Pink Pearl, neither of which are yet disseminated. There was also a collection of hybrid briars from the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, and a collection of twenty species of wild roses came from the New York Botanical Garden. Certificates were given to W. A. Manda and W. Howarth.

Siebrecht & Son were the largest exhibitors. They were represented in many classes, taking the Stoeckel cup for H. P. plants, besides eleven firsts and one second prize in the cut flower classes. Two firsts and four seconds went to W. Law, of Briar Cliff Farm, and two firsts and one second to Joseph Eastman. Benj. Dorrance, Thos. Young, Jr., the Pratt estate and F. W. Newbold were also prominent contributors.

The second day saw a goodly representation of the private gardeners at the hall, Wm. Scott, W. G. Gommersall, Geo. D. Hale, Wm. McGowan, G. Comber, Peter Duff, J. Dowling and other notables being on hand with exhibits and a general handshaking for their friends. The premiums had not been awarded at the time of writing this report but there were indications of sharp competition in certain classes, one, the Henderson cup, bringing out four entries.

Besides the roses there were exhibits of carnation No. 666 from Dailledouze Bros., English carnations of the Malmaison type from F. W. Newbold and a really fine collection of hardy herbaceous flowers from J. Lewis Childs. Howard Nichols had an excellent display of strawberries and was generous enough to bring an abundance of samples for his friends to test. Robert Kitt was on hand with his vase holders and their use about the hall gave a good object lesson as to their value in decorative work, particularly at this warm season of the year, when roses are so short-lived without some such arrangement for supplying them with water.

Pan-American Notes.

Although the absence of rain has been most unfavorable for the thousands of of trees and shrubs planted this spring, many of them late, there are very few failures and the appearance of the plantations is most flourishing. Many more exhibits were sent in than were expected this spring, but in the case of hardy roses it was either plant them now or not at all.

The music garden is in the center of a broad elevation, and scattered over this area are many large beds of hybrid perpetual, rugosa, Wichuraiana and Crimson Rambler roses. One large bed is filled with standard and dwarf Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. All of these exhibits were sent in several weeks later than the proper time to transplant, but with careful planting and hard pruning they are making a fine growth. Upwards of 6000 roses are among the exhibits. The principal contributors are Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; Nelson Bogue, Batavia; Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.

The excavation of the lakes is complete and grading is now the chief work on the grounds. The sloping banks of the canals are finely graded and seeding is being done. With access to the hose in every part of the grounds, these banks will soon have a most refreshing appearance.

Mr. Ulrich has obtained several hundred fine red cedars twenty to twenty-five feet high and of most symmetrical shape. They are boxed and shaded from the sun and, if successfully carried through the summer, will have a delightful appearance when located in that part of the ground known as the court of cypresses, which is two basins each 200 feet in diameter and will be filled with aquatics. One of these basins will be heated to facilitate the growth of the Victoria regia.

The grounds around the service building have a finished appearance. Large flower beds are blooming and the thousands of visitors who already view the grounds seem surprised at the progress made. The transportation and liberal arts buildings are going up rapidly and progress is being made on all the buildings.

I was much pleased to hear last week from Alexander Forbes, of New York, that he considers that we are most favorably ahead with all the work compared to past expositions at a corresponding date.

BANQUET TO F. L. HARRIS.—ONE OF THE HORTICULTURAL EVENTS OF THE YEAR.—WELL KNOWN MEN PARTICIPATE.—LOVING CUP FOR HONORED FRIEND—CREDIT TO HUNNEWELL.—LAVISH FLORAL DISPLAY.—RHODODENDRON SHOW AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—NOTES OF THE EXHIBITS.—BUSINESS IMPROVES.—TO SAVE THE HEMLOCKS.—NOTES.

On Saturday evening, June 9, an event took place that will stand for all time as one of the most notable occasions in Boston's horticultural history. On that evening seventy-five of the gardener and florist friends of the retiring veteran gardener of the Hunnewell estate at Wellesley, Fred. L. Harris, gathered about the banquet table at the Hotel Brunswick to greet him and express by their presence and their words their appreciation and esteem for the most honored representative of their profession in America. Besides those present many more were represented in their grand testimonial who by reason of distance or other causes were unable to come in person. Grouped around the honored guest were many gentlemen of horticultural prominence from outside of Massachusetts, including W. R. Smith, of Washington, D. C.; Roht. Craig, Geo. C. Watson and R. E. Berry, of Philadelphia; J. N. May, of Summit, and W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J.; Patrick O'Mara and H. A. Siebrecht, of New York; Timothy McCarthy, of Providence, R. I., and C. W. Hoitt, of Nashua, N. H. Judge Hoitt officiated as toastmaster, M. H. Norton serving as chairman. Among the local gentlemen of official prominence were President E. M. Wood, of the Society of American Florists; Superintendent J. A. Pettigrew, of Boston's park system; Supt. Wm. Doogue, of the public grounds; Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum; J. H. Morton, of Mt. Hope Cemetery; Secretary Wm. J. Stewart, of the S. A. F.; and others filling positions of usefulness in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The gentlemen above named, also a number of the leading lights in Boston floriculture, private and commercial, were severally introduced by the toastmaster and the highest enthusiasm was aroused as they told of the love they felt for their friend. Among them were many whose friendship dated back thirty and forty years or more and eloquent were the tributes they paid to his noble character as a man, his loyalty as a friend, his generosity of heart towards his fellow gardeners, his industry and skill and his wide influence in the cause of American horticulture. He was held up as an example to the young gardeners, showing to what they may attain, one worthy of emulation and well entitled to the highest possible honor.

A beautiful silver loving cup was presented to Mr. Harris, on behalf of the contributors, by Wm. J. Stewart, who spoke feelingly the affectionate sentiments of the donors and expressed the hope that their friend's cup of joy might ever be filled to overflowing. Inscribed on one panel were the words, "To Fred. L. Harris, a Loving Testimonial from his Gardener and Florist Friends, Boston, June 9, 1900." On the two other panels were etched views of the famous Italian garden at Wellesley and of the rhododendron plantations.

Mr. Harris' response was made in simple and touching words. He expressed the great happiness he felt in meeting his friends and associates of a lifetime under such circumstances, modestly deprecating the praise bestowed upon himself and generously crediting Mr. Hunnewell for his share in the development of the Wellesley grounds from a barren waste to the most beautiful and famed gardens on the continent. He spoke of his forty-six years of service in the work, the pleasure he had experienced in designing and carrying it out and the sadness he felt in retiring from the scenes and surroundings of a lifetime. Cheer upon cheer greeted him and if all the good wishes showered upon Mr. Harris that night can be realized, happy, indeed, will be the remaining years of his life.

The tables were laden with flowers. Such a lavish display has seldom been seen and their arrangement reflected much credit on Mr. Edgar and his associates in this part of the preparations. The Harvard quartette rendered songs at intervals during the proceedings, in an exquisite manner, and a leading feature of the evening was the singing of Fred. L. Harris, Jr., who has a superb voice and knows how to use it. The menus were adorned with a portrait of the honored guest and a number of appropriate poetical quotations. Judge Hoitt gave great satisfaction, as usual, as toastmaster. Quotations from Shakespeare and other celebrities were made use of with great success in introducing the various speakers.

The annual rhododendron show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held Tuesday and Wednesday of this week and occupied the entire lower hall and half the upper floor of Horticultural Hall. Owing to the absence of the Hayes exhibits, the showing of rhododendrons was not so extensive as heretofore, but otherwise the exhibition was excellent throughout. The principal contributors were H. H. Hunnewell, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Mrs. B. P. Cheney and Dr. C. G. Weld. Azaleas were shown mainly by T. C. Thurlow and Mrs. Gardner. The orchid groups were superb. Prizes were won by J. S. Bailey, J. E. Rothwell and Mrs. Gardner in the order named. A silver medal was awarded to Mr. Hunnewell for a splendid specimen of Miltonia vexillaria and Bayard Thayer received a certificate for Cattleya gigas. Dr. Weld showed fine specimens of Cypripedium Lawrenceanum and Watsonia Ardernei. Good pelargoniums were shown by E. J. Mitton and Dr. Weld. Irises were displayed in large numbers by Mrs. Gardner and Rea Bros.; aquilegias by W. C. Winter and W. A. Jeffries, pyrethrums by Dr. Weld, Rea Bros. and W. J. Clemsen, hardy perennials by the Blue Hill Nursery and Clemsen, tree pæonies by Jeffries and oriental poppies by Clemsen, H. S. Rand and Dr. Weld. James Comley contributed a fine lot of Harrisii lilies and Patten & Co. two vases of carnations of extra quality.

Business has improved somewhat over that of last week, the receipts of flowers being considerably lighter and the demand more active. Outdoor roses are not yet in evidence in this neighborhood but a very few warm days will bring them in. They are not the subject of so much interest to the city florists as heretofore for the time honored custom of having the mayor present a bouquet to each member of the graduating classes in the public schools has been discontinued and the "school order" which in past years has helped to consume so much of the outdoor rose product is no longer on the menu. Pæonies are beginning to appear in quantity and are in good demand for large decorations, of which there seem to be as many as usual for the season.

Public interest is on the increase in the matter of the proposed sewerage tunnel under hemlock hill at the Arnold Arboretum and the possible danger to the magnificent grove of original hemlocks. There is some hope of a change of route in consequence of the protest, as a hearing has been granted to the park board and the representatives of Harvard College on the subject.

Norton Bros. have left their old location on Berkeley street and moved to Massachusetts avenue.

The Twombly Company has discontinued business and their store on Tremont street is vacant.

MEETING OF THE CLUB.—NO ADMISSION FEE FOR THE AUGUST SHOW. — WELL KNOWN GUESTS.—HARRIS ELECTED AN HONORARY MEMBER.—HEAVY RECEIPTS OF CUT FLOWERS.—ROSES AND CARNATIONS SELL AT VERY LITTLE PRICES.—PROSPECT OF AN IMPROVEMENT.—NOTES.

An unexpectedly large attendance was on hand at the June meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday evening, June 11. Previous to the session a meeting of the general committee on convention matters had been held and the various chairmen had encouraging reports of progress to present. The question of charging an admission fee to the general public at the horticultural exhibition next August was decided in the negative. A. L. Miller had a fine spike of Canna Kate Gray on the exhibition table. Messrs. W. R. Smith and Robert Craig were present, being on their way home from the banquet to Mr. Fred. L. Harris at Boston. They were each called on for a speech. Mr. Smith begged to be excused and Mr. Craig, although he thought it too hot for speech making, said he was still so full of the enthusiasm developed at the dinner to the grand old gardener at Boston that he could think of nothing else. He said that Mr. Harris was a shining example for the young gardener, who should emulate his virtues and industry and try to achieve something notable. His art, perseverance and honesty are an honor to any calling and his work a credit to the country and an inspiration to the whole world. Mr. Manda supplemented Mr. Craig's remarks with appreciative praise for Mr. Harris, to whom, he said, not Boston alone but the entire country, owes a debt of gratitude. He then proposed F. L. Harris for honorary membership in the New York Florists' Club and a unanimous vote of approval was given.

The very heavy receipts of cut flowers in all lines still continue and the dullness in the demand leaves the wholesalers with an exceedingly difficult job on hand each day to unload the accumulation. This is only done by disposing of entire invoices just as received, in boxes, without handling, for figures that run absurdly low when reduced to an average per hundred blooms, roses going as low in such cases as ten to twenty cents a hundred. The majority of roses handled in this way, however, are nothing but the veriest rubbish, discolored, blown out and with foliage mildewed, and it is to be expected that when the growers of this stuff find out what their returns from it amount to for the past week, they will soon discontinue shipments and go to replanting. This will relieve the market and another week will doubtless see conditions greatly improved. Carnations suffer also, being sold in bulk to fakirs and cheap dealers at very low rates. Pæonies are still with us in quantity and garden roses are being sent in by the bushel to those who are willing to receive them.

UNLIMITED SUPPLY OF ALL SEASONABLE MATERIAL —BUSINESS ON THE DECLINE. —BOARDERS NOW MUCH IN EVIDENCE.—SHORTAGE OF SMALL BOSTON FERNS.

There are large quantities of all kinds of flowers available, the weather being very favorable, with no very hot days, such as are usually experienced at this season of the year. Pæonies, which have been very plentiful, are now nearly over and this week will no doubt see the last of them. The growers say that the production has increased so rapidly the past few years that there is very little money to be made in handling pæonies, the price having been forced too low. Roses and carnations are seen in large quantities and at very low figures. Sweet peas are also plentiful at from 20 cents to 40 cents per hundred. A few yellow centaureas have been offered in this market by Edward Towill, of Hillsdale Station; there is also a pretty white and purple variety which should be more grown, as it would be a welcome addition to the variety of flowers available at this season.

Business in the stores is much less than a week or two ago; the summer period of rest is fast approaching and those who take "boarders" have now large families to care for and their hospital departments are full to overflowing with plants that have to be nursed back to something like a presentable appearance by the time Madame returns from the country or seashore. Happy is the man who has the independence to say "no" now and thus steer clear of trouble next fall.

Small Boston ferns seem scarce in this market, most of those for growing on, it seems, having to be brought in from other cities. These ferns and rubbers are certainly greatly in demand and, it is safe to say, will continue to grow in popularity. Any one who five years ago would have predicted the present demand would then have been thought an enthusiast whose imagination was getting the better of his judgment.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—RECEIPTS VERY HEAVY BUT DEMAND IS ACTIVE.—SALES EQUAL TO MID-WINTER.—CLUB MEETING. —ABOUT COAL.—FERNS OF ALL KINDS.—WIETORS' BIG PLANTINGS.—LIBERTY AT FOREST GLEN.—HEAVY HAIL INSURANCE. —EVANSTON GROWERS TO BUILD.—AT THE REINBERGS'. — KENNICOTT GOING EAST.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

This has been a busy week for the wholesalers, who have handled quantities of stock so great as to multiply many times over the task of taking in a sum of money equal to the average daily receipts of December, but this most of them have accomplished. There have been, in previous years, few periods "knee deep in June" which have seen demand anything like as active as it has been the past ten days, but the supply has been adequate, except of Beauties and first class tea roses, Meteor being the principal shortage. There have been Brides and Bridesmaids enough for anyone who was not particular as to mildew. Carnations have been in unlimited supply; in fact one firm took an order for 50,000 and delivered them out of one day's receipts. Of course prices went down under the weight of the quantity of stock in the market but sales are still as big as when prices were up to a reasonable level. Of the various specialties there are all that are required and such items as water lilies and Lilium speciosum have been added to the list.

There was a very large attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club last night (June 15). Interest centered in the report of the committee on co-operative coal purchase, presented by W. N. Rudd. The committee, he stated, sent out one hundred and five return postal cards of inquiry to greenhousmen in this city and vicinity, receiving forty-seven replies which in the aggregate indicated the use of about 24,000 tons last year. Mr. Rudd was of the opinion that about 100,000 tons of coal are used for greenhouse purposes in this territory during the year and discussed the matter quite fully as to grades and prices. He spoke in favor of deferring the purchase of coal at the present time, stating that buyers could lose nothing but might gain some by waiting for a time, as the prices were not likely to rise. The subject provoked considerable interesting discussion. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

There are all kinds of ferns now obtainable. The Alabama crop is in, the new cut Massachusetts ferns are ready for shipment and the cold storage supply is not exhausted. Bassett & Washburn's frozen stock has kept perfectly, the only loss being where the packing was such that air reached the ferns, as through holes in the cases, when the result was that parts of the adjacent fronds were dried and shrivelled.

Wietor Bros. are pushing things just now. Winandy is well along with their new houses and they already have five of them planted with Beauties. When they are in shape for next season they will have upwards of 62,000 Beauty plants, sixteen 150-foot houses of Brides and Bridesmaids and thirteen houses 30x300 of carnations.

Brant & Noe have had a lot of Liberty rose plants potted up for about four weeks and Mr. Brant says that it is the finest batch of a new sort which he has ever seen sent out. Mr. Noe, the eastern member of the firm, has planted a house of Liberty at Madison, N. J., and writes in equal terms of commendation of Mr. Asmus' stock.

Bassett & Washburn have just made application for an increase in their glass insurance which makes the total which the Hail Association carries for them 387,000 square feet and this is only eighty per cent of the firm's glass.

Weiland & Risch have purchased six lots adjoining their range of glass at Evanston and will proceed to cover them with glass for up-to-date cut flowers. They have Liberty roses ready to cut and say that thus far they have found the grafted superior to the own-root stock.

George Piepgras is selling hydrangeas by the wagon load. That is, he gets in a load of well-flowered plants, in 5 inch to 8-inch pots, sells them out at $9 a dozen and gets a fresh supply. He says he is going to keep it up all summer.

Peter Reinberg grew his first chrysanthemums last fall and was so successful with them that he has increased the planting for this season. Mr. Reinberg sent his first cut of Liberty roses to market June 12.

That Flint Kennicott, the active president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., is expected to attend the S. A. F. convention in New York in August will be welcome news to a great many people.

Mangel has been displaying Lawson carnation blooms in his window this week. This promises to be the favorite carnation next season.

Flowers for the banquet tendered the American Seed Trade Association on the occasion of its annual meeting here this week, were supplied by Peter Reinberg, Deamud, Wietor Bros., and Budlong.

Poehlmann Bros. have started between 700 and 800 chrysanthemum plants for fall sales in 10-inch pots. Last season this stock was fine and sold at good prices, as fast as ready.

Klehm's Drop White pæonies are finer than silk this year and there are many of them, but they sell rapidly and at good prices.

E. C. Amling says he sold more carnations on Tuesday of this week than in any one day of his business career.

J. S. Wilson is now acting president of the Western Springs village board of trustees, the president having gone away on a three months' vacation.

Walter Kreitling has a $200 decoration on for to-day at the Washington Park Club. Pæonies are to be the principal flower.

George Reinberg has made arrangements for an unlimited supply of water, one of the things he was short on last season.

Frank Hagen, one of A. C. Spencer's trump cards at Reinberg's, is highly elated over the arrival of his first daughter.

BUSINESS SHOWS AN INCREASE.—DECORATIONS MAKE MUCH WORK.—STOCKS AVAILABLE.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

Business is improving in spite of the strike. This is due to weddings, of which St. Louis is having many, and other social events that call for decorations. Roses are in somewhat better supply than last week. There are gluts of other stock, especially carnations, but prices remain unchanged on everything, unless it be sweet peas; these are selling for 25 cents per bunch, or five bunches for $1, and just now seem to be "the" flower. Some Centaurea margaritæ, gaillardias, plenty of marguerites, coreopsis and forget-me-nots are to be had at the different stands. Kuehn had a nice lot of gladioli spikes a few days ago and tuberoses also are making their appearance.

Two large beds of Stella Guerney ageratum in the Missouri Botanical Garden present a very attractive appearance. The trials of sweet peas that are being made at the gardens for the Plant Seed Company are coming into full bloom this week. There is a new white variety among them that is claimed to be a bet ter flower and earlier than Emily Henderson.

The firm of Ostertag Bros. has another big wedding decoration, that for R. W. Fosenthal, at the Columbia Club next week. The boys remain in West Virginia to decorate the special car in which Mr. Kerens and his bride travel.

Soil Fungus.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What causes a fine, web-like fungus growth on the surface of soil in which small ferns are growing, and what is a remedy for same? The soil is leaf mold and contains no fertilizer of any kind. I. N.

The web-like fungus growth referred to is usually caused by too close an atmosphere, or insufficient ventilation, and is likely to result in "damping off." The best preventive of this trouble is to ventilate the house or propagating frame quite freely at night during the warm weather. During the day it is usually found necessary to keep seedling ferns rather close in order to prevent them from drying out too rapidly, but as soon as the sun is off the house the seedlings should have more air, this system of night ventilation being regulated in accordance with the weather, and being continued until the nights become too cold to allow it. W. H. TAPLIN.

An Invitation to Philadelphia.

At the last regular meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, it was moved by John Westcott, seconded by George C. Watson, and carried with a heartfelt unanimity not soon to be forgotten, that a cordial invitation be extended to everybody intending attending the next convention of the S. A. F., which is to be held in Greater New York in August, and on their way thereto, to stop off at Philadelphia and renew old acquaintances possibly, and probably make some new ones, as the club room committee will hold open house during the Monday immediately preceding the opening of the convention. Everybody welcome. Don't fail to give us a call.

Poinsettia Culture.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—What is the best way to grow poinsettias in order to produce bracts twelve to sixteen inches in diameter? I have many plants nine and more years old, but the bracts have never been very large. State also the plan by which nice, low, bushy plants are produced for Christmas sales. H. J. H.

In order to produce large bracts on poinsettias it is essential that the plants shall be well fed, and also that they shall not be checked at any time. Taking for granted that the old plants referred to have had a proper rest, for about ten to twelve weeks after their last crop of flowers, and are now repotted and growing away freely, having been cut back to two or three eyes on a shoot before repotting, we would advise planting them out on a bench in full sunshine, for example the back bench of a rose house. About six inches of good soil should be used, with a liberal quantity of dry cow manure and a sprinkling of bone dust added. Ventilate freely during the warm weather, and water and syringe thoroughly as the plants become established.

The chief thing to be avoided in growing poinsettias is giving them a chill, and with this in view it is well to close the house when the nights grow cool in the fall, a lower temperature than 60° being injurious to these plants during their growing season. When the bracts begin to form, a watering with liquid manure once a week will be helpful, pure guano being excellent for this purpose, if used in moderation.

The small plants for Christmas sales are grown from cuttings of young wood that are rooted in June and July. These are potted off into 3 inch pots and shaded for a few days until established, using a similar compost to that noted above for the older plants. The young plants are kept in the greenhouse during the summer in the full light, or may be plunged in ashes in a frame, providing they are not allowed to remain there too late in the fall, and should be shifted on to 4-inch pots, and then to 6-inch pots as they may require it, but in each case giving the shift before the plants begin to suffer, the object being to retain the healthy, dark green foliage right down to the pot. Some liquid manure may be needed by these young plants during the latter part of the season, a 6-inch pot being as large as should be given them for convenience, but it is best not to over feed them, or they may become tall and long-jointed, besides being too soft to give entire satisfaction to the purchaser.

SCHOOL OFFICERS STEP BETWEEN FLORISTS AND THEIR CUSTOMERS.— COMMENCEMENT BUSINESS LIGHT.—FLORISTS ORGANIZE A CLUB, ELECT OFFICERS AND PLAN A FLOWER SHOW.

Commencement week did not come up to the standard of last year. It seems that the Board of School Commissioners passed resolutions directing the superintendents of the various districts to announce that no flowers should be presented to the graduates in the schools, but could be sent to their homes. This had a disastrous effect on the flower trade. Many of the florists made great preparations for a big business, and some found themselves overstocked. Nevertheless a fairly good business was done. Beauties had first call and Brides, Bridesmaids, lily of the valley, carnations and sweet peas were cleaned out fairly well, but pæonies, poppies, etc., were left in large quantities. But Friday, June 8, was an exceptionally busy day, so all the surplus stock was well disposed of. Daniels & Fisher report a good trade, with the main call for Beauties. They are busy with June weddings, which are quite numerous. The Alpha Floral Co. report a brisk trade during the past week, particularly in their wholesale department.

On June 8 twenty-five florists gathered at the Gallup Floral Co.'s establishment for the purpose of organizing a florists' club. After outlining the objects in view they proceeded to elect officers as follows: President, A. J. Graham; first vice-president, J. A. Valentine; second vice-president, Mr. Glauber; recording secretary, John Berry; corresponding secretary, A. M. Lewis; treasurer, A. E. Mauff. After the election several committees were appointed, one of which is to wait on the park commissioners to ascertain their views on the matter of holding a flower show at the City Park greenhouses. It is understood that the park commission intends erecting a large conservatory and Mr. Davis, the head gardener, broached the subject of holding a show there to be of no expense to the florists and absolutely free to the public. No more favorable spot could be offered for such an exhibition, and it is hoped that all the florists of Denver will assist in making it a grand success.

The plant trade has not been very brisk, for the bedding done in Denver is very limited for so large a place.

We had our usual rain storm last Sunday, making the ninth rainy Sunday in succession. These occassional rains mean considerable to the florists out here, for water rates are something enormous.

J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, is sending in some very fine Beauties, which are eagerly sought for. MUM.

MANY DECORATIONS MAKE TRADE ACTIVE AT THE CAPITAL CITY.—WEDDINGS AND COMMENCEMENTS.—FLORIST LOOSE IN EUROPE

Trade has been quite active, with work for social events, the most notable of which was the wedding of Miss Anna Louise Hoeke, of Washington, and Victor Mapes, of New York, June 5, at Trinity church, which was beautifully decorated by J. Louis Loose.

On June 7, the marriage of Miss Florence S. Boardman, of Washington, and Frederick A. Keep, of Chicago, took place at the Boardman residence. J. H. Small & Sons did the decorating and more than 2000 pink pæonies were used. The bridal bower, at the end of the room, was formed with garlands of Asparagus plumosus nanus, orchids and Bridesmaid roses, taking about 2000 roses.

J. Louis Loose sailed for Europe Saturday, June 9. After visiting the Paris Exposition he will make an extended tour through France, Germany, Holland and Belgium, returning about the first of September.

Small & Sons did some good work for the twenty-ninth annual commencement of the law department of Georgetown University, June 11. P. G.

Trade has dropped off during the last two weeks and the demand seems to be for outdoor roses and sweet peas in preference to other flowers. Weddings are in order just at present and there are some very fine church decorations being put up; one particularly effective was that for the Townsend-Day wedding on June 15, flowering laurel being used with garden roses by the Champion Co.

There was a small attendance at the auction of the O. H. Nye greenhouse and stock, which took place last week and very poor prices were realized.

At the meeting of the Horticultural Club held June 11 it was decided to hold a chrysanthemum show in New Haven this fall.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

CONNECTICUT turnips and onions are looking well.

THE eastern sweet corn crop, so far, appears better than usual.

LEM W. BOWEN, now in Europe, is expected home about July 15.

THE present condition of New York and Canadian peas and beans is said to be good.

H. CHEESEMAN is now with L. L. May & Co., of St. Paul, Minn., representing that firm in the east.

MR. WEEBER, of Weeber & Don, New York, is away on a vacation rendered necessary by poor health.

KEENE, N. H.—Ellis Bros. have sold their flower and vegetable seed and mailing business to L. P. Butler.

THE list of seedsmen visiting Chicago this week is held over to next week owing to pressure on our space.

ROBERT GAIR, the seed bag manufacturer, has met with a serious accident, a heavy piece of machinery falling upon his foot. Blood poisoning having set in, it was necessary to resort to amputation.

PROMINENT seedsmen at Chicago this week, who have had representatives in the blue grass region lately, say the crop this year is a good average one. Reports from growers in the same territory are rather more optimistic.

PARIS, FRANCE.—Since my last letter we have had no rain to speak of and, as the only good shower which fell around Paris, on May 7, was not general and did not extend to the leading growing districts, many crops are in poor shape. The radishes, especially, are suffering very much. At the time of writing it is cold and a little rain is falling, but it comes, unfortunately, too late to help the radishes, which could not be transplanted in time and are now hollow, pithy and overgrown. Like cabbages, the radishes will be very scarce and probably high priced next season.

PARISIAN.

Wholesale Seed Merchants' League.

After the meeting of the American Seed Trade Association at Chicago this week, the members of the Wholesale Seed Merchants' League held a brief conference, during which the following officers were elected: F. W. Bruggerhof, president; S. F. Leonard, vice-president; W. Atlee Burpee, secretary-treasurer.

The American Seed Trade Association at Chicago.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association was opened with a good attendance by President Rodgers in the ladies' ordinary of the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago, June 12. So many members and others interested continued to arrive during the week that the meeting was quite representative in character, and the interest shown in the highly instructive proceedings made it one of the best on record.

In his opening address President Rodgers extended the visitors a hearty welcome to the city and congratulated the association on its increasing membership. He called attention to the interest now taken by the trade in the work of the association and urged the members to increased effort. He referred to the importance of giving more careful study to the conditions governing the use of various grasses and other forage plants. He felt that this department of agriculture was but in its infancy and that those who thoughtfully considered its possibilities would surely meet with great success.

The topics presented for consideration were widely varied and much interest was shown in their discussion, the question box proving exceedingly useful. The more important subjects were as follows: "Tariff, Customs and Express," "New Century Conditions," S. E. Briggs and S. F. Leonard; "Commission on Box Seeds;" "Prices;" "Cost of Catalogues;" "Commercial Travelers;" "How to make an Effective Catalogue at a Minimum Cost, Value of Catch Phrases, Does Advertising Cheap Collections Pay," Chas. N. Page; "Cauliflower Cultivation and Reproduction," C. L. Allen; "The Pleasant Side of Business Association," Chas. B. Heath; "The Successful Retail Seedsman," W. C. Langbridge, etc. In this connection it should be stated that the secretary was instructed to spread on the records of the meeting, the recent correspondence on the "Vitality and Purity of Seeds," by Burnet Landreth and C. L. Allen.

Twenty-one new members were admitted during the meeeing. On an informal vote testing the sense of the meeting regarding place of meeting in 1901, a majority favored Buffalo, N. Y., and accordingly the next meeting will be held in the Pan-American city. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Albert McCullough, president; F. W. Bolgiano, first vice-president; S. G. Courteen, second vice-president; S. F. Willard, secretary-treasurer, re-elected; A. N. Clark, assistant secretary, re-elected; Alex. Rodgers, C. S. Clark, W. J. Mandeville, Albert J. Brown and I. B. Clark, executive committee. Chicago seedsmen and friends tendered the visitors a banquet in the dining hall of the Chicago Athletic Association on the evening of June 13. Covers were spread for 117, J. C. Vaughan acting as toastmaster. The early part of Thursday, June 14, was taken up with a sail on the drainage canal and a tally-ho ride over the South Park System, the greater number, including the numerous ladies in attendance, favoring the canal trip. Upon their return from the boat ride the members of the association assembled in the parlors of the Grand Pacific Hotel, and President-elect McCullough, with great solemnity, summoned before them Alex. Rodgers, the retiring president. Having presented himself, J. E. Northrup stepped forward and produced a handsome gold-mounted cane, accompanying its presentation to Mr. Rodgers with the following:

The members here present, about fifty-six,
Have selected from various walking sticks,
This one of rare and tasteful design,
To give to our president of old '99.
'Tis the wish of each one in presenting this gift,
Towards the purchase of which we all gave a lift,
That your life may be long and full of true joy,
That your years may be happy and without alloy,
But whate'er the weather, be it sunshine or rain,
May you find firm support in this beautiful cane.

Resolutions touching the death of the late C. C. Morse, of Santa Clara, Cal., and Buell Lamberson, of Portland, Ore., were adopted by the association.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

American Association of Nurserymen.

The twenty-fifth annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen was memorable for many things; first for the fact that the silver anniversary was celebrated in the city which saw the birth of the association, and second, that the attendance was the largest on record, but most of all was it notable for the amount of business transacted between sessions, good, honest, money-making buying and selling, barter which means dollars and cents to every man who sought a share of the profits and which insures, moreover, long life to the association.

Long before President Wilson J. Peters called the convention to order in the parlor of the Chicago Beach Hotel it was evident that the meeting was to be one of unbounded enthusiasm, and it did not belie its promise. In his address Mr. Peters spoke of the eminently satisfactory state of affairs in general, and the secretary and treasurer, who followed with their reports, showed the association to be sharing in the universal prosperity. The treasurer's statement showed a balance of $1,400, but Secretary Seager urged the extension of the membership in order to lend greater force to the movements of the association.

The report of the legislative committee dealt with the operations of that body in its fruitless efforts to secure the passage of the federal inspection bill, and was provocative of a vast amount of discussion. It was shown that this unpassed act has already cost the association $1,287, and oratory was employed unstintingly in commending the work or deploring the lack of returns for the investment, but the upshot of the matter was that the committee was continued. T. B. Meehan reported for the committee on customs houses and tariff. He narrated at length the efforts made to correct certain well known shortcomings in the system, and stated that remedial measures had been applied and are working in a fairly satisfactory manner.

Thursday was devoted to papers and discussions upon subjects drawn from the question box. Hon. N. H. Albaugh related, extemporaneously, reminiscences of the early days of the association, N. W. Hale discussed the retail nursery business and recommended an organization of agents, Prof. N. E. Hansen told of new lines of work for prairie nurserymen and R. C. Berckmans, who served in the Cuban war, discussed the future of the nursery business in our new possessions.

There were the usual exhibits in the corridor, principal among the displays being those of Thos. Meehan & Sons, Baker Bros., Stecher Lithographic Co., Hiram T. Jones, Benj. Chase, Dayton Fruit Tree Label Co., Jos. Heinl, Rochester Lithographing Co., and the McMillan Co.

It was voted to meet upon the second Wednesday in June, 1901 at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Theodore J. Smith, of Geneva, N. Y.; vice-president, N. W. Hale, of Knoxville, Tenn.; secretary, Geo. C. Seager, of Rochester; treasurer, C. L. Yates, of Rochester; executive committee, Irving Rouse, Rochester; C. L. Watrous, Des Moines, and E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.

THE SOCIAL ACTIVITIES OF JUNE MAKE TRADE FAIR.—PLENTY OF STOCK BUT LITTLE THAT IS GOOD.—A DIFFERENCE IN THE MORNING.—NOTES.

Trade has been fair for June, the month of the bride and the sweet girl graduate. There is an abundance of stock but it is of only ordinary quality, although there are still some very good carnations to be had. The indoor crop of sweet peas has practically disappeared with the last few days of warm weather, but outdoor peas have made their appearance, so that there is little danger of any failure in supply. There is every indication of the approach of that period of lassitude which generally arrives at the close of the commencement season.

However, there are some wakeful persons in our ranks. Commission-man Kasting's morning hour was 9:30 but Park Commissioner Kasting and Benedict Kasting arrive at 8. It is a mooted question as to whether it is the official or household duties which cause the "difference in the morning."

Horticultural features are fast taking shape at the Pan-American Exposition and Messrs. Ulrich and Scott are very busy. The latter has been in the west for a few days.

Recent visitors were E. C. Ludwig, Allegheny, Pa., and Max Beattus, Dayton, O. W. A.

DES MOINES, Ia.—Wm. G. Newell, foreman for W. L. Morris has rented Fred. Gadsby's establishment, Oakdale Greenhouses, at Eau Clair, Wis., and will shortly assume the management.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thresher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. A CHILD can run it.
Just the thing to fight crab grass.
It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

Send for Particulars.

SPRING BUSINESS FAIRLY GOOD.—PLANT TRADE ACTIVE.— PRICES ABOUT AS BEFORE.—CUT FLOWERS POOR.—CARNATIONS HOLD UP IN PRICE.—OTHER MATTERS.

Early June business has been fairly good all along the line. Those who do a business in bedding stock report it to have been brisk, perhaps slightly better than last year. Prices have been about the same as in former years. Cut flowers are feeling the effect of summer weather and the quality of the stock shows it. Roses and carnations have deteriorated in size, although the latter have held up wonderfully in price this year, any fairly good stock selling even now at about $1.50 per hundred.

Members of the Cleveland Florists' Club who desire to air their views on the subject of holding a picnic this summer, would do well to attend the meeting of June 25, as the matter will be taken up at that time and probably settled definitely, one way or the other.

The bowling contingent is going to do or die this summer and to that end has forwarded the necessary entrance fee; so look out, you other fellows. A.

WILKESBARRE, PA.—Ira G. Marvin has opened a new establishment near Oaklawn cemetery.

PAINESVILLE, O.—Storrs & Harrison are putting in a switch connecting their establishment with the L. S. & M. S. railroad. J. J. and H. B. Harrison, returning from California this week, stopped off at Chicago to take in the seedsmen's and nurserymen's conventions.

FLORISTS' RULES FOR BOWLING.

Keep your ball well toward the center,
Rather slightly to the right,
Over twixt the first and second,
Ever keep this well in sight.
Send it down with force and judgment,
Curve it slightly if you can;
Have your mind set on the game, and
Each man strive to beat his man.
Lay aside your jokes and stories,
Lay aside all kinds of cares;

Banish all your thoughts of flowers,
Only think of "strikes and spares."
In shirt sleeves and bowling slippers,
Live a life of youth and mirth,
Ending then the game, you'll vouchsafe
"Rolling beats all games on earth."

The Hub Revisited.

Six years are a short span, yet many changes have taken place since my last visit to the Hub. The most bewildering change of all is the subway through the heart of the city. It changes one's previous notions of things so that you can hardly believe you are in the same good old town, and you have to grope along blindly for a day or two until your bump of locality gets into working order once more.

The next big change is the Southern Terminal, a gigantic structure, so expansive inside that you have to look in three directions to see it all. Sky scrapers on every hand also tend to alter the appearance of old streets, and the many new thoroughfares opened all over the city give a different aspect to familiar localities, which keeps you guessing as to where you are at.

I noticed many new flower shops, especially away from the time honored radius of half a mile from "Brimstone Corner," and in their style or "get up" as well as size they certainly do credit to this metropolitan city. In the old district some have disappeared and new ones have taken their places but there are still enough of the "ancient and honorables" left to give a returned prodigal a cordial welcome.

Good, old Horticultural Hall revives cheerful memories, as it looms up; but the warmth is as nothing to the hearty "where away!" that greets you at Sutherland's, where business, science, literature, sociability and "the crowd" have held forth with profit, honor and glory for the last thousand and fourteen years. Alas! to think that in a few short months this landmark, this hallowed spot of many memories, will be no more! With the passing away of the old Horticultural Hall this passes away, too, and it will be interesting to note to what center the men of light and learning will then gravitate. I suppose it will all depend on Macgregor. Wherever Macgregor sits that's the head of the table, and I needn't identify the Macgregor, for you all know who the Macgregor of this case is.

P. Welch is as little and big as ever. He's no bigger himself but his brothers and the business have increased wonderfully, and no wonder, for there are few more engaging personalities than the Welchs' and none more enterprising and progressive. Their flower market, with its model system, has been a great success and that notwithstanding the competition of the trust, which was to kill off all the commission men a dozen years ago.

Of course I went to McCarthy's—couldn't stay away. That lively magnet is irresistible and, on auction days especially all the world and his wife throng about him and listen to his words of wisdom as if they were golden notes, so precious that to miss one would be a terrible thing. I fancied that "Nick" had added gravity to his years and avoirdupois. His style was more subdued than when last I heard him on the rostrum, but in finish and effectiveness he is better than ever. No actor that I ever saw could approach "Nick" in that look of solemn, childlike reproachfulness with which he favors some daring individual who questions the absolute truthfulness of his descriptions. He is shocked at the bare idea—stabbed to the heart! And then rage succeeds, and the torrent of fiery sarcasm that greets the critic withers that creature into a crisp in the twinkling of an eye. Then, in less time than I have taken to tell it, the auctioneer is calm again and bids are coming for the next lot. Truly, an artist of the first water is "N. F."

Among the growers those most in evidence at present seem to be the three graces (or scapegraces, as their wives would make you believe) Cox, Ewell and Mathison. To meet these in an after-business session at the Parker House, with M. Norton to stir them up and keep the ball a-rolling, is an experience long to be remembered. The sparks fly with a vengeance and it is a toss up who is the doughtiest. For strength give me Mathison, he is Sir William Wallace for volubility; Ewell, a Don Quixote scattering the enemy with his whirling flail; for adroitness Cox, nimble as Robin Hood.

Warren was at the banquet given in honor of Mr. Harris on Saturday, but through some dido of Judge Hoitt, the toast master, was not allowed to make the speech with which he had been suffering for a week previous. We were all disappointed, having looked forward to this as one of the events of the evening. That this should have been one of the "contingencies which did not eventuate," to speak in the Bostonian or Ewellian style, was a matter of deep regret to all.

Speaking of the banquet, I must say that although I have attended some memorable affairs of this kind in the past fifteen years, and taken part in arranging for not a few, there was something in the conception and carrying out of this one which struck me as placing it a bit above anything I have heretofore seen. The man and the occasion were above the average and the people of Boston rose to the situation in a way that distinctly calls for the admiration of their compeers everywhere. Representative men were there from long distances, the speeches were broad and dignified and showed an appreciation of the trend of events in the past fifty years and a just and hopeful summing up of the possibilities of the next fifty, that was most grateful to all students with a sincere desire for the welfare of horticulture in this country. After it was all over I heard many of the participants compliment Messrs. Stewart, Edgar and Mathison, the committee in charge, for the perfection with which everything had been arranged and carried out. Mr. Mathison disclaimed worthiness of compliment and said that Mr. Stewart was the man who should be crowned with the laurel, as he was the creative spirit behind the affair, of which they were all justly proud. Your regular correspondent has given you a complete account of of the banquet but I add my mite as I fancy it will be interesting to Bostonians to see themselves as others see them.

I thought I knew all about the outs and ins of the Afrikander question but after listening to the eloquence of Sam Neil for one side and the equally persuasive and convincing clinchers of Lawrence Cotter for the other, I am compelled to admit that they are both right and that I know nothing about it except that it seems to warm people under the collar even worse than 16 to 1 did four years ago. Mr. Cotter found Carnot one of his most profitable crops last season. It did well with him all summer and was profitable as late as the middle of January. He believes in Meteor and has a house of 1100 looking in excellent shape.

The seed trade here seems to be in a healthy condition, all the houses reporting a brisk spring trade and better general conditions. There were at least three of the leading houses represented at the Harris banquet, a sign that they were unusually well pleased with things and one that I thought was very hopeful.

Jim Rough prospers. So do the pigeons and the trotters. I am invited to drive with him some afternoon before I go back to Philadelphia. It would be great, of course, but yet I hesitate. Did you ever take the trip to Chinatown or shoot the shutes or do the Montreal toboggan? Very exciting but nothing to crossing the Charles river bridge behind Jim Rough's Pegasus. G. C. WATSON.

L. E. Holden.

The newly elected president of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association is a native of Maine who traces his ancestry back to the Mayflower, on his mother's side, and to the year 1634, when his paternal grandparent came from England. He prepared for college under Dr. N. T. True, in Bethel, Oxford county, in the state of Maine, and entered Waterville College, now Colby University, in 1854, remaining there two years, and completed his course at the University of Michigan, where he graduated in 1858. That same year he was elected professor of rhetoric and English literature in Kalamazoo College. Three years later he became superintendent of schools of Tiffin, O. During these years he studied law and in 1861 was admitted to the bar in Ohio, but he never practiced. In 1861 Mr. Holden removed to Cleveland and for nine years he was president of the school board in East Cleveland. For more than thirty years he has been interested in mines in the Lake Superior region and in the west, but for fifteen years he has given most of his time to editing and publishing the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Mr. Holden has always taken a great interest in parks and outdoor art, and has written extensively on the beautifying of cities, the creation and preservation of parks, and for several years he was a member of the board of park commissioners of Cleveland. For the past six months he has travelled in Egypt, Greece, Italy, Germany, France and England and made a special study of parks. In accepting the presidency of American Park and Outdoor Art Association Mr. Holden pledges himself to do all in his power to advance its interests and to this end he proposes to write a series of articles on outdoor art, employing notes gathered on his European trip, for early publication in the Plain Dealer.

CARNATIONS.

SUMMER METHODS.

With most varieties of carnations the production of cut blooms under glass has practically ceased by July 1, and it would, perhaps, be better if none were offered, as the character of the summer stock has a strong tendency to make buyers regard the carnation as a "cheap" flower. If both growers and sellers would unite in withholding the poor stock from the public the rapidity of the growth of the flower in popular favor would be materially increased.

Speaking of the carnation as a cut flower, I mean when it is used without other flowers. So long as bouquets for cemeteries are in demand and for all manner of design work the carnation is a very useful summer flower and can be made a profitable one. Properly grown summer carnations may eventually be almost equal to winter products, but a careful look over the consignments at the commission houses and in the florists' stores just now would indicate that the varieties in this class are few and far between. In fact, it may be better not to try to grow carnations up to the proper standard for cut flowers in the summer for there is monotony in anything offered every day of the year.

In most cases it will pay carnation growers to pull out the plants, clean up the houses and start the paint brushes going soon after Memorial day. A month of hot sunshine in a clean house is worth more than the few dollars one could get out of second-class stock for the same period. There is no fungicide or insecticide which will have as good an effect on a house as to thoroughly cleanse it, in every nook and corner, and then let the sun have full play for a few weeks, following this with a liberal application of whitewash to the rough surfaces. A fresh coat of paint coupled with this treatment will make your house practically as good as new.

We all know how much better results are usually obtained from new houses and some may look with envy on the man who is putting up one or more new houses 25x300. Do not let this cause you to build a new house or two for yourself unless you have the money to pay for them. A house fifteen years old, brightened up with paint and sweetened with a good sun bath can be made to produce as good carnations as many of the new and improved houses. It is far better to have old houses and no debts than to have new houses and a host of creditors at your back, although those who can have both the new houses and the receipted bills will find them a good investment.

While it is no part of carnation culture, my experience leads me to believe that it behooves carnation growers to be more careful in the contraction of debts. Credit is, of course, almost a necessity in our business, but this only makes it the more necessary to carefully guard one's credit. This can only be done by regulating our purchases so that we can meet all our obligations at least twice a year, June 1 and January 1.

There is no detail of our business which requires more careful revision and attention than does the one of extending credits and collection of bills. The loss of accounts among growers comes not from indifference nor dishonesty but purely from a lack of knowledge of business methods and their application. Here is where our national society should take a hand. Secretary Stewart has told us very ably that the formation of the S. A. F. has done much toward this end, and so it has, but it might go a step farther and supply us with a simple system of keeping accounts, one that would apply to large and small places, and a set of books for recording them.

We should also adopt some uniform method of collection, for if we all had the same method and the same time for the settlement of accounts both purchaser and seller could arrange their financial matters with some degree of certainty. As matters now stand a creditor never knows when he is to get his money. Some one with experience in financial matters should work out this problem. It seems to me that if all accounts that are overdue and to which no reply can be obtained were promptly collected by legal process, with the costs of suit added, that the delinquents would soon be compelled to adopt better methods. If it were not that the S. A. F. is expected to do so much work for its paltry $3 per annum, it might take up the matter of the collection of accounts, greatly to the benefit of the trade.

All of this is slightly foreign to my subject, but is brought up by the thought that so many of us seem to allow our summer expense account to run so high that it takes all of our next winter's product to pay the bills contracted, so that a very little accident to stock leaves a few of us behind and in a position from which it is difficult to escape.

Sweet Pea Notes.

A good grass year ought to be a good sweet pea year. The season has been cool and the rain well distributed. Sweet peas are looking well at this writing. With me cut worms have done as much damage as in any three years put together previously. I should judge that the sale of sweet pea seed this year had held well up to the mark of recent years. I do not know of any flower on which people rally from their disappointments so much as on this flower. In forecasting the season of garden annuals the prevailing voice is, "Sweet peas we must have."

The list of novelties for 1900 is as follows: Eckford puts out six, Duchess of Westminster, a delicate apricot with flushed pink standard, wings rose pink; Countess Lathom, pink self; Mrs. Fitzgerald, soft cream, flushed and edged delicate rose; Fascination, delicate magenta mauve flushed mauve, wings deep mauve; Lord Kenyon, rose magenta flushed crimson, deeper towards edge; Calypso, bright magenta flushed mauve, wings delicate mauve.

Ernst Benary, of Erfurt, writes me that he introduces this year "a remarkably early flowering white, to be called Mont Blanc." He says it has in his grounds proved to be five days earlier than Earliest Blanche Ferry, but in other respects it corresponds to Blanche Burpee. It will be most interesting to test its forcing qualities.

The list of colors in dwarf form has been increased this year by the addition of lavender, scarlet and dark maroon. Admiration is a good straight American introduction. As I had it last year, it at times seemed almost like a self pink, but it has a delicate lavender cast. Salopian is the grandest red to date, and now in the improved strain called Sunproof it must be a very high grade sort. There will be a variety of opinions about the Snapdragon pea, but it is just what the name calls for.

The bush pea, Monarch, is the second pioneer of the new race. I went over 100 trials of sweet peas at Fordhook last autumn, and when we struck the spade under one of the bush variety my heart leaped, for it turned up the most complete fibrous root I had seen for years. It was a perfect sweet pea root, a thing I had not seen for certainly five years.

I find one important gain from the difficulty of late in growing sweet peas, that it has broken up the blind way of following stereotyped rules, and is giving us a wider range of practical experiment. This is good, and augurs a less hysterical way of looking for the cause of failure in any one direction. There will be a good percentage of success every year where conditions are favorable, and there will be a considerable body of steadfast amateurs who will work on through thick and thin, reaping the reward of patient and intelligent methods. Florists have no trouble with them under glass, and will select a few standard sorts for outdoor planting, with reasonable success. And for the general public the flower will have its periodic revivals. No flower can long sustain an abnormal craze, but must, if overdone, follow the law of reaction, and will of course in time renew itself for another run; and in the meantime will give reasonable results all the way along to intelligent and brave culture. The popular qualities of this flower will always hold it well to the front.

But little attention has yet been drawn in this country to the bi-centennial celebration of the introduction of sweet peas into Great Britian, which takes place at Crystal Palace, in London, July 20 and 21. The prospectus sent out some time ago shows a very promising patronage of prominent horticulturists in England. The writer hopes now to be present and read the paper on "Sweet Peas in America" which he was invited to prepare. But while he appreciates the honor of a place on the programme he will certainly feel lonesome unless buttressed by some representative Americans.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—MANY NOVELTIES ARE NOTICED.—NEW VARIETIES WORTHY OF WIDE DISTRIBUTION. — PELARGONIUMS WHICH ATTRACT FROM A DISTANCE.—NEW MALMAISON CARNATIONS.—AMERICAN SORTS TO BE TRIED IN ENGLAND.—FERNS RECEIVE LITTLE ATTENTION.—MARKET GROWERS WELL PLEASED.—BURPEE'S TROPÆOLUM. — SESSION OF KEWITES.—PLANTS WORTH WATCHING.

The Royal Horticultural Society's fortnightly meeting on June 5, although coming a day after a general holiday, brought out a most interesting display, several large groups being shown and a number of novelties submitted for certificate. The president showed Rhododendron Pink Pearl in grand condition and gained a first-class certificate, which is quite an unusual honor for a garden variety and which had previously been denied this sort, an award of merit being the highest distinction now given to varieties unless they are new hybrids or possess some remarkable distinction. Some grand things in new roses were shown by Wm. Paul & Sons, the most notable being Tennyson, a hybrid tea with large, deep, well formed flowers, of a delicate shade of pink. It was given an award of merit and will, I think, become a market rose of the future. Dobbie & Co. staged a fine collection of sweet peas in which were some very distinct varieties. Carnation Lord Roberts, a fine yellow, was shown by R. H. Bath, of Wisbech. The most attractive group in the hall was from Veitch & Sons, of Chelsea, and consisted of Eremurus Himilaicus and E. robustus, with an undergrowth of Primula Japonica. The immense spikes of eremurus were the admiration of all, and the gold medal awarded was well deserved. The same firm exhibited a grand bank of gloxinias and some fine hybrids of streptocarpus, the strain receiving an award of merit. Orchids were, as usual, well to the front, several interesting groups being shown. H. J. Jones exhibited a large collection of tuberous rooted begonias, some of the double varieties being very fine. Of the new ones Gladys Hemsley was selected for an award of merit. Cuthbert & Sons had a large group of spiræas, but few were distinct enough to be worthy of note. W. E. Gladstone was the most distinct and may be recommended. Sutton & Son, of Reading, made a most remarkable exhibit of cucumbers growing in pots and potatoes growing in boxes, one side of the boxes having been removed and glass substituted. Laxton Brothers contributed a fine lot of strawberries, some in pots and some gathered fruits. Kelway & Co. had some fine varieties of pæonies and Lord Roberts, very large petals, white slightly suffused with pink at base, gained an award of merit. Lady Curzon, full double white with small center florets, obtained the same honor.

Zonal Pelargonium Fire Dragon is a sport from the well known F. V. Raspail and is remarkable for the narrow, slightly curled petals, the cactus dahlia in minature. The stock has certainly not been grown under the most favorable conditions, yet, with weak growth, showing it had been under too much shading, it was flowering profusely, and it will certainly become a popular plant of the future. Mr. Hill, of Indiana, was much taken with it and has secured some of the stock. Ivy-leaved Pelargonium Mrs. H. J. Jones is even a greater novelty than the above. It is a sport from Souvenir de Charles Turner, from which it differs only in having beautifully fimbriated petals. H. J. Jones, who is the fortunate possessor of this novelty, considers it one of the most distinct and interesting sports he has found, and values it very highly. In sports there is often a tendency to reversion, but this after being well tested has proved constant and flowers now open are very bright. The late J. Fraser, who was one of our best judges and keenest observers, once told me that he did not care for such things as had to have the points explained before the improvement could be seen, but liked to be able to see at a glance or to be attracted from a distance, and this is just what both of the above will do.

Herbert Cutbush is a very fine scarlet carnation with large, well formed flowers and good branching habit. Many new varieties have been added to the list of the Malmaison type, the most recent being H. J. Jones, deep claret crimson, with large, full flowers richly clove-scented. Though not so well suited for cut flower trade this class finds many admirers and quite a number of orders have been booked for the above. While on carnations I may mention that next season I hope to have an opportunity to try some of the American varieties and should be glad to have a list of about a dozen of the most approved sorts. If any of your correspondents will kindly give a list, in the AMERICAN FLORIST, of those most likely to suit our English markets I should feel obliged. Among our best winter flowering varieties which are grown extensively for market are Miss Joliffe, flesh pink; Madame Therese Franco, or Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild, a little deeper in color and with fringed petals; W. Robinson, scarlet; Winter Cheer, smaller but very free and bright in color; Countess of Warwick, deep claret crimson, not so well known, but certainly the best of this color; Uriah Pike is similar in color, and still remains a favorite with many growers.

It is remarkable that, although ferns are becoming more and more in demand for decorations, collections receive little attention, and, unless we get a revival of interest in them, there is a danger of many choice varieties being lost. There has been an absence of novelties for some time, and those shown last year were not to be seen at the Temple show this season. I refer to Polypodium Mayi and Pteris Summersi. The latter is a beautiful, crested sort but it has as yet proved quite barren; in fact, as far as I have seen, it is quite destitute of any semblance of fertility. Speaking of fertility in ferns, I am reminded of the beautiful Adiantum capillus veneris imbricatum. At a spring meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society I saw some specimens with perfect fertile fronds, the first I have encountered, although I have had it under observation since 1886.

Growers for the market should have little cause to complain. Plant trade may be chiefly confined to bedding stock and other spring flowering plants, but everything seems on the move and you have to be up early to get all you want, unless your needs are very limited. Palms and other decorative plants do not move so freely and cut flowers are over-plentiful. It is marvelous what a quantity of stock is shifted in a short space of time in such a congested district. It seems a great pity that more space can not be given for such an important market as Covent Garden. Buyers experience considerable inconvenience and stock often suffers from being moved through such a crowded area, for, though it is becoming more and more the custom for the large buyers to get deliveries direct from the growers, the market trade seems on the increase.

Burpee's golden yellow Tropæolum Sunlight is by far the finest yellow tropæolum I have yet seen; it will be a largely grown market plant in the near future. I find it comes true to color from seed, but some plants do not run, and if propagated from cuttings it will come into flower earlier, making a good companion for our crimson variety, T. Lobbianum, which has long been a profitable market plant. The best stock is obtained from cuttings, but by raising seedlings annually and making a careful selection some improvement may be made, besides keeping up a clean, healthy stock.

The latest meeting of the Kew guild, which has become an annual affair, brought a large gathering of old Kewites together, and should prove the forerunner of many such pleasant reunions. There are, no doubt, many in the States who cherish kindly remembrances of Kew and its associations, and who would not lose an opportunity of being present should they be on this side of the Atlantic at the right time.

Admirers of pæonies will welcome Lady Sarah Wilson. It is semi-double, having very large petals of a delicate blush shade with a tinge of lavender at the base of the petals.

Bougainvillea Maude Chettenburgh may give varying results for different treatments, but the long racemes of cut blooms seen at the Temple show were certainly remarkable for color and size of bracts. It was shown as a seedling and was awarded a certificate under the above name.

Every grower of rhododendrons should look for Pink Pearl. The color varies from deep to pale flesh pink, the flowers are enormous and trusses large.

FLOWER MARKET IN A STATE OF COMA.—RECEIPTS HEAVY AND PRICES LOW.—GOOD BEAUTIES THE ONLY ITEM IN DEMAND.—CONVENTION PLANS MATURING RAPIDLY.

The flower market is and has been absolutely featureless since my last report. The returns for the past week for stock sold through wholesale channels have been smaller, if possible, than those for the previous week, which it was supposed had touched bottom for this season. The receipts in commission houses have not diminished to the extent anticipated, it appearing that each grower is holding on in hopes that others will be the first to discontinue and thus leave him a chance for some good picking on school commencements, weddings and steamer departures. For steamer gifts, however, nothing seems acceptable excepting Beauty roses of first grade and these are the only item in the list that has held its own. The balance of the rose supply finds no outlet whatever and remains unsold, even the Greeks refusing to touch it and confining their energies to the Jacqs and other outdoor varieties which have been at their height for the past week and are as good as, but no better than, the average in recent years. Carnations have been suffering from this competition also and even the finest stock obtainable cannot be placed at over $1 per hundred, while much of the ordinary cut has to go at $1 a thousand. The wedding demands seem to have no beneficial effect on lily of the valley, the growers seemingly having anticipated the call and stocked up the forcing beds accordingly. Sweet peas pile up in enormous quantities and very favorable weather has made them of excellent quality; prices will scarcely pay for picking. A few fine La France roses have sold satisfactorily.

Convention plans are maturing rapidly. Manager Cleary reports a lively demand for exhibition space and the best locations are being assigned rapidly. The souvenir book will soon be on the press; it will be a genuine surprise to the visitors. The sporting committees are making substantial progress. The shooting contest will take place on McKnight's meadows, Jersey City. A sign has already been erected there: "Beware of the man with the cork tooth."

As to early closing this year there is little prospect of an agreement among the wholesalers.

THE GREEKS STILL RULE THE MARKET.—VALUES BEATEN DOWN TO VERY LITTLE.—STORY OF LILY OF THE VALLEY.—PÆONY SHOW AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—FINLAYSON GROWS THE WINNERS.—NOTES OF THE PRIZE TAKERS.

The cut flower market is still a street fakirs' paradise. These individuals use up about nine-tenths of the stock coming in and they also make the price. They have got values of flowers in bulk down now to about the same figure as the same bulk of old straw would bring and unless a change comes soon they may demand pay for carrying it out of the wholesaler's way. There is really no value on anything except a very small percentage of selected stock. Carnations average of good quality but outside of the street fakirs few buyers are found. Roses are tending downward in quality. The price cannot get much lower, but the outdoor crop has not yet commenced to pile up, although it is now due. While it lasts there is no prospect of any special activity on the indoor kinds. Lily of the valley took heart as soon as the outdoor crop was over, and the price advanced sharply with the demand for bridal occasions but an unexpected impediment came in the shape of a big crop of cold frame stock which an up-country operator had shrewdly and in secrecy manipulated into bloom just as the outdoor product vanished. It was very adroitly managed and down went valley prices in consequence. The current week is filled with commencements, in addition to the numerous weddings, and class day at Harvard may be relied upon to use up a quantity of material, so the retailers have a chance to make a good thing of the season's wind-up, at the present values of flowers and the great quantity that is available.

The pæony show took place at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, June 16. The display of these showy flowers was magnificent. Five towering vases of blooms guarded the inner hall entrance and the other exhibits were arranged on tables extending the entire length of the hall. Dr. C. G. Weld, Kenneth Finlayson, gardener, was, as usual, invincible and gathered in first prizes with an agility born of experience. He won the Kelway medal offered for eighteen named varieties of Pæonia albiflora, first for general collection of double varieties, first for large vase of blooms and first for specimen bloom, the latter being a superb flower of P. Pottsii alba. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, was a close second on large vase of blooms and on general collection of double sorts, and was first on collection of single varieties. George Hollis was second on specimen bloom and on singles and third on the other classes, and W. J. Clemson, Edw. Powell, gardener, was fourth on large vase. Mr. Clemson showed a fine collection of hardy perennials, as did also Rea Bros. and R. P. Struthers and the Blue Hill Nursery. Dr. Weld's garden pinks, W. H. Spooner's hybrid sweetbriars and several extensive displays of native flowers all helped to make the show a thoroughly good one.

Thomas F. Galvin sailed for Europe on Saturday, June 16.

GOOD FLOWERS ARE SHORT OF THE DEMAND.—ROSE GROWERS THROW OUT THEIR PLANTS TO START AFRESH.—A QUESTION OF POLICY.—STOCK AND PRICES.—CRAIGS MAKING EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS.—NOTES.

Good flowers are very scarce; in fact, even poor stock is hardly to be had, as many growers have cleaned out their houses to make room for the young plants for the coming season. It seems a mistake to discard Kaiserins, for instance, that are fine and selling out clean at from $4 to $8 per hundred and that will be in strong demand until the summer houses come in, to make room so that a crop can be had from young plants by October and November, when the general average is not over $2 per hundred. It looks, to a man who knows something of things outside of a greenhouse, and little or nothing of the interior, as though it might be wise to hold on to the old crop for another month, before looking forward to counting the profits so many months away. Distance, however, "lends enchantment to the view," but when the goal is reached, things are as they are found. It is then too late and the annual howl about over-production, the chrysanthemums killing the sale of "legitimate" flowers, goes up, the country over, and the fakir lives on the fat of the land. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good and the fakir who is now such an important adjunct to the business is thus given encouragement. We would not say a word, but flowers are scarce and it seems hard to turn business away because of the lack of suitable stock to supply the demand.

Carnations are a great help just now. They seem to hold their own much better than roses. Ethel Crocker is good enough for anybody and is still bearing profusely, fine, full flowers, much better than anything else in the market. Prices for carnations are from 50 cents to $2 per hundred. Roses are $4 to $6; Beauties, 75 cents to $1 50 per dozen and very scarce and poor. Sweet peas are now in full supply at 25 cents per hundred. Water lilies are in and when miniature ponds graced with their beautiful blossoms are seen in the window decorations it is a sure sign, if any other was wanting, that summer is here.

Robert Craig & Son are about to make extensive alterations. They are tearing down a number of old houses and will replace them with modern structures. One large house containing ficus planted out for cuttings, called the rubber factory, has been entirely removed without disturbing the plants. Some 25,000 square feet of glass is to be changed. When this is completed the establishment will be in the best of condition, having been practically rebuilt within the past five years.

This is convention week, the Republican national convention holding forth in this city. There seems to be but few, if any, of the craft among the delegates; at least we have not heard of any such visitors being in town.

Hugh Graham had the decorations for a dinner given at the Union League, our swell political club, in honor of the prominent lights of the party now here. It was a very fine affair and was a credit to this celebrated firm. All the Republican clubs trimmed up a bit and there was quite a lot of decorating of an inexpensive character.

Emil Leiker, of Lansdowne, will be off in a few days to visit his old home in Germany and to take a look, as well, at the Paris Exposition.

John Walker is on a short vacation, traveling through western Pennsylvania and Ohio. K.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.—The Tarrytown Horticultural Society gave a very satisfactory exhibition on the evening of June 14. Although the majority of the exhibits were fruits and vegetables, the display of roses, carnations and miscellaneous flowers from Wm. Scott, Wm. Turner, Thos. Cockburn and others showed excellent cultural work.

About Palms.

We would warn all gardeners against allowing their palms to remain for any length of time exposed to the fumes of burning gas, or the plants will become irreparably injured. Repotting, etc., may be performed just before new growth makes itself visible in the heart of the plant, and this differs in the various species; but generally, it becomes noticeable in the month of April in this country. Shaking out and root pruning may be done at a somewhat earlier date than simple repotting or retubbing, which may take place at any time between April and midsummer. In the case of the gardener having to perform the first two operations, a moderate hotbed in which to plunge the plants is of great use in re-establishing them, even in the case of the hardie genera.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

Ribbed Glass for Vegetable Growing.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please state whether thin, rough or ribbed glass could be successfully substituted for the ordinary double thick greenhouse glass in the growing of vegetables. Acknowledging the superior strength of ribbed glass, I am uncertain as to whether it will admit sufficient light during the winter months. P.

For the winter forcing of vegetables it is hardly possible to have too much light, and clear glass will give the best results. The increased strength of ribbed glass will not make up for the loss of light. L. R. T.

Gas Versus Coal—Form of Greenhouse.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—1. How many feet of natural gas equals a ton of coal for heating a greenhouse? 2. Do you consider a greenhouse on a hillside with a single slope facing the south equal to a ridged house? The house I have in contemplation would be fifty feet square. Could the pipes be so arranged in this house that the heat would be equal, and how? Would ventilators at the top and at the bottom be sufficient? A. B.

1. I have never made a comparative trial of the two, but I know that some persons estimate that one ton of a good grade of steam lump coal is equal in efficiency to 4,000 feet of gas. 2. When houses are to be forty or fifty feet wide it is well to have the ground slightly sloping, as the distance from the plants to the glass will be lessened. Ordinarily it will be better to have from one-fourth to one-third of the roof slope to the north than to have it all toward the south. The cold air always drops to the lowest part of the house, and this is the principal objection to side-hill houses. A difference of five feet in the level of the opposite sides of a house will often make a difference of 10° in the temperature. This can be counteracted by placing most of the radiation at the lower side, or plants that require a low temperature may be placed there. In addition to wide ventilators at the ridge and in the south wall, it will be well to have openings in the north wall and to provide some means of ventilating from the ends of the house. L. R. T.

TRADE STEADY AND BRISK.—LARGE RECEIPTS MOVED AT REASONABLE PRICES.—BEAUTIES AND OTHER GOOD ROSES SCARCE.—PÆONIES DRINGING BETTER PRICES THAN USUAL.—ROSES AT JACKSON PARK NEVER BETTER.—IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED FOR OCONOMOWOC.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST.

This has been an uneventful but busy week. Trade has been steady and remarkably heavy and, although there are still very large receipts, there has been little surplus. Of course prices have not been high but roses have become quite scarce, especially the better grades, and bring good figures, Wietor Brothers securing as much as 8 cents for their best Brides and Bridesmaids. They are also cutting some extra Meteor, but this item is still scarce, and Beauty, also, is under the demand. Carnations are still plentiful but are cleaning out with little effort. The qualities are fair. Pæonies are not yet near an end but are going well. Prices realized this year have been far better than usual because of the peculiar weather, and some other factors, which have stretched the crop over double the usual period and prevented the deluge which usually breaks down values as soon as the cut is fairly on. There have been all kinds of garden flowers but they have sold slowly and been little used except for window decoration.

Admirers of outdoor roses have not seen the best display ever on view in the west unless they have visited the Wooded Island in Jackson Park within the past week. The cool spring made the rose garden about a week later than usual in reaching perfection, but the place has been thronged, and every one has joined in praise of the display. The garden shows no change from previous years except that many of the varieties were never so good, notably Mrs. John Laing, pink; Marshall P. Wilder, cherry rose and carmine; Paul Neyron, deep rose; Jean Liabaud, crimson maroon; Margaret Dickson and Mabel Morrison, white, and Anna de Diesbach, carmine.

O. Speidel, gardener at the P. D. Armour, Jr., estate at Oconomowoc, Wis., was in town one day this week enroute to the Higinbotham place at Joliet and to Lake Geneva. He is preparing to make some extensive plantings and improvements at Oconomowoc, although his place is already one of the finest in this section of the country. Mr. Speidel is having excellent results with hotbeds made with cement walls sunk below the frost line, covered by sash and heated by one run of pipe, a style very common in Belgium and which serves to carry stock safely through the winter.

J. Austin Shaw is making Chicago his headquarters for a time, prior to a western trip. He is now devoting his energies solely to the interests of the Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark. N. Y., and the European and Japanese houses which they represent. This firm is probably is the largest grower of clematises in the world, their output this year exceeding 250,000.

Thursday was the date of nearly all the commencements in this city and was expected to be a very busy day all along the line, but the rain interfered and, wholesalers estimate, reduced the value of supplies on hand that morning about one-third.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a few Liberty roses each day, from his 6,000 plants, and while they are still rather short, the buds are fine and the buyers are glad to get them at good prices.

A. C. Spencer and his family have removed to the South Side, corner of Forty-third street and Calumet avenue, where he has a pleasant home easily accessible from Reinberg's wholesale store.

W. N. Rudd and a party of kindred spirits have been spending this week fishing in the vicinity of Glen Haven, Mich.

Arnold Ringier is making a trip to the Pacific coast and incidentally taking in the bulb fields in Washington.

Visitors: D. R. Woods, Los Angeles, Cal.; J. D. Carmody, Evansville, Ind.; Fred. Gear, Cincinnati, Ohio; H. W. Kœrner, Milwaukee.

BUSINESS FAIRLY ACTIVE.—GOOD STOCK SCARCE.—VOLK TO CLOSE HIS HANDSOME STORE.

Trade has been fair so far in June, for there were many receptions while the federation of women's clubs was in session and the June weddings and commencements have carried things along nicely. While there has been a large quantity of stock in the market, really first-class material has become scarce. Spiræa Van Houttei has been much in evidence.

George Volk has concluded to discontinue his store on Milwaukee street and devote his entire attention to his greenhouses. Mr. Volk's store is one of the handsomest in the city and much regret is felt at his determination but he says the strain of managing both places is too great.

The addition to the establishment of Holton & Hunkel Co. is now completed, giving them the room necessary to handle their increasing trade. They also have a new wagon.

A. Billings is remodeling his greenhouses and next year will grow more lilies and fewer violets.

Recent visitors: Adam Zender and wife, Chicago; A. H. Stolze, Manitowoc.

Garfield Park is to have three new houses 9x100. C. W. S.

Carl Hirsch, florist upon the Michigan Southern Division of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., with headquarters in this city, has recently completed what is probably a trip the like of which was never known in this country. Mr. Hirsch started out with a special train of four cars laden to their capacity with potted plants and before his return he had traveled 1055 miles and planted 191 flower beds at the various stations on his division of the road. Mr. Hirsch is now planning a vacation trip to Europe, sailing about July 1 and visiting France and Germany, being absent about two months.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Charles F. Fairfield's greenhouses at 30 Eastern avenue have been purchased by D. J. Murphy, who will change the name to the Eastern Avenue Conservatories. THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co. inform us that they have been awarded first prize for sweet peas at the Paris Exposition.

CUT worms and wire worms are playing havoc with both field and sweet corn around Waterloo, Nebraska. Some fields of heavy land had to be planted as many as three times. A good rain the night of June 15 helped matters a good deal.

How Seedsmen Bowl.

The seedmen bowled many games during their recent meeting at Chicago. Herewith we present the scores made in one of the games: A. Dickinson, 185; C. Stecher, 139; A. T. Ferrell, 134; C. H. Vick, 112; J. C. Vaughan, 111; P. Hollenbach, 102; H. G. Windheim, 97; F. W. Barteldes, 96; J. C. McCullough, 92; W. C. Langbridge, 83.

ALBERT M'CULLOUGH
President-elect American Seed Trade Association.

Albert McCullough.

At its annual convention in Chicago last week, Albert McCullough, senior member of the well known firm of J. M. McCullough's Sons, Cincinnati, Ohio, was elected president of the American Seed Trade Association. Mr. McCullough has been a member of the association since its inception in 1883, serving three years (1886-89) as secretary and treasurer and one year (1890) as president. He has thus been twice chosen as president, an honor not previously bestowed on any other member. Mr. McCullough was born at Cincinnati in 1851. After a collegiate education he entered the establishment founded by his father, the late J. M. McCullough. He is thoroughly interested in all departments of the business, giving special attention to grass and farm seeds. In the management of the concern he is now ably assisted by his son, Harry B., the elder gentleman having many other interests which make heavy demands upon his time.

California Notes.

Thomas A. Cox, of the Cox Seed Co., is expected home from New York this week. Fred. Hunter, of the same firm, has gone south while John Horn is traveling in the opposite direction.

Chas. Beebe, of Trumbull & Beebe, is on a business trip to the southern part of the state.

Arnold Ringier, of W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, is here. METEOR.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

THE Central Michigan Nursery Company, Lansing, Mich., has increased its capital stock to $25,000.

THE American Forestry Association meets at Schwerwinerhorn Hall, Columbia University, New York, June 25 and 26.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—F. S. Phœnix, the nurseryman, lost his office and office furniture in the recent disastrous fire here.

E. RUNYAN, president of the Elizabeth Nursery Co, Elizabeth, N. J., who was at the Chicago convention with fine samples of clematis, etc., reports an excellent business.

IN the Superior Court at Council Bluffs, D. J. Fogarty has begun suit for $1950 against E. L. Newland, who refused to accept nursery stock as per contract and left the goods on the plaintiff's hands.

GEORGE FOSTER has disposed of his interest in the Phœnix Nursery Co., Bloomington, Ill., to W. E. Rossney and retires after thirty-two years' connection with the establishment. Sidney Tuttle and Mr. Rossney are now the only owners of Phœnix stock.

Nurserymen's Protective Associations.

There was unusual activity in the ranks of the American Nurserymen's Protective Association during the convention in Chicago last week but what occurred at its annual meeting, June 13, aside from the officers elected, it is not given the uninitiated to know. The new officers are: President, Wm. Pitkin, Rochester; vice-president, A. L. Brooke, No. Topeka, Kans.; secretary, T. B. Meehan, Germantown, Pa.; treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.; executive committee, C. J. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; C. J. Brown, Rochester.

The annual meeting of the Nurserymen's Mutual Protective Association was held Wednesday evening, June 13. The usual routine of business was transacted and the following officers re-elected: President, N. H. Albaugh, Phoneton, O.; vice-president, Wm. C. Barry, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary and treasurer, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; executive committee, E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Irving Rouse, Rochester; F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kans.

St. Louis.

TRADE IS FAIR IN SPITE OF THE STREET CAR TROUBLES.— ROSES SCARCE AND BEAUTIES UNOBTAINABLE.—CLUB MEETING.

There has been only a slight change in the state of trade during the past week. Several school commencements have created an increased demand for bright colored stock, but there have not been so many large weddings. Good roses are exceedingly scarce, and as one wholesaler put it, "we forget what Beauties look like." Carnations have dropped a notch in quality, but sweet peas are fine. There has never been known a time when the town was as full of them as it is to-day. Prices run from 10 cents to 30 cents per bunch. Spider lilies are going rather slow at $1 per dozen cuts. Cape jasmines and pæonies are over.

The Ostertag brothers and their helper returned early in the week from their trip to Elkins, W. Va., where they had been for a week prior to making the decorations last Saturday for the Kerens wedding. The stock used was mostly from New York; in fact, all of it with the exception of the laurel and rhododendrons, which were collected from the mountains near Elkins. It is seldom that a decoration requires the services of three men who have to travel 2700 miles, as in this instance. Three other helpers, in addition, were hired east, making six in all for the job. To give an idea of the size and beauty of the decoration we give the following memoranda of stock used: 1800 Kaiserin and 800 Bridesmaid roses, 200 Beauties, 1500 lily of the valley, 400 cut orchids, 500 strings of smilax, about 1000 strings of asparagus, with a very large quantity of laurel and rhododendrons and palms. It required six boxes of ribbon, and other things in proportion. It, unfortunately, rained during all the time after the decoration was set and no photograph could be secured.

The meeting of the Florists' Club on June 14 was poorly attended, presumably on account of the strike. The exhibition of mixed flowers was postponed until a fall meeting. M.

Indianapolis.

SEVERAL CHANGES IN BUSINESS.—NEW HOUSES TO GO UP.—PERSONAL DOINGS AND VARIOUS ITEMS.

R. F. Harritt, for a number of years manager of the Meridian Conservatories, has bought four acres of ground near Broadripple and intends to put up several large carnation houses equipped with all modern improvements, including a heater of his own invention.

Weishaar Brothers are to give up their place in Brightwood and Henry Weishaar will shortly erect seven houses and an office in Dounan street, with the intention of doing a general retail business.

Thus far only Ed. Bertermann and Henry Rieman have positively announced that they will attend the convention, the indications, however, point to a larger attendance from here.

Harry Balsley was in town last week receiving many good orders, one of which was from the Smith & Young Co., calling for 2500 of his bottomless violet pots.

The annual outing of the State Florists' Society will take place near Broadripple, the details to be announced at the next meeting of the club.

The suggestions of John Bertermann have once more put Fairview Park in a very presentable condition. H. J.

Chestnut Hill, Pa.

At the meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society, Tuesday evening, June 12, President John T. Morris, just home from Europe, gave a brief mention of horticulture as he found it in the Old World. The judges of the evening's exhibits were Ernest Ashley, Richard Moore and Martin McTigue. The prize winners were:

W. Robertson, gardener to J. W. Pepper, first for lettuce, peas and hybrid perpetual roses and special mention for tomatoes.

W. Boyce, gardener to Randall Morgan, second for lettuce and certificate of merit for the finest strawberries on exhibition, losing the cash prize offered for best quart of berries by showing two quarts.

John Little, gardener to J. Lowber Welsh, first for quart of strawberries.

Frank Gould, gardener to John T. Morris, second for strawberries, first for radishes and collection of herbaceous cut blooms, and certificate of merit for specimen plant Clerodendron Balfourii.

Hans Reuter, gardener to C. W. Henry, special mention for vase of antirrhinum and certificate of merit for collection of sweet peas.

Henry Harris, gardener to Mr. Gratz, special mention for collection of sweet peas.

G. W. Brown, gardener to R. N. Carson, special mention for tomatoes.

Thomas Miller, special mention for platter of Rockford cherries.

The varieties of roses winning the honors were Paul Neyron, Alfred Colomb, Magna Charta and Brunner.

TOPEKA, KANS.—A. Reinisch, formerly of Lawrence, Kans., has been appointed superintendent of the Topeka city parks with offices in the city hall.

Lord & Burnham Co.'s Bowling Trophy.

The illustration given herewith shows the handsome trophy that is to be offered by the New York Florists' Club at the annual tournament for competitian between the various clubs, the club making the highest score in the three games to hold it for one year and to be offered for competition at the next annual tournament. Sould the same club win it twice in succession it becomes the property of that club.

At Omaha.

Our bowlers are practicing up preparatory to going to New York to trounce those Philadelphians and other crack players. As yet we have not reached our true form, but this is what we did after the last club meeting:

Player	1st	2d	3d	Av
Hess	145	162	178	161
Hadkinson	152	161	160	158
Henderson	135	168	159	154

Floth	155	138	148	147
Paulson	136	145	140	140

L. H.

At Philadelphia.

There has been some good rolling on the alleys of late. Games of 180 and over are quite common, while scarcely a day passes that some ambitious bowler does not have a 200 or over to go on the board. Hamilton, one of our associate members, and the crack bowler of the club, put up a new record one day last week, making 998 points in five games. Here they are in the order they were played, 165, 190, 224, 219, 200. This gives him the record for the best five, the best four, and first for the best three consecutive games. Harris, who was a little off for a while, is now in form again and grumbles if his average falls below 165. Anderson and Westcott are also in fine shape and pretty sure of a place on the team. The final rounds of the contest for places on the team for the convention tournament will commence on outside alleys, each match on a different alley, the first week in July. There will be four matches of three games each between the twelve members of the club who have made the highest average in 100 games during the past six months. The six men having the highest averages in these July games will constitute the team, the next two highest going along as substitutes. K.

SATISFACTION WITH SPRING TRADE.—COMMENCEMENTS CALL FOR BEAUTIES.—THE CLUB MEETS.

The florists are about through with their spring work and all are well pleased, for there has been a good demand for cut flowers and plants all through the season. The graduating exercises seem to come earlier than other years, and to bring a larger demand for American Beauties.

The Florists' Club meeting was well attended last Thursday evening, June 14. It was a good, sociable crowd and made plans for a picnic in July and a trip to Mr. Hesser's palm garden at Plattsmouth. The question box always brings something of interest; one question was: "What can be done to introduce horticulture as a study in all state institutions and in public schools?"

J. W. & E. E. Arnold report a big business ever since last fall. They are busy building new benches in their old houses and will shortly put up two new structures. L. H.

RACINE, WIS.—Mrs. C. W. Pike, of this place, now informs us that she has not closed her place of business and that she will not do so at present.

San Francisco.

MUCH STOCK AVAILABLE BUT LITTLE BUSINESS DOING.—CLOSE OF A GOOD SHIPPING SEASON.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF INTEREST GLEANED FROM AMONG THE TRADE.

Business is very quiet at present. The market has a good supply of flowers of all kinds but there is practically nothing doing. The stores are all full of good roses, but the largest percentage of them are consigned to the waste barrel. Sievers' carnations sell better than any other sorts. Lilium Harrisii is scarce but we note some auratums coming in which sell readily. There are plenty of sweet peas to be had at almost any price offered. Shipping trade for this season is almost over. All things considered it has been a very favorable year for shipping and the outlook for next season is brighter than ever.

P. O'Hearn, at San Mateo, has thoroughly overhauled his greenhouses and is planting all the new carnations. His chief sorts will be Ethel Crocker, Olympia, Estelle and Leslie Paul.

John Gilmore is preparing to receive a large shipment of young rose plants with which to stock his new range of glass All his stock is coming from the east.

James Milan, assistant superintendent of Golden Gate Park, has been very busy of late in the planting of lawns and shrubs at Union Square.

Frank Pelicano has returned from a vacation trip to Mt. Diablo.

Jas. DeBono, who has been with I. Jaeger & Co. for several years, left recently for Cape Nome.

John O'Hearn has been appointed head gardener at Alvinza Hayword's place at San Mateo. METEOR.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—J. D. Carmody reports that he is shipping ventilating and other greenhouse apparatus quite extensively to Canadian points.

DENNISON, TEX.—E. Farley is building two houses 20x65, one for roses and one for carnations. This is the best spring he has had, school closing bringing much business and plant trade being unprecedented.

REPORTS OF THE BEST JUNE BUSINESS ON RECORD.—KRAMER TO BUILD AN ADDITION.

Trade is still on the move, especially for commencements but on account of the continued rainy and cloudy weather, which kept up all last week, choice flowers are rather scarce. Wm. F. Gude says that this has been the best June since they have been in the business. Z. D. Blackistone reports that business has held up very well.

F. H. Kramer will build a new house for roses and carnations. It will be 30x125 feet and heated by hot water.

P. G.

Providence, R. I.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held in the Franklin building in this city on Thursday evening, June 14, and was largely attended. The principal topic of discussion was the trip to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held in New York city in August. It is expected that there will be a delegation of nearly 100 from here. Upon invitation of President James Hocking, it was voted to hold a picnic some time in July upon the grounds of the Dunnell estate at Pawtucket. An interesting feature of the meeting was the exhibition of seedling carnations by the originator, Wm. Maxfield, of Barrington Center. Walter Nichol, of Barrington, showed some good new sweet peas.

PETER REINBERG,

51 Wabash Ave. CHICAGO.

Orange, N. J.

At the meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, on June 6, reports were received from committees and a general clearing up ensued prior to the summer vacation. The feature of the evening was a display of President Carnot roses, grown by Geo. Smith, in the open, which received the society's first class certificate. A vote of thanks was given C. W. Ward and Messrs. Hitchings & Co. for valuable assistance to the society in the recent distribution of plants to the school children, and the committee was released with a vote of thanks of the society.

Henry Bird, upon invitation of the society, exhibited and explained the use of his new self-watering seed, spore, cutting and propagating pot, which not only received the certificate of the society but, upon recommendation of the judges, the society gave it its endorsement by a unanimous vote. The pot presents the appearance of an ordinary 10-inch pot; about two inches from the top is a groove running around the pot without lip or flange, communicating with the interior with eight or ten holes. A piece of woolen yarn is placed in the groove encircling the pot and terminating in the feed water jar. The earth is kept in a state of moisture by capillary attraction.

Under the old method of surface watering spores and many very small seeds are often washed away and those that grow come up very unevenly. If Mr. Bird's invention obviates all this tronble, which those who raise many plants from seed well understand, it will be of great value. J. B.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thresher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. ☞A CHILD can run it.
Just the thing to fight crab grass.
It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

MEETING OF THE CLUB.—ELECTION OF OFFICERS.—WITTERSTAETTER GETS THE ENQUIRER MEDAL.—CRITCHELL BECOMES SUPERINTENDENT OF PARKS.

On June 9 the annual meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held at the club rooms and it was decided that our annual outing and picnic be held at Lookout Park on July 25. After the regular business had been transacted the election of officers took place with the following result: President, W. Murphy; vice-president, R. Witterstaetter; secretary, Geo. Bartlett; treasurer, Frank Ball; director, Ben George. The McLean gold medal won for R. Witterstaetter by Enquirer carnation was presented to him by President Murphy, and at the close of the meeting speeches were in order as usual.

A few days ago a party of Cincinnati florists made a flying trip to Dayton and the Soldiers' Home. This is a most picturesque spot. The floricultural features have been changed somewhat, more blooming plants being used and carpet bedding rather discarded. Several large specimen palms thirty feet high, such as chamærops, corypha and seaforthia, and araucaria seen here are as fine as any in this country. We made a short call on J. B. Heiss and found his place in the very best of condition. Mr. Heiss has been making palms one of his specialties for the past few years, and, judging from his young stock, will be able to supply his trade better than ever. He reports spring sales as fifty per cent greater than last year.

The Board of Public Service has appointed B. P. Critchell superintendent of parks to succeed R. H. Warder. The appointment, while it gave no little surprise, was none the less deserved, for Mr. Critchell, besides being in thorough sympathy with the new administration, is known not only in Cincinnati but throughout the trade as a man eminently qualified to carry forward the much needed improvement in the parks.

There seems to be very little change in the cut flower market this week; the over supply continues, with slow demand. Planting is about done and the market florists report a satisfactory spring trade. Scarlet geraniums were in the lead and sold at $1 per dozen in 4-inch pots.

Gus. Scheibely, until recently employed at the city greenhouses, died June 7, at the age of 27 years. H. SCHWARZ.

This book, 387 pages of facts tersely told, is issued annually and is an aid to business and money making which no wholesaler or traveling salesman can afford to be without. It contains the name of every Florist, Nurseryman and Seedsman, arranged both by states and towns and alphabetically; and new lists of Gardeners or Superintendents of private estates, Experiment Station Horticulturists, Landscape Architects and Horticultural Supply Concerns. It will save many times its cost by enabling you to cover America with your catalogue and at the same time waste no printed matter or postage on dead names.

Notes on Plant Growing.

From time to time there appears to be a revival of interest in some of the old-time favorites among foliage plants, and in this connection we are again reminded of the dracænas, or more properly the cordylines. A little greater variety among the house plants which the retailer may recommend to his customers would be of advantage to the trade, but we must always keep in mind that most plant buyers require their purchases to remain in a presentable condition for more than a week after they are received, and also that the conditions to which the plants will be exposed are abnormal ones. It is these conditions that restrict the retailer from using many beautiful plants that could readily be grown if they could be satisfactorily used.

Some of the dracænas, however, and especially those belonging to the terminalis section, may be grown into shapely and attractive plants in a reasonable time, and, providing they are not sent out in too soft a condition, will stand the window garden test fairly well. Among the first points to be considered should be the fact that these plants are best grown quickly so as not to be stunted or receive a check in any way, either by getting too cold, too dry, or too much root-bound before being shifted from one size of pot to another.

If clean and healthy young plants in about 3-inch pots can be secured it is probably more satisfactory for the grower of a small lot to begin in this way, rather than by getting some stems or canes with the idea of raising young stock for himself, for these imported canes are not always in first-class condition, and will also occupy space for some time before the young shoots can be taken off.

Owing to the fact that many of our cultivated dracænas are subject to a disease or spot, it becomes necessary to carefully examine the young stock that may be purchased, else the labor of the season may be ultimately lost by the production of a batch of unsightly and unsalable plants. This disease shows itself while the plants are quite small, if they come from infected stock, the disease appearing in the form of spots and discolorations on the leaves, first yellowish and finally brown, and cause the premature loss of the lower foliage.

Having secured the aforesaid clean stock of plants in 3-inch pots, we proceed to give them a shift to 4-inch pots just as soon as they are nicely rooted, using for this purpose a good, fibrous loam or rotted sod, to which has been added about one-fifth its bulk of stable manure and enough bone dust to whiten the outside of the soil heap before mixing. Keep the drainage of the pots open, for the plants will need considerable water, and in setting the plants on the bench allow them space enough to keep them stocky and short-jointed.

Moderate shading is required on the house, and a rather close atmosphere for a time, syringing the plants twice a day on bright days, and shutting down the ventilators by about four o'clock in the afternoon unless the weather is very hot. In fact, to get the most rapid growth on plants of this character, I prefer to shut the house for an hour or two in the late afternoon anyway, though some ventilation should be given again before sundown. This kind of a steam bath for a short time near the close of day revives and stimulates the plants in much the same way that a summer thunder shower acts on the outdoor vegetation after a day of intense heat.

The plants having become nicely established in 4 inch pots, which should be in the course of five or six weeks, they may be shifted to the 6-inch size, this being large enough for most purposes. A moist atmosphere must be continued and syringing done vigorously to prevent attacks of red spider and thrips, but as the plants get color and approach their selling time it is well to give air much more freely in order to harden them, the object being to avoid fault-finding on the part of a reasonable purchaser.

These brief remarks apply especially to Dracæna terminalis or D. ferrea striata, these two being among the most satisfactory to the trade grower. D. Braziliensis and D. congesta are also useful, being strong growing and tough in foliage, though much less pleasing in color than the preceding. W. H. TAPLIN.

The Question of Sub-Irrigation.

The time for filling benches having arrived, a few words about the most approved methods of bench construction may be of interest. Sub-watering will eventually be accepted as a feasible and practical plan of irrigating plants grown in benches. Its value is beyond question and it only remains for growers to make use of it. Sub-watering in the greenhouse has many advantages over surface watering, among them, that it affords an abundant supply of water to all parts of the soil at all times, thorough drainage and aeration of the soil, a perfect mechanical condition of the soil, a saving of labor in the application of water and a marked gain in yield and earliness of crops. At the Wisconsin Experiment Station, in the case of one crop of lettuce grown by this method, a gain over surface watering of forty per cent was obtained. The average gain on over fifty trials was twenty-six per cent.

If the water is judiciously applied from the start, a very high percentage of moisture may be maintained in the subsoil with a dust-like mulch on the surface, a condition highly desirable in the culture of certain crops, such as carnations, for instance. More skill is required in applying water by this method than in surface watering. The water should be applied slowly at first and sufficient time should be allowed for it to be taken up by capillary attraction before applying more.

The exceptional vigor and increased yields of the crops grown by this method are probably due almost wholly to the abundant supply of water in the soil. The texture of the soil used, when subwatering is employed, is of but slight importance, from the fact that the soil particles are not brought closer together by successive waterings, as in surface watering; therefore very heavy soils remain in excellent physical condition. The methods and materials employed in the experiments in sub-watering at the different experiment stations are diverse, but the results obtained have been uniformly in favor of sub-watering over surface watering.

The essentials for the work are a level bench, practically watertight and a foundation of some porous material of sufficient depth to allow of a free and even distribution of large quantities of water over the bottom of the bench when rapidly applied. At the Wisconsin Experiment Station charcoal, brick, brickbats, flat tile and round tile laid close together have all been employed and good results obtained from each. A bench fitted for sub-watering by placing on a water tight bottom a layer of one inch of fine gravel and two inches of coarse sand, separated by a thin layer of sphagnum, has given excellent results.

FREDERIC CRANEFIELD.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

The accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph, is printed to show the adaptability of this plant to conditions which it is found, with a great majority of our decorative plants, are least conducive to healthy growth, viz., those which obtain in the rooms of dwelling houses. The specimen here represented had not even the advantage of a bright suburban or country room, but stood through winter and spring in the atmosphere of a city apartment house, retaining its foliage perfectly and blooming profusely all the time.

Culture of Herbaceous Calceolarias.

[By Wm Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener, of Ogontz, Pa. Read before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, June 19, 1900.]

There are two distinct classes of calceolarias. Those known as shrubby are used in some parts of Europe for planting out in summer, and then there are the herbaceous varieties. It is of the latter class, which is the better for pot culture, that I will talk about to you this evening. They are grown from seed, and the best time to sow the seed is in the months of July and August. The seed should be sown in pans or small boxes in a mixture of even parts of well decomposed sod, leaf mould or peat in which some sand has been mixed. Care should be taken to choose a shady situation for the seed pans and as cool and airy as possible. After the plants are well up they should be pricked off as soon as large enough to handle, again using pans or small boxes; this time using two parts well decomposed sod and one part leaf mould and a little sand. After a day or two of careful shading they should be gradually given air and a position selected as near to the glass as possible. When strong enough they may be potted into 2½ inch pots and placed in a frame, outside if possible, with the sashes elevated sufficiently so that a free circulation of air may be assured at all times when the weather is favorable. In the outside frame they may remain until cool nights set in, by which time they should be large enough to be repotted into 3-inch or 4-inch pots, according to the strength of the plants. By following the method recommended some of the very largest will become sufficiently large to occupy a 7-inch or an 8-inch pot to advantage. The temperature in the winter months for these cool greenhouse plants should whenever possible be kept down to from 45° to 50° in daytime, and at night from 42° to 45°. The greatest care must be exercised in the watering, especially in the winter. They suffer a great deal if allowed to become too dry, and one overdose of water will almost kill them. Their greatest enemy in the insect line is the green fly. To overcome this trouble tobacco stems must be liberally placed between the pots.

This is the method I used last year and had very good results. I had in the months of April and May plants two feet across full of bloom, growing in 6-inch pots and they were grown in a natural way without training, which surprised many of my gardener friends who called to see them. In the collection of over 300 plants it was hard to find two alike, so varied were they in their shadings and markings. Among them were some very nearly pure white; one was a pure canary yellow, and one was a canary yellow with large spots very nearly black. I hope with the brief cultural directions given that my fellow gardeners will take them in hand and make an effort to grow them, for nothing, in my opinion, gives more pleasure than a collection of well grown herbaceous calceolarias.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

SPECIMEN PLANTS.

Specimen plants are making rapid growth and the foundation is now made for shapely subjects. Neglect now cannot be repaired. Close pinching must be practiced until August 10 or thereabouts. Some plants may be stopped later, but judgment gained from practical experience must be our guide. In any case, strong growing shoots must be shortened. It also will be necessary to commence staking early to insure the best development of all growing shoots, as there is always a tendency to crowding. Any left-over stakes will come in handy for the first tying out, as these will, in all probability, be withdrawn, as the plants show the extent of their probable development. But, if we can tell about what size the plants will attain, we can put in permanent stakes, leaving them long enough to allow for any future growth. Outdoor, or rather, planted out plants will require very much the same treatment. We cannot, however, thus early stake them for "a finish," but we must make provision for even growth and for good shapely plants by temporary staking. Such plants must be taken up early, say in August. It is unwise to let them make big plants and pot them in September; they are always difficult to establish and usually lose their lower leaves. If possible, choose a dry time for lifting. Lifted dry, and well watered, recovery is rapid. If lifted after a moist time and with soft growth, recovery is less certain.

Red spider is often a nuisance. We have found lemon oil one of the best insecticides. A little sulphur may be thrown in and it will stick to the leaves and help, also, as a guard against mildew and other fungous diseases, but the new chrysanthemum rust is hard to kill. It will be better to sacrifice the affected plants. Lemon oil is expensive and that is against its general use; but, if good specimens are expected, we must keep down insects at all costs. Used at the the rate of half a pint to three gallons of water it is safe and efficacious. Red spider, if allowed to get a foothold, will become an almost uneradicable pest. The injury done when the blooms commence to open, is of a most damaging nature; in fact, they never open. Out of doors insects, especially aphis and the red spider, are kept down by other insects, and have never given the trouble they do indoors.

Feeding may now be practiced freely with all healthy plants. Much judgment is required. It needs an intuitive eye. As a rule the strongest growers take stimulation most safely. The delicate ones need care. Extra doses injure rather than help. Ivory is a hard one to manage in this respect. A good specimen needs a long season of steady growth, and a well bloomed specimen of this variety is the best evidence of skillful chrysanthemum growing one could wish.

IDA L. CHITTENDEN'S VIOLET HOUSES AT LANSING, MICH.

VIOLETS.

SUCCESS WITH MARIE LOUISE.

Within recent years a number of establishments have sprung up in various sections of the country, making a specialty of one flower and growing it so successfully that reputations more or less widespread have been the result. Of the many growers of good violets few have attained more satisfactory results in a brief period than have attended the efforts of Ida L. Chittenden, at the Maplewood Violet Houses, corner of Washington and Mount Hope avenues, Lansing, Mich., of which two views are herewith presented.

It was not until the autumn of 1896 that the first of this glass was erected, a house 14x40. This was very much in the nature of a venture, as there was no experience with the violet upon which to base operations. Miss Chittenden had, however, for more than a year, been studying the peculiar requirements of the plant with a view to undertaking its culture commercially. The houses are built upon a somewhat unusual plan. All the plants are in solid beds and in the houses extending east and west the beds are on the ground level of the south side. Hot water is used for heating and all the pipes are above the beds. The latest addition to the range is the house running north and south, 16x100, but practically like the others. It was completed too late last fall to have this season afford a fair test of the merits of the house, but it is expected to prove itself the best in the range. The advantage of this style of house for violets is the full exposure to the sun which is secured.

The cultural methods employed are not different from those of many other successful growers. The cuttings, first rooted in sand, are set in the field as early in May as circumstances will permit. Here they receive frequent cultivation and the runners are cut back every week during August. The clumps are moved into the houses early in September, sometimes in the latter part of August. Before the stock is brought inside, the houses are carefully cleansed, whitewashed and fumigated, and some of the old soil is removed from the beds and replaced by fresh compost. After the plants are established indoors the points given most careful attention are their frequent cultivation, the removal of runners, loose crowns and dead or diseased leaves, and, most important of all, the ventilation. The houses are kept at a very low temperature during January, so cool, in fact, that frost sometimes nips the plants a bit.

The one problem as yet unsolved is that of the extermination of aphids, which are constantly troublesome. A great deal of care is given to bunching and packing the stock for market, for it is the painstaking attention to details from start to finish which results in success. Marie Louise is the only variety grown and, except for a small local trade, the cut is sold through E. H. Hunt, Chicago.

RED SPIDER ON VIOLETS.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Please tell me how to get rid of red spider on violets in the field where water supply is limited.

Mississippi. M. A.

Probably the best way to hold the red spider in check or get rid of it in the field when the water supply is limited, is to spray the plants once a week, until the spiders have disappeared, with a solution of Ivory soap and water. Cut a five-cent bar of the soap into very thin slices with a knife, or better, with a small block plane, and dissolve in about one gallon of hot water. When all the soap is dissolved add sufficient water to make seven gallons. Apply the solution with a small hand spray pump and from two to four hours after making the application syringe the plants thoroughly with clear, cold water. From three to five treatments of this kind, if thorough, should rid the plants of both the spiders and the eggs. P. H. DORSETT.

ROSES.

EARLY TREATMENT FOR ROSES.

As the planting season is now here, a careful estimate should be made for the coming season, selecting varieties according to what your customers prefer or what will succeed best with your treatment, soil and the class of houses you have to grow your roses in. All these items are factors in the cultivation of the rose which many are apt to overlook at this season, yet to obtain the best results they should be very carefully considered.

As a rule the varieties which succeed under the same general treatment are Bride, Bridesmaid, Catherine Mermet, Golden Gate, Mme. Hoste, Mrs. Pierpont Morgan and Mme. Cusin, while Bon Silene, Papa Gontier and Souvenir de Wootton do best with a slightly cooler treatment, an average of 2° or 3° less than the first named, or about 52° to 54° at night during the winter season. In most places the buds of Perle and Sunset have of late years come badly deformed during the winter if not kept at 58° at night and where it is necessary to grow these varieties in the same house with Bride and others they should be placed in the warmest part of the house. Meteor, to get the best results, should have it least 5° or 6° higher temperature all the time.

Most of the hybrid teas such as American Beauty, La France, Caroline Testout and Admiral Dewey should have a slightly drier atmosphere, on the whole, than the teas proper By a little care in arranging these matters, better results can be obtained than would be possible with indiscriminate planting. Soil, watering and ventilation are all important factors in the cultivation of the rose, but have been so often described in detail in these columns that it would seem superfluous to repeat.

One thing, however, should always be borne in mind when planting, and that is to make the soil quite firm about the ball of the plant as soon as it is placed in position; the lighter the nature of the soil the firmer it needs to be made. A good plan to prevent the soil in the beds or benches from becoming sour from over watering is to press the soil very firmly, close around the plant, leaving a slight ridge to form a dish-like basin a few inches around each plant; leave the balance of the soil loose till the plant becomes established and begins to spread its roots into the surrounding soil. By this means a liberal supply of water can be given to each plant without saturating the whole body of the soil, and as soon as the plants have made a good start into new growth, which means that the roots are beginning to throw out feeders, all the compost on the bench should be pressed firmly and the surface raked over lightly to make it even. From this onward general good cultivation is all that is needed to obtain the best result.

GARDENS ON THE CHAMPS DE MARS.—A GREAT VARIETY OF MATERIAL EMPLOYED.—BIG PALMS ON THE CHAMPS ELYSEES.—HOW THEY WERE PREPARED FOR REMOVAL.—A ROCK GARDEN WHICH WAS A HAPPY THOUGHT.—FOURTH FLOWER SHOW REMARKABLE FOR FORCED FRUIT.—MANY VARIETIES EXHIBITED.—THE PRIZE WINNERS.

It would be difficult to define the style of the gardens which have been laid out on the esplanade of the Champ de Mars. No attempt has been made to pretentious landscape effect or scenery and the primary duty imposed on Mr. Vacherot, the architect, was to furnish some appropriate shady resting places, which would not take too much room and would modify the reflection from the surrounding staff buildings. It is to be regretted that Mr. Vacherot could not be given greater scope for his skill, but most of the room was required for the circulation of the visitors and, although the broad central alley occupies the greater part of the ground, it is almost certain that on festival days, when the waters in front of the electric palace will play, the lawns and gardens will not have a very good time.

But if the gardens lack extent, they contain as great a variety of trees as possible. The collection comprises such kinds as Araucaria imbricata, Chamærops excelsa, Phœnix Canariensis, Cedrus Atlantica, Ginkgo biloba, Sequoia gigantea, Acer Negundo, Abies Douglasii, the curious Abies Cranstoniana, Sequoia pendula and many other kinds. The weeping trees are conspicuous everywhere and are represented by specimens of Betula pendula, Fagus purpurea pendula, Ilex peudula, Larix Europæa pendula, Sambucus pendula, etc., and even a weeping chestnut, which tree is not easily brought to weep. The color effects on the lawns are produced by beds of seasonable flowers. These beds were lately occupied by that fine glowing red stock, Queen Elizabeth, and the white stock, Apple Blossom, and by collections of nasturtiums, which made pleasing groups between the trees. In the angles of the buildings are massed magnificent specimens of rhododendrons and azaleas supplied by Moser of Versailles.

In the other part of the exposition, near the Champs Elysees, the laying out of the gardens, on the Avenue Nicolas II, had to undergo the same limitations. The most notable feature of the gardens in that avenue are the big specimens of Phœnix dactylifera, which have been brought from Nizza at a great cost. To ensure their growing on at the exposition without a check, their removal was prepared for in the following way: Eighteen months ago a deep trench was dug around each tree, the ball undermined at a depth of from one and one-half to two yards, the roots cut and a floor inserted. The sides were treated in the same way and the whole fastened together. The palms by this method had an enclosing frame without having been removed from their quarters. The trenches were filled with good soil and the plants watered as often as they needed it. When the new growth started again, the roots, which had been cut back, produced a large number of rootlets which, through the fissures or openings of the bottom and sides, found a rich, suitable soil to thrive in. To remove the trees, the trenches were opened and the trees extracted with their frame and ball. Some of the palms weighed over three tons. The setting out, with frame and ball, at the exposition was easy enough and as the palms, planted in holes prepared in advance, were surrounded by the best of soils, the rootlets of the previous year ramify without any obstruction. The palms will move into warmer quarters again next fall. Nearly all the trees which had to be removed for one or two years, while the buildings were in progress of construction, were treated in the same way. After a sojourn of a couple of years in the Bois de Boulogne some were better off than before the change.

To visitors who are weary with sight seeing and with visiting the curiosities and marvels in the buildings, I recommend the little rock garden of the Champs Elysees. This rock garden was not thought of until just before the opening of the exposition. When the old Palace of Industry was pulled down a few years ago, to make room for the two new palaces, the city of Paris objected to the removal of the materials through the fine avenues of the Champs Elysees. The architect had therefore to construct, under the leading thoroughfare, a tunnel leading to the Seine river. The palaces were finished but a short time before the date fixed for the opening of the exposition and it was then too late to fill up the tunnel and as it was thought that it might be of service at the close of the exhibition, the happy idea was conceived that the best thing to do was to embellish the tunnel as well as possible and to use the part in the open air as a rock garden. The latter is planted with a fine collection of cacti and rock plants from our cactus king, Mr. Simon, and at its bottom is a rivulet containing aquatics.

The fourth flower show began on June 13 and in the materials exhibited, presented many points of similarity with the preceding show. Its prominent feature was the fine collections of forced fruits. Platzer, of Bailleul, won a first prize with splended specimens. His purple grapes were Gros Guillaume or Barbarossa; Madresfield Court, Black Muscat and Frankenthal, or Black Hamburg; and his white sorts Foster's Seedling, Gros Coulard, Duke of Buccleuch and Chasselas de Fontainebleau or Royal Muscadine. He also showed Precoce of Croncels and Early Rivers nectarines. The Fruit Forcing Co., of Rueil, also secured a high reward. Among their collection were the following: Borowiski, Grand Alexandre and Transparente de Croncels apples; Williams and Dr. Jules Guyot pears; Early Bertin, Fertile de Salluau and Red Versaillaise currants; Whinham's Industry and Wilson's Early gooseberries; Dauphine, Barbillonne, Golden and White Argenteuil figs; Precoce de Montplaisir apricot; Hale's Early, Amsden, Grosse Mignonne and Michelin peaches; Lord Napier, Precoce of Croncels and Early Rivers nectarines; Early Green Gage, Monsieur Hative, Razaimbaut, Blue Belgian and Althan Green Gage plums; Hornet, Falstaff and Four Seasons White raspberries, all of which, with the exception of a few sorts were shown in pots. Boucher, of Paris, won a first prize with the following cherry trees in pots: Empress Eugenie, Precoce Marbree, Black Eagle, Early Rivers, Ohio Beauty, Bigarreau noir and Guigne de Lamaurie. Such little trees, bearing abundantly, ought to be more generally grown for grand dinners where they would create quite a sensation. Lapierre and Millet had both a splendid collection of strawberries including the leading kinds known. The apples in the American section continue to be in fine condition and very aopetizing. If my memory is not at fault Kansas received the first prize with New York at the fourth show.

Roses, pæonies, annual and biennial flowers, geraniums, begonias, orchids and phyllocacti, as in the previous shows, formed splendid displays. Among the plants not yet shown on a large scale were a fine group of salpiglossis and one of single and double petunias, for each of which Vilmorin received a first prize. The same firm had a beautiful lot of their new Chelone Hybrid Rose which won a special award. Burpee, of Philadelphia, was first in the sweet pea contest, with a lot of fifty varieties in full flower, which included many delicate, pretty colors, but little grown here. Billiard & Barre sent a fine lot of cannas in flower, for which they received a first prize. J. Pernet-Ducher, Venissieux-Lyons, had a very interesting lot of cut roses. It contained his new rose, Soleil d'Or, which attracted great attention on account of its distinct, old gold color, not easily described. The other sorts shown were Joseph Hill, rose color; Bersez, white; Mr. Hede, dark red; Prince de Bulgarie, fleshy rose, and Senateur Belle, salmon rose.

Morel & Son, Lyons, staged a new purplish red clematis, which they call Ville de Lyon. Croux & Son, Sceaux, had a fine lot of Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. PARISIAN.

MARKET IN A STATE OF INOCUOUS DESUETUDE.—SUMMER SOLSTICE SUBDUES SHIPPERS.—LITTLE USE FOR MATERIAL AT HAND.

This week sees mid summer conditions fully established in the cut flower trade. There is practically nothing going on and nothing for anyone to do. Receipts of flowers, roses especially, have fallen off largely but it makes no difference, as there is no use to which the material that does come in can be put. Outdoor roses are at an end and this is gratifying to those who have been obliged to handle them and look for a market for them at a few cents per hundred. Sweet peas are everywhere, excellent in quality but unsalable. If it were not for the interest in the approaching convention it might truthfully be said that New York never before was so dull, floriculturally, as it is now and will undoubtedly be for some weeks to come.

Chicago.

RISE IN TEMPERATURE CAUSES FALL IN PRICES.—HOT WEATHER BRINGS MATTERS TO THE SUMMER LEVEL.—SOME ITEMS STILL SCARCE.—FIGURES ON THE PÆONY CROP.—SWEET PEAS IN ABUNDANCE.—JOTTINGS OF VARYING IMPORT.

Things came down to the summer basis with a rush on Monday morning, the change in the state of the market being in line with the weather conditions. Spring has surely lingered in the lap of summer, in this instance, and carried the matter too far, with the result that when the moment of expulsion came, the mercury is said to have gone rushing up the tube of the thermometer with a noise like that which the skyrocket will make next Wednesday night. At any rate it became too hot for comfortable existence and nobody wondered that stock, demand and prices wilted. It is fortunate that the supply has materially diminished, for with stocks not much more than half as large as they were ten days ago the market cleans up pretty thoroughly each day. Good roses of all kinds are still short of the demand, there is not enough lily of the valley and even white carnations are sometimes difficult to obtain.

Now that pæonies are approaching an end speculation is in order as to the number of blooms handled in this market and A. Kennicott, who has been cited as an authority, says that the total is probably between 30,000 and 40,000 dozen but E. E. Pieser thinks it is rather higher than even those figures, remarkable as they are. At any rate the number exceeds last year's crop by many thousand dozens and it is safe to say that in no other market is the pæony in such demand as it is in Chicago and that in few markets has good stock realized better prices this spring.

There are all kinds and conditions of sweet peas in the market now, but none are finer than those from C. W. Northrup, of La Grange, who has a choice of colors all on extra long stems and carefully bunched. Another grower, Chas. Lewis, of Hastings, Mich., is sending in good flowers but his only effort at bunching is to attach a tag with his name and "the world's best," merely looping it on, the way we attached our Derby badges to our coat buttons. At McKellar & Winterson's they have been having Firefly, a fine bright scarlet pea useful for many purposes.

Paul Zoellner, of La Crosse, Wis., with two of his daughters, visited the city this week on a brief vacation. Mr. Zoellner reports a splendid trade in bedding plants. He says Yellow Crozy canna is an excellent pot plant and that he had no trouble in disposing of his stock at $1 each when in bloom.

H. N. Bruns has not yet determined whether or not to visit France and Germany this summer. He is still forcing lily of the valley pips and making money out of them, for valley is a scarce article just now, Bruns and Jurgens being about the only sources of supply.

C. W. McKellar and Mrs McKellar are planning to go to New York to the convention in August but E. F. Winterson is making no preparations for that gala trip, for their business has gained such proportions that they find it impossible for both partners to be absent at the same time.

A. C. Spencer has been agitating the question of early closing and all of the wholesalers and commission dealers have agreed to shut up shop at 5 p. m., beginning next week; buyers, particularly those out of town, should take notice.

Van Clave, the candidum lily grower, of South Haven, Mich., has been in town this week. He is sending in some good stock, which is selling fairly well, but reports the cut to be only just at a beginning.

The Derby made some business last Saturday, principally decorations for luncheons and small dinners, but a few of the turnouts at the track were decorated with flowers.

John C. Schubert was at Springfield this week as a delegate to the democratic state convention which nominated Samuel Alschuler for governor.

George Reinberg is rebuilding the benches in his carnation houses and getting into good shape for an early start in the fall.

George Stollery and James Hartshorne, accompanied by Mr. Hartshorne's little son, started Thursday upon their trip to Europe.

E. E. Pieser and Mrs. Pieser are planning to go to West Baden July 3 to begin their series of summer outings.

Sam Pearce is a happy man these days, because of a baby boy who arrived June 25.

Visitors: G. W. Weatherby, Jr., Chillicothe, Mo; C. H. Reed, Birmingham, Ala; J. S. Stuart, of Anderson, Ind.; Alfred Carlson and Nels Nelson, of St. Paul, Minn.; G. Fleischer, of Pueblo, Colo.

CALUMET, MICH.—Albert Lutey, of the Ishpeming Floral Company, Ishpeming, is planning to establish greenhouses here.

BAR HARBOR, ME.—Carl Beers has arrived from Bangor and opened up at the Rodick House, expecting to remain through the season.

Gas Versus Coal.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—In your last issue "L. R. T." says it has been suggested that one ton of good steam lump coal is about equal in efficiency to 4,000 cubic feet of gas. If he means natural gas 25,000 feet would be nearer the mark. I have used both largely. At the ratio suggested by me the cost here would be equal and I have discarded gas for coal.

SUMMER SEASON ON IN EARNEST.—HOT WEATHER HURTS ALL ROSES BUT METEOR AND PERLE.—TRADE DOWN TO NORMAL.—LARGE PLANTING OF QUEEN OF EDGELY.—HEACOCK'S METHODS.—CONVENTION TALK AND OTHER MATTERS.

We are now enduring the first really warm spell of the season; it is red hot, so to speak, and is finishing up the balance of last season's stock. The Beauties that are now coming in are very hard to pass off as such and other roses are almost as bad. Meteor growers seem to be in it, as this variety, as well as Perle, seems to improve under existing conditions. The Floral Exchange people, who make a specialty of Meteor, say their houses have done better this season than usual and their increased shipping trade has made the past month the best June they have ever had. The new colonial group, or large range of several connected houses, which is to contain thirteen beds all filled with the Queen of Edgely, is about finished and will soon be planted. Trade in the stores is very slow, almost all the social functions are over and nothing outside of the regular summer demands, comprising funeral flowers and an occasional order for the seashore and other pleasure resorts, is to be looked for. Even now red immortelles and cape flowers are being manipulated for next season's business.

Jos. Heacock says his sales of palms this spring have been far ahead of his expectations. A new house, recently erected, now stands idle, as the stock he was expecting to grow on in it is now located in different parts of the country. Nearly all his rose houses are replanted for next season. When benching plants he does not fill in and level off the soil at first, a pocket being left about each plant to hold the water, which is carefully given at first, so that only the immediate soil about each one is kept wet. As the plants start away and the ever attending weeds join in the race, the bed is then levelled off and cleaned. Mr. Heacock thinks the soil is kept sweeter this way than if watered all over from the start. He says that insects do not bother him on either his roses or palms and he attributes this entirely to the use of Lonsdale's evaporating pans, which are always in service as long as the steam is on.

The coming convention is now claiming the attention of the boys and there will certainly be the largest delegation from this city that has ever attended any convention. All western and southern delegations who can come this way are especially requested to do so by the Philadelphia club's committee, as they would like the pleasure of their company in the club house for a few hours.

Chas. Fox, of Twenty-first street and Columbia avenue, is never idle and as the summer quiet of the city hangs heavy on his hands, he has this season opened a hotel at Atlantic City, calling it La Belle Inn, where he will be glad to see his friends in the trade. Everything is first-class, the cuisine being under the charge of one of the best chefs of this city.

The Sharon Nurseries, 1908 Susquehanna avenue, are closing out their business.

Alexander Scott and wife will sail about July 1 for a European trip. K.

TRADE GOOD AND EVERYBODY HAPPY.—CLUB PREPARING TO DESCEND ON NEW YORK.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Cut flower trade has been very good here lately, commencements, social and matrimonial functions combined with funeral work, of which there has been more than usual, serving to completely exhaust the supplies of serviceable stock. The bedding season is over and has proved a good one, stocks being well cleaned out.

Pittsburg had a quarter-of-a-million-dollar fire on June 22 and A. M. Murdock's flower store was in the center of the holocaust, inflicting a considerable loss.

The Florists' Club is preparing to descend upon New York in August and proposes to make its presence felt in all the departments of convention work.

LONDON reports are to the effect that haricot beans continue scarce and that blue peas are steady in both value and demand.

D. M. FERRY failed of nomination as the republican candidate for governor of Michigan at the convention at Grand Rapids June 28.

PARIS, FRANCE.—Mid-June visitors to the exposition were William Henry Maule, of Philadelphia; R. W. Clucas, of Clucas & Boddington Co., New York; the Mussey brothers, of Paterson, N. J.; Mrs. F. W. Barteldes and Mrs. Max Wilhelmi and children, of Lawrence, Kans.

Resolutions of Respect.

At the eighteenth annual meeting of the American Seed Trade Association, the following resolutions were presented by J. E. Northrup, chairman of the committee on obituary resolutions:

WHEREAS, Since our last meeting it has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst our fellow member, Chas. Copeland Morse, of Santa Clara, California; and,

WHEREAS, During the many years of his association with us we had learned to recognize the value not only of his special attainments in the line of his chosen work, and his thorough reliability as a seed grower, but his sterling manhood, his undeviating adherence to what he believed to be right, and the far reaching influence of his life and character; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the American Seed Trade Association in convention assembled, that we do hereby tender to his business associates our sympathy for the deprivation in the conduct of their business of the benefit of his wise counsel and advice; but more than all our sympathy goes out to his wife and children in the great sorrow which has come to their hearts and home. Assuring them also that his memory will ever be cherished among us as one whose daily life afforded an example worthy of our remembrance and emulation; be it therefore further

Resolved, That the secretary of this association be directed to spread these resolutions on its records and that a copy of same be sent to the family of the deceased.

WHEREAS, Death has again appeared in our midst, and removed from our number our fellow member Buel Lamberson, of Portland, Oregon; and,

WHEREAS, During the period of his association with us we had learned to appreciate not only his true worth, kindly disposition, and cordial nature, but his broad and public-spirited character, and,

WHEREAS, We appreciate the loss which his death brings to the city and state of his adoption, of whose resources he was ever ready to speak, and upon the future of which he delighted to dwell, but above all, to his sorrowing wife and children who are thus deprived of a tender and considerate husband and father; now, be it

Resolved, By the American Seed Trade Association in convention assembled that we tender to his bereaved family assurances of our fraternal sympathy and regard, and assure them that his cheerful presence will ever remain a bright and helpful influence with those who knew and loved him; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of this association be directed to spread these resolutions on its records, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

Low-Priced Seed May be Expensive.

In a bulletin issued some time ago by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., A. J. Pieters, in charge of pure seed investigations, makes the following remarks under the above head:

While it is difficult to estimate the money loss chargeable to poor seed on account of extra labor, loss of the use of land and the introduction of weed seeds, it is easy to determine the exact loss due to the quality of the seed itself, reckoned on the increased price for the seeds that actually come up and grow.

A sample of seed may contain:

1. Pure and germinable seed, that is, seed that will grow and produce the kind of plants wanted.
2. Chaff, sticks and dirt.
3. Dead seeds of the kind purchased.
4. Weed seeds and field seeds other than those wanted.

Of these the pure and good seed only is of any value, the remainder either being useless or positively harmful. The value of the sample to the farmer will depend, then, upon the amount of pure and germinable seed present. It is for this that the farmer pays, and whether the seed is cheap or expensive depends not solely upon whether it is low or high priced, but upon how much he pays per pound of good seed. The term "Actual or net value" is used in seed-testing establishments to indicate the proportion of seed that is both pure and germinable. For example, if a sample of clover seed has 98 per cent of pure seed and 90 per cent of this will germinate, then the proportion of good clover seed in the entire sample is 90 per cent of 98 per cent, or 88.2 per cent. This represents the net value of the seed, and in a scale of 100 the sample is said to have a net value of 88.2. The standard weight of a bushel of red clover is 60 pounds and a sample having a net value of 88.2 will contain 52.9 pounds of good seed. The net value of the seed sold on the market varies widely and there is no constant relation between cost and value.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—A. W. Coleman, the landscape gardener who has recently become superintendent of Evergreen Cemetery, is making marked improvement in the horticultural features of the tract.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO. J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

A CONFERENCE on arboriculture and pomology sits at the Paris Exposition on September 13 and 14.

LOUIS LEROY, the well known nurseryman of Angers, France, has been appointed chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the President of France.

THE Oregon Nursery Company has been incorporated at Salem, Ore., with capital stock of $20,000. Malcom McDonald, Archie McGill and A. W. McDonald are the incorporators.

JACOB MOORE, of Rochester, the originator of Brighton grape, Barseckle pear and other well known varieties of fruits, who has long been seeking a measure of protection for the owner of new sorts, having appealed without result to the authorities of New York state, announces that he will never resume his work of cross-fertilization.

Theodore J. Smith.

Theodore J. Smith, the newly elected president of the American Association of Nurserymen, was born in Geneva, N. Y., June 28, 1862. He received his early education in the public schools of that city and later entered Hobart College, from which he was graduated in 1884. He studied law for a short time but found that profession uncongenial and accordingly joined his father and uncle, Thomas Smith and William Smith, who were pioneer nurserymen, having established the old Geneva Nursery in 1846, under the firm name of W. & T. Smith. In 1892 the concern was incorporated and Mr. Smith has since that time been its secretary and treasurer. Aside from close attention to the nursery business he has also given much time to other commercial institutions, chiefly local in character, and is now president of the Geneva Optical Company and was, until quite recently, president of the Baltimore Retort Company, of Baltimore, Md. While never going into politics Mr. Smith has served his native city for several years, first as a member of the Water Board and afterwards on the Board of Public Works. The W. & T. Smith Company, of which Mr. Smith is the active manager, is one of the largest establishments of the kind in the country and has an extensive patronage and an enviable reputation. The next meeting of the nurserymen's association will be held at Niagara Falls at the time of the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, only a few miles distant, and for this reason it is expected that the session will be largely attended and most interesting, an end to which Mr. Smith is prepared to devote no little energy.

St. Louis.

TRADE FAIR BUT STOCKS LIMITED.—SWEET PEAS IN UNWIELDY OVER-SUPPLY.—PERSONAL DOINGS AND VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

Trade is fairly good, with the market glutted with sweet peas, just enough carnations to meet the demand and roses of good grade hard to get. Perles, Meteors of very good quality and Bridesmaids are about all that can be secured. Lily of the valley only comes in on special orders and they are few and far between. This is practically all the stock there is that is worth mentioning, and prices remain unchanged. Sweet peas are being overdone. To sell all that comes in is an impossibility at present and those who contemplate growing them next year had better go slow. They are undoubtedly a good thing and large quantities are sold, but the supply since June 1 has far exceeded the demand.

The firm of Felter & Bruecker, 4335 Lexington avenue, has dissolved partnership. Wm. Bruecker is establishing himself on Marcus avenue, several blocks north of Natural Bridge road, where he has bought about a half acre of ground and nearly completed the erection of a greenhouse 25x125. He will grow carnations and pot plants.

A call upon Theodore Faller on Natural Bridge road this week finds him, as usual, busy with his field stock, which is in good condition. He has torn down one of his greenhouses and is replacing it with a more modern structure, in which he will grow carnations.

R. J. Mohr, a student at the Missouri Botanical Garden and former Omaha florist, is in Philadelphia this week. His thesis work is sweet peas and before returning home he expects to visit Burpee's farms and Dreer's to view their trials of sweet peas.

The price of admission to the chrysanthemum show this season will be 25 cents. The exhibition committee of the club meets again this week to pass on the preliminary list before placing it in the hands of the printer.

H. G. Berning has just returned from a trip to Kansas City and Pleasant Hill, Mo., where he has been visiting Geo. M. Kellogg's places and others. M.

At Chicago.

Friday evening, June 22, two of the series of ten match games between Winterson, Hauswirth and Degnan were played, the latter leading by seventeen pins. A series of fifteen games will be played to determine as to the team for the New York convention contest, although it is hardly probable that all of the six players who average highest can arrange to participate in the trip. The following games were rolled during the evening:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th	Av
George Stollery	157	201	140	159	165
John Degnan	162	149	154	167	158
Chas. Balluff	152	170	169	135	157
Fred. Stollery	141	163	132	156	148
P. J. Hauswirth	127	149	144	160	145
Geo. Asmus	152	183	120	111	142
W. Kreithing	127	123	116	192	140
E. F. Winterson	114	154			134
J. S. Wilson	128	95			112

At Philadelphia.

The bowlers are getting ready to roll in the international championship games in New York in July. Associate members are eligible for this and the club will enter a pretty strong team, but it is hardly likely they will get a place, as over 250 teams of five men each have entered and it will take some great score making to even get a mention in such a race. The team of five men will be selected from the following bowlers who have been playing for a place for the past three months. Three or four matches will be played on outside alleys and the five who average highest will compose the team:

Player	Games	Av
Hamilton	74	173
Johnson	100	172
Mooney	12	168
Moss	100	163
Moore	44	161
Connor	100	159

Allen	66	156
Peterson	12	156
Brown	73	154
Walker	100	152

At Detroit.

The Detroiters made some famous scores in their practice games, Monday evening, June 25, but J. F. Sullivan, who made the high score, 220, was not in it on the average, Frank Holznagle making the very pretty record of 182 for three games. Here are the figures:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	4th	Av
Holznagle	194	212	139		182
Pantke	169	172	175	177	173

With Philadelphia Gunners.

The gunners had a shoot for the Westcott trophy last Tuesday afternoon. W. K. Harris, the veteran shot, appears to be getting as ambitious and expert at the traps as he is on the bowling alleys. He came out on top in this contest and is now in a fair way to win the prize. They shot at fifteen targets known angles, fifteen unknown and ten pairs of doubles. The club championship was also shot off. The score follows:

Name	Known	Unkn	Dbl	Hdcp	Total

ROSES AND STRAWBERRIES AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—DISPLAY EXCELLENT IN EVERY PART.—SHOWING OF ROSES.—OTHER GOOD EXHIBITS.—CUT FLOWER TRADE LIGHT.—OUTSIDE BLOOMS INTERFERE.—PERSONAL NOTES AND VISITORS.

The rose and strawberry show at Horticultural Hall last week was exceedingly fine in every department. The display of hybrid perpetuals was very large, occupying nearly the entire upper hall. As in the past, M. H. Walsh, of the J. S. Fay estate, was the largest exhibitor and staged some 2,000 blooms of rare beauty. Other large displays of roses were made by Miss E. J. Clark, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. J. Clemsen, Mrs. O. S. Paige, Mrs. R. M. Clark, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Dr. C. G Weld, Francis Blake and others. W. A. Manda received a certificate of merit for his new hybrid Pink Pearl, and Jackson Dawson a silver medal for Lady Dunham. The hall was much improved by the groups of foliage plants which this year's schedule provided for. These were arranged by J. S Bailey, Wm Donald, gardener; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, and E. S. Converse, D. F. Roy, gardener, to whom the premiums went in the order named. The lower hall was resplendent in sweet williams, kalmias, pæonies and promiscuous displays of hardy perennials contributed by Rea Bros., Blue Hill Nursery, Carl Blomberg, W. J. Clemsen and W. E. Coburn. J. E Rothwell's orchids were very fine. One Lælia purpurata bore thirty-six flowers and a Cattleya Mendelli twenty-six flowers. T. C. Thurlow's kalmias and E. S. Converse's tuberous begonias were also prime attractions. The show of strawberries was pronounced to be the best in years and this was also true of the vegetable classes.

The cut flower trade is dull, even for this season. It would seem that the flower buying season has closed earlier this year than usual Little demand is experienced in any direction. Outdoor roses, laurels, etc., are at their best this week and fill in a place in the wedding and graduation demand that would, with a more forward season, have made a more lively call on the greenhouse stock. Lily of the valley seems to sell better than anything else for the time being, there being no outdoor flower that can take its place in bridal work.

A large company of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. E. M. Gill, at Medford, on Thursday, June 28, to assist in the celebration of Mrs. Gill's seventieth birthday anniversary. The house was beautifully decorated with roses and the guests brought many handsome gifts to attest their best wishes.

On July 4 the Floral Emblem Society of Massachusetts proposes to distribute a quantity of flowers to the school children of Boston at Horticultural Hall.

Long & Marshall have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. The business will hereafter be conducted by S. E. Marshall & Co.

W. R. Shelmire, formerly of Avondale, Pa., is now with H. N. Eaton, the carnation grower, at South Sudbury, Mass.

Sarah J. Stewart, eldest daughter of Wm. J. Stewart, was married on June 27 to Albert S. Dunnell at Winchester.

W. C. Stickel has purchased a large tract of land at East Lexington.

Visitors: W. F. Sheridan, Mrs. and Miss Berger and Geo. H. Moulton, of New York; Geo. C. Watson, Philadelphia; Geo. B. Wiegand, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.

NEWBURGH, O.—Paul Kunze has succeeded to the business of Kunze Bros.

RANTOUL, Ill. — H. M. Morris has enjoyed so good a trade for the past season that he is preparing to erect another house for carnations.

WHITMAN, MASS.—Robert E. Moir has had a fine increase in business this season and will add two more greenhouses, making seven in his range.

LEXINGTON, KY.—D. Honaker has experienced such an active demand for American Beauties during the past season that he has determined to invest $2,500 in a Beauty house 32x150, which will increase his range to 60,000 square feet.

BUCYRUS, O.—O. Shubert, who married Anna Messner and induced her brother to go into the florist business with him, subsequently leaving both, has been arrested and will be brought back to explain his conduct.

NEWARK, N. J.—The firm of Begerow & Gerlach has dissolved partnership and business will hereafter be conducted by August Begerow. The dissolution is brought about by the ill health of Mr. Gerlach, who will go to Europe for a two or three years' visit.

FLORISTS RECUPERATING AFTER A BUSY SEASON.—PLAN A VACATION TRIP INTO THE GULF.

After the hard work which we have had during the busy season, the florists needed recreation and the last meeting of our society looked like a real glee club meeting. Very little was heard of any horticultural subject. We had to decide where to go to spend our vacation of a few days. A trip to the Paris fair being too much for our purse, we voted for going to Grand Isle on the gulf and we expect to take our summer outing sometime during the next month.

Going among a few florists some days since, I found J. H. Menard about to move his store to a better and more central location, on Baronne street, near Canal, in front of the two recently built theatres, the Crescent and the Tulane. No doubt such a move will increase his already well established business.

E. Valdejo, like several others, is repairing and making many improvements, but will build no new houses.

M. Cook is building a new greenhouse 25x100 in the rear of his office.

HOT WEATHER AND A LULL IN TRADE.—ROSES POOR.—A GOOD MONTH.—VARIOUS PERSONAL NOTES.

Summer weather is here and roses, with few exceptions, are very poor and mildewed. Carnations are holding out well and are in good demand. Trade has been good nearly all the way through June, weddings and commencements keeping the ball rolling. This week Scott had the order for an elaborate military wedding.

Store windows are beginning to betray that tired look which is as sure as the calendar in indicating the season. The stores certainly should all close at 6 p. m. during the next two months.

Rebstock and Kasting can be seen any evening, speeding their thoroughbreds in the parks; the best that the rest of us can do is to scorch on bicycles.

Jerry Brookins, of Orchard Park, is still cutting some fine Scott carnations.

W. J. Palmer, Jr., and S. A. Anderson have been away for a week's outing.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thresher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. ☞ A CHILD can run it.
Just the thing to fight crab grass.
It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

TRADE FAIR BUT COMMENCEMENTS AT AN END.—AN ESCAPE FROM SERIOUS INJURY.—NOTES AND VISITORS.

There has been no change in business conditions since last week. Commencements have used up many flowers, but Harvard closes next week, which puts an end to social activity for two months at least, and people are commencing to go to the country and seashore and in a short time business will be at a standstill for the summer. Flowers of all kinds are looking very good, especially carnations.

While Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Whitehead, of Greens Farms, were out driving on the morning of June 16, they were run into by a four-horse coach containing an outing party, both teams going over a twenty-foot embankment, killing one of Mr. Whitehead's horses and one on the coach. Mrs. Whitehead had a very narrow escape from serious injury.

New Haven will be well represented at the S. A. F. convention in New York.

Tiffin, O.

On Thursday morning, June 7, Miss Emma Ullrich, daughter of Lewis Ullrich, the widely known florist, became the wife of Otto Ehrenfried, son of the city clerk. The marriage ceremony took place at St. Joseph's church, which had been elaborately decorated under the direction of the bride's father and brothers. The material used included 1500 carnations, 800 roses, 100 strings of smilax, 100 pots of Easter lilies in fine bloom, and a large number of specimen palms, the whole constituting the finest decoration ever employed for a wedding in this city. After the ceremony a wedding feast was served at the Ullrich home, following which Mr. and Mrs. Ehrenfried left for an eastern trip. They will be at home at 307 Jefferson street after July 1.

Dogday Critics of the S. A. F.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—The preliminary eruptions began a short time ago and from now on to convention time all, little geysers and the big geysers and the hot air fellows, will be spouting continuously as to what is wrong with the S. A. F. and just what particular acts must be done or must not be done in order to demonstrate that the society is of any use in this world.

One thing that strikes the average observer as "funny" is that some of the loudest voices in this annual hullabaloo are those of men who have been for years conspicuous, if for anything at all, only by their absence from the conventions, many, indeed, not being members at all. Strange, isn't it, that the men who regularly attend and who should naturally be the ones best posted as to the good and bad points of the work, should be so seldom the fathers of these proposals for startling departures in the society's methods and objects!

One of the most innocuous suggestions is that the society furnish information as to keeping accounts. This is all right, except that there are no two business concerns that keep books in the same way, the methods being varied according to the knowledge or prejudice of the proprietor, the extent of the business and the local conditions peculiar to each business. The purchase of one of the many cheap books on the subject would put any man in possession of all the elementary facts, which is about all the society could hope to do. What is the use of doing over again, work which has been well done many times?

The proposition to turn the S. A. F. into a collection agency, however, is a pernicious one and the time of its adoption would mark the beginning of the end of the society's days of usefulness. I, like perhaps three-quarters of the rest of the members, am a buyer and only a seller in a very limited local market, where I am thoroughly posted and where the S. A. F. could give me little if any help were I foolish enough to ask it. If a part of my dues are to be used to help the wholesaler to collect his bills from me I want the other part used to make him ship me honest stock, well packed, full count and at the time agreed. Sauce for the goose is, or ought to be, sauce for the gander.

By the way, what is the matter with the Florists' Protective Association? It has been moribund for a long time. Why do not these anxious gentlemen get into that and galvanize it into life again? That would answer all purposes and we who have no bills to collect from the trade would have no grounds to complain of a misapplication of the funds contributed by us.

Your eastern contemporary very ably puts its foot down upon the collection proposition and argues very forcibly against it and then ends by stating that the S. A. F. might and could furnish information to its members relative to the financial standing of other members! There seems to me no possible objection to the collection proposition which is not equally valid against the other. Why separate the tail from the hide?

The convention getter is abroad in the land again. He seems to be a sort of biennial, and this is his year to bloom again. If St. Louis really gets down to business, and decides on an exposition two years from now, and can afford the expense of his valuable services, we may expect to see the gentleman who took the convention to the exposition at Omaha, and who is now trying to do the same for the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, engaged in extolling the merits of St. Louis as a convention city.

We all admire the gentleman in question, and we all love his chief assistant; but we must not forget that they are simply earning their salaries, and that the question of the thickness of the oleomargarine on our own particular piece of bread, when thrown in the balance, has a strong influence on our ideas as to what it is best for other people to do.

Sweet Peas Around St. Louis.

It is repeatedly said that sweet peas do not bloom well in and around St. Louis, but this season we have vines fairly loaded with flowers, which are generally of the large size and quality of those seen in the eastern states. Seeds were planted three inches deep March 14, covered over and the ground rolled. Earliest of All came into full bloom May 20 and most of the other varieties June 1. We planted over fifty samples, and all germinated well except Navy Blue and White Cupid. Of course the white seeded sorts did not come up as well as the dark seeded ones, but enough grew to produce a full row of vines. The notes here given were jotted down while viewing each sort without reference to any catalogue or other description. No attempt is made to describe in full any of them.

There is just one point of excellence that leads us to give Lady Mary Currie the preference over Oriental and Gorgeous: that is its extreme profusion of bloom. Gorgeous is a shade deeper in color, but it has not produced so many flowers and the vines are very weak in growth. Perhaps this is due to the conditions of the soil in the particular part of the grounds in which this sort is growing, which, however, is only ten or twelve feet from Lady Mary Currie and the whole plot was evenly manured early in spring, two weeks before planting. Oriental differs from Lady Mary Currie chiefly in that it is veined like Penzance.

Benary's new Mont Blanc is a rival of Emily Henderson and may supersede that sort. Out of eighteen seeds seven grew and made good plants, which threw over 100 flowers in eight weeks. The form of the flower is as perfect as Blanche Burpee and is of purest white, but not so large in size and with shorter stems.

One of the prettiest sweet peas in the lot is Lady Grisel Hamilton, preferable to any other light lavender. The flowers are not extra large and are somewhat faded, but the sun has been exceptionally strong.

Sadie Burpee from black seed proves to be a pink variety. One would much prefer Mrs. Sankey, which is of stronger growth, larger in flower and much nearer a white, if it is not so fine in form.

The Duke of Westminster in general color effect, resembles Stanley. It is a smaller flower with longer stems and shows a tendency to fade.

Hon. F. Bouverie is a decided improvement over Venus, although the pinkish blotches are only discernible when the flower is examined closely.

Stella Morse has a very weak constitution and, like Lottie Hutchins and Sensation, is too much of a washed out color to suit all tastes.

Othello is the best "black" variety on trial. It is unfortunate that it produces only two flowers to a stem, as is the case with this planting.

There does not seem to be any decided merit in Lady Skelmersdale, unless it is in the form, which is better than that of Apple Blossom.

Mars is the best red sort in the lot. We did not get a true sample of Salopian, so have not compared it with this variety.

We would drop Colonist from the list and keep Dugdale and should prefer Lady Grisel Hamilton to Lady Nina Balfour.

Countess Cadogan cannot be easily distinguished from Navy Blue when the two are bunched together.

Navy Blue is all that it is claimed to be, but the seed germinated only sixty per cent. It has three flowers on every stem.

Mrs. Dugdale is one of the finest and largest flowered sorts in bloom and is excellent for bunching.

Emily Lynch is too nearly like some other varieties to entitle it to a place in our list.

Coquette reminds one of Creole only that it is lighter in color and larger in size.

As has been proven before, Modesty and Duchess of Sutherland are identical.

Red Riding Hood and Snapdragon are oddities and nothing more. M.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

TROUBLES OF A GULF COAST GROWER.

Why is it that the superlative degree has so much attraction for the average mortal? Did you ever see a very fat man who did not boast of being the fattest? You offend a man who has been dangerously ill if you refer to another case as nearly fatal as his; and so it is with all our troubles; we think our afflictions are the greatest. No poor chrysanthemum grower ever had such enemies as we of the far south. Our summers are the longest, hottest, dryest, wettest. We had twelve inches of rain in seven hours June 26, and seventeen miles to the east they had not a drop. Our aphids are the worst, and as for mealy bugs; well, one thinks he never saw mealy bugs till he came here. White ants eat up whole houses full of stock. And here is a caterpillar story.

Last fall a flight of large brown and black butterflies passed over us. For a week thousands could be counted at any time of day, always moving to the north. They found time, however, to stop now and then to deposit a few eggs. My curiosity prompted me to take a steam yacht and trace the stream of butterflies southward to where the river meets the bay and here I noted that the butterflies came across the water from the east. Following the track still further, it changed its course again and came up the east side of the bay from the south. Here I gave up the hunt and concluded they were coming from somewhere and going nowhere. It was certainly a strange sight to see millions of these short-lived creatures moving in a solid army across a body of water twelve miles wide.

What has this to do with chrysanthemums? Well, this spring when our stock began to show new life, thousands of large, fat, woolly, brown caterpillars came out and we escaped being cleanly eaten up as narrowly as we escaped losing all our stock by freezing the season before. There is nothing new about any of these pests and I simply want our friends to know that we have them worse than anybody. The art of chrysanthemum growing down here is mostly the science of bug hunting. Lucky it is for us that the plants grow with little care, as we would never have time to give it to them. Devote one day in the week to battling with each kind of pest and you would have only Sunday to look to the growth of your plants.

My especial pest is the corithuca. I had the honor (?) of discovering him and he seems to have never forgotten my attention. He is with me always. You never see him till his work is done. The lower leaves of the plants seem to be dead and rusty and on examination you find them literally covered with a mass of living creatures. Under a powerful glass they have the appearance of a closely huddled flock of dirty, unsheared sheep. They fly a little, but only towards the ground. Kerosene seems to kill them instantly and I use it freely on the under side of the leaves of my young plants from the time they are set in the beds. With a weekly application I manage to keep them down but I have never been able to entirely free the plants of them.

After all the struggle seems to be over and our plants are coming nicely into bloom the rose thrips arrive and ruin the flowers. Nothing seems to reach them but a daily bath of tobacco juice and that does not add to the fragrance or appearance of the average chrysanthemum. Cannot some one of our scientific hybridizers give us an insect-proof chrysanthemum? F. P. D.

The Harris Loving Cup.

We present herewi'h reproductions of three photographs showing the various faces of the magnificent silver loving cup presented to Fred. L. Harris at the banquet given in his honor at Boston on June 9. The cup is eight and three-fourths inches in height and has a capacity of six and one-half pints. It is a triumph of the silversmith's art and the illustrations are but feeble reproductions of the engravings on the cup. One side of the cup bears the words, "To Fred. L. Harris, a loving testimonial from his gardener and florist friends, Boston, June 9, 1900." Upon one of the remaining sides is a view of the famous Italian garden at the Hunnewell estate, an enduring monument to the recipient's skill, and upon the other the rhododendron plantation.

CONSERVATORIEB OF THE BOTANICAL GARDEN, BRONX PARK, NEW YORK, HITCHINGS & CO., BUILDERS.

Bronx Park Conservatories.

Through the courtesy of Messrs. Hitchings & Co., the builders, we are enabled to reproduce in this issue the only photograph thus far taken of the recently completed Botanical Garden Conservatories in Bronx Park, New York. All previous illustrations have been from drawings, and even the photograph, which was 12x30 inches, does not give an adequate idea of these splendid structures, the character of the surroundings prohibiting a front view and necessitated a photograph from a position at one end, which has the effect of materially shortening the perspective. The entire length of the range is 525 feet. The center house is 100 feet in diameter and eighty-seven feet high. The corner houses are eighty-five feet square, excluding the vestibules, and the connecting wings are 30x120 feet. The construction is thorough throughout and the range will prove one of the most potent horticultural attractions of the great city in which it stands.

CARNATIONS.

STIGMONOSE: A DISEASE OF CARNATIONS AND OTHER PINKS.

Above is the title of a bulletin (No. 19) by A. F. Woods, recently issued by the Division of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Any person in the trade may secure a copy free of charge on application to the department. The subject is fully discussed and helpful illustrations are freely used in the text. The author reaches the following conclusions with regard to the disease:

"The disease of carnations characterized by the symptoms described in this bulletin is widespread, and under certain conditions unfavorable to the plant it is quite injurious.

"So far as can be determined by the most careful microscopical study and bacteriological tests, neither fungi nor bacteria are present in the earlier stages of the disease.

"As the disease progresses various fungi and bacteria may appear, but their presence is not constant.

"Infection experiments with bacteria and fungi, especially with the germ described as Bacterium dianthi, carried out under the most rigid bacteriological conditions, resulted negatively in every case.

"A disease having all the characteristic symptoms of the so-called 'bacteriosis' except the presence of bacteria, is produced by the punctures of aphides, as was repeatedly demonstrated by colonizing these insects on carnations.

"That aphides and not bacteria are responsible for the trouble is shown by the fact that the injuries produced are not accompanied in the earlier stages by fungi or bacteria. The aphides therefore cannot be looked upon as simply carriers of some fungus or bacterium, as they produced the disease on plants growing under perfectly antiseptic conditions as quickly as upon those not protected by antiseptics.

"Injuries similar in many respects to those produced by aphides also result from the attacks of thrips—insects which are often present on carnations growing under glass, although sometimes overlooked by growers. Another form of the disease is produced by red spiders.

"No matter how badly diseased plants may be, if otherwise vigorous they will grow out of the disease entirely and the young leaves and shoots will remain free from spots if kept completely free from aphides, thrips, and red spiders.

"As the disease is not due to bacteria the name 'bacteriosis' is inappropriate and therefore stigmonose is suggested for the trouble.

"The carnation is readily influenced by the conditions under which it is grown, and as a result its reaction to the injuries of the aphides, thrips and spiders, and its susceptibility to their attacks, not only varies in different varieties, but also in individuals of the same variety. Plants grown under improper conditions, therefore, show more of the characteristic injuries from a given number of punctures than do plants growing where all the conditions are favorable. Certain plants rich in oxidizing enzyms have been shown to react more quickly to the work of puncturing insects and mites than plants poor in these enzyms.

"The size of the spots made by the punctures of aphides increases in proportion to the rapidity of growth of the leaf and the susceptibility of the plant, and also depends to some extent on the genus and the species of insect which makes the puncture. It is believed that the insect injects some irritating substance of an acid or enzymic nature into the wound, that this substance causes the increase of oxidizing enzyms in the cells which it reaches, and that these enzyms interfere with the nutrition of the cell by destroying the chlorophyll and setting up other changes which finally result in death.

"Besides the carnation and different species of dianthus, many other plants react similarly to the puncture of aphides and other sucking insects, and also to mites.

"The grower can successfully combat this disease by the proper selection of cuttings; careful propagation of stock; good soil; the proper amount of moisture, light and air; and by the reduction of aphides, thrips and red spiders to a minimum."

A Provincial Illinois Establishment.

The accompanying illustration speaks of the success of a typical western grower, showing the greenhouse establishment of Swan Peterson, at Gibson City, Ill. Mr. Peterson started in business with a house 30x50 feet and his total capital was $50. In the succeeding years he has been adding to and rebuilding his houses until he now has a range of 35,000 square feet of glass which is complete in every detail. He grows violets and carnations principally, his stock comparing favorably with that of any grower for the Chicago market, where it is handled by J. B. Deamud.

EXHIBITS AT THE JUNE SHOWS OF THE ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.— NEW ROSES OF MERIT.—THE CULTURE OF SWEET PEAS IN POTS.—RESULTS OF VARIOUS METHODS.— ORIGIN OF THE SWEET PEA CONFERENCE IDEA.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—ABOUT GLOIRE DE LORRAINE BEGONIA.

At the Royal Horticultural Society's meeting, June 5, the new rose Pink Roamer was well shown. This is a single sort of much the same habit as Crimson Rambler. Grown on tall sticks, with some of the shoots hanging down loosely, it is very effective. It is almost too much of a crimson to justify the name, but for decorations it cannot be too highly recommended. This came from W. Paul & Sons. Another very pretty single variety, named Anemone, came from G. Paul & Son. It has rather larger cup-shaped flowers, the stamens being very conspicuous, and the petals of a soft pink shading off to white. Both of the above received awards of merit. The last named firm also showed a hybrid bourbon, named J. B. M. Camm, the flowers somewhat resembling La France, but with a deep rose margin to the petals, and standing up well on stiff stems. Rhododendrons Duke of York and Duchess of York, both pinks, the former of a deeper shade and the latter with a white base to the petals, may be regarded as meritorious varieties. Cut blooms of Mme. Abel Chatenay lilac were exhibited by Wm. Marshall and received an award of merit. The flowers are pure white and very double.

The society's meeting June 19 was the occasion of one of the finest displays of the season and many choice novelties were shown. James Veitch & Sons exhibited a new rose named Electra, with semi-double flowers of a pale lemon yellow and a deeper shade in the center, the growth being similar to that of Crimson Rambler. If it forces well, this will prove a valuable addition. Sweet peas were exhibited by H. J. Jones, who staged upwards of forty varieties grown in pots. The plants, which were the first shown here in pots, ranged from about eighteen inches to five feet in height and were well in flower. Snowdrift, white, and Wide-awake, scarlet, were among the new varieties of promise. Messrs. Wallace obtained an award for Eastern Queen, a fine crimson single pæony.

With a little care sweet peas may be grown and flowered in pots and make useful material for decorations. The plants recently exhibited were from seed sown about the last week in February; some were potted on into 8-inch pots without disturbing the roots, but others were divided and potted three plants in a pot. Those grown on without stopping opened their first flowers early in June, and those that were stopped once were only a few days later. Some which were grown from cuttings were not in flower June 21, and a batch which had been stopped several times will be still later, but these will be very dwarf and bushy. I think this will prove the best method of growing them. I may mention that those sown in pots and planted out early in May have done well and were only about a week later coming into bloom, and those sown in the ground in December are following closely on them. One of the most interesting items in connection with the approaching sweet pea conference will be a visit to Hurst & Son's extensive trial grounds, where the committee will have a good opportunity of judging relative merits by comparison. It was at these trial grounds that the idea of the conference first originated, R. Dean proposing it, and he found a ready seconder in Mr. Cuthbertson. The idea was brought into practical shape during the Edinburgh show last autumn.

The bedding season being about over more attention is given other pot plants, but the London season will soon be over and even now trade is falling off. To clear out potted stock it has to be sold at very low prices. Since palms and ferns have been so extensively grown really good flowering plants have not been so plentiful. The advance in the price of spiræas last autumn seems to have made a considerable difference in the quantity put on the market and good stock has sold well. Several more growers have been sending in good Rambler roses this season and the prices have gone down considerably. Cut flowers are plentiful but not so exceedingly so as earlier in the season when much imported material was on the market. The English growers gain some advantage when trade is not brisk enough to support these large importations, and the regular florists' business certainly loses nothing, as there is not so much cheap material offered in the streets.

In a chat with Mr. Truflaut, from Versailles, who is on a visit to London, I gather that nothing new or striking in plants is to be found on the continent except in orchids; of these hybrids of lælias and cattleyas are plentiful. Mr. Truffaut grows Begonia Gloire de Lorraine extensively, having erected houses expressly for the culture of this plant. It is a curious fact that, though raised in France, this begonia was condemned as useless until taken back from England by Mr. Truffaut. H.

MARKET ASSUMES A MORE NEARLY NORMAL TONE.—RECEIPTS SHORTEN UP.—CONVENTION WORK PROGRESSING.—A SPORTING SUGGESTION.—DOINGS OF YACHTSMEN AND OTHERS.

There has been a decided shortening up in the receipts of roses and so far as quality and supply go they may be designated as scarce, but, as the demand has fallen off in equal or greater degree, conditions are in no way benefited. American Beauty is the best seller still but the stock offered is very poor as a rule. Carnations have improved in value slightly by reason of the inferior quality of the roses, but they, too, are on the downward path as to quality. Lily of the valley is reduced in quantity and slightly advanced in price. Cattleyas are in abundant supply and sweet peas, lilies, smilax and ferns wholly unmanageable. There are a few fine auratums coming in, also a fair supply of gladioli.

All local interest now centers in the approaching S. A. F. convention. Committees are all putting on an extra spurt and the meeting of the Florists' Club on next Monday night is expected to be a big one. The souvenir programme, a copy of which is to be presented to each S. A. F. visitor, will be a superb work. It is about ready to go to press and those intending to have their business represented in its pages should make immediate application if they have not already done so. The arrangements for the great excursion to Glen Island on the third day of the convention are practically complete. An enormous attendance is assured.

Mr. "Johnnie" Weir makes a suggestion that the sporting committee should not overlook, when making arrangements for convention sports, the crap shooters, who are numerous and active about the various wholesale flower districts. If a suitable trophy should be offered and proper recognition given this pastime he guarantees a large number of entries for the event.

Alex. McConnell, who is an active member and officer of the New Rochelle Yacht Club, is taking his vacation on board his yacht, which he handles with the skill of a professional. Many pleasant anecdotes are being told of the cruises he is making.

R. L. Cottonet sailed for Europe on the St. Louis July 5. On the same day Thos. Young, Jr., sailed on the Kaiser Frederick. Louis Dupuy is on the water in the Touraine. J. Fleischman and family and Mrs. Warendorf will sail on the Pennsylvania July 14.

"Pop" Bogan, the veteran florist of Third avenue and Twentieth street, is working like a youngster on the convention hall decorations committee.

The greenhouses of John Bindhamer, at Whitestone, have been sold to W. Schell.

The new store at Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, the old Hodgson site, has been taken by Chas. Thorley for a branch establishment.

Ghormley & Perkins have dissolved partnership, the former retiring. J. J. Perkins will continue the business as heretofore.

Mrs. H. Berger and daughter have gone to the White Mountains, Miss Berger having been ordered there by her physician.

Augustus Schmutz and bride, of North Adams, Mass., are here on their honeymoon, visiting the groom's father at Flatbush.

The annual fishing excursion of the Bogart employees will occur on July 11 and indications point to a very successful event.

Chas. Dards and Herman Kuhn sail this week for Europe.

SPLENDID DELPHINIUMS AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—EXCELLENT DISPLAYS IN OTHER LINES.—NOTES OF THE AWARDS.—STATE OF THE MARKET.—HEMLOCKS ARE SAFE.—THE ORDER OF ABILITY.—PERSONAL ITEMS OF VARYING IMPORT.

The horticultural exhibition on Saturday, June 30, was grand as regards delphiniums and roses. The number and quality of delphiniums displayed has never been equalled here and the fact that M. H. Walsh, of Wood's Holl, filled almost an entire table with hybrid perpetual roses is sufficient to indicate the high quality displayed in this department. Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Rea Bros. and Miss M. S. Walker were the prize winners on delphiniums and W. J. Clemsen was also represented by a good lot. The display of Japanese irises was meager as compared with former occasions; Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Dr. C. G. Weld were the exhibitors. Campanulas were decidedly poor. There were no English irises nor candidum lilies, although both were provided for in the schedule. James Comley staged a good lot of longiflorum lilies. The hardy perennial collections from Blue Hill Nursery, Rea Bros. and W. J. Clemsen were very fine and comprized most of the best border perenpials now blooming. Sweet williams of the auricula-flowered type were shown in quantity by Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. J. Clemsen, E. C. Lewis, Rea Bros. and Mrs. H. A. Wilkie. Those from Mrs. Gardner were especially fine in form, size and marking. C. W. Parker showed an interesting collection of wild roses and a large display of hardy perpetuals came from Mrs. B. P. Cheney. W. H. Monroe exhibited a handsome seedling strawberry that appealed to the taste of all who got a chance at it.

The friends of the Arnold Arboretum now breathe easier, for it is announced that at the meeting of the Metropolitan Sewerage Commission, on June 29, it was voted to change the route of the high level sewer so as to avoid the construction of a tunnel under the famed Hemlock Hill. This wise and patriotic action was the result, in a great measure, of the public protest actively led by Prof. C. S. Sargent. Hemlock Hill is the wildest and most picturesque piece of woodland in the Arnold Arboretum, the trees covering it being a part of the primeval forest and the finest specimens of their kind in the eastern United States.

Business has assumed a normal midsummer character in all respects save one, the watering-place demand for choice flowers that Boston has enjoyed for many seasons. Whether the present scarcity of orders from these accustomed sources is due to the backward season, and only temporary, or is to be taken as indicating the prospects for the coming weeks, is not yet apparent. Since the summer qualities of Kaiserin, Testout and other nice things became widely known, however, the princely florists of the watering places have been waxing more and more independent of the Boston wholesaler, and instead of keeping the wires to Boston at a white heat when they get into a tight place they just send a minion around the corner to the farm, with a basket. And when the basket comes back too full they pack the surplus into a box and forward it to their old friend, the Boston wholesaler, with a mandate that he sell it for their account. Thus the buyer becomes a producer and his views as to values undergo a wonderful transformation.

The Horticultural Club having adjourned until after the New York convention, and there being, therefore, no regular meetings of the craft where burning questions may be discussed, those of an argumentative disposition must make the best of such little informal gatherings as they can attract about them from time to time. At one of these spontaneous affairs recently it was decided with great deliberation that the ability to grow good flowers is an accomplishment of high degree but that to know what to grow is a still higher attribute. Higher in the scale, yet, is the faculty of selling the same, but beyond and above all is the art of collecting the money afterwards. This proposition was fully proven by Lawrence Cotter with unanswerable logic, backed by quotations, poetical, historical and philosophical and clinched with the assertion that a law library is now a necessary item in the equipment of the wholesale flower seller.

Part II. of the published transactions the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for 1899, just received, contains a number of half tone illustrations of rare orchids that have been exhibited during the year, among them being Young's variety of Cattleya × Hardyana, Lælia × Nigrescens, also Dipladenia Boliviensis and several views of wild plants cultivated in school gardens.

Auction sales at McCarthy's emporium have closed for the season. They have been attended with unprecedented success, prices for good material in all lines having been exceedingly good, an indication of prosperity that cannot be questioned.

P. Welch and family have withdrawn from the discomforts of the city for a few weeks' recreation at Old Orchard, where a cozy beach cottage, just completed, will shelter them between clambakes, and all appliances for extending hospitality to the craft have been provided.

Among the week's visitors are R. M. Schultz and bride of Madison, N. J. We know "Bob" is popular in New York and join with his friends there in extending all good wishes. Prof. J. F. Cowell, of Buffalo, is also in town.

Among the passengers on the Cunarder Ivernia, from Boston on June 30, were G. Stollery, Chicago; I. Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill.; Ed. Winckler, Nashua, N. H., and E. Sutermeister, Readville, Mass.

Jackson Dawson's silver medal rose is named Lady Dunbar, not Lady Dunham, as previously reported.

J. A. Pettigrew has just returned from a short visit to Cleveland, O.

THIS season's sales of clematises have been unprecedented.

FLOWERS, fruits and fireworks were handled by one Chicago firm the past week.

IT appears that main travelled roads will be those leading to New York in August.

USES for raffia are multiplying and the sale of this commodity promises steady increase.

CANNA plants are backward to date, but the present warm weather should bring them on with a rush.

A. M. MURDOCH, of Pittsburg, Pa., correcting the statement in our last issue, informs us that his store did not suffer from either fire or water.

IT is all very well to say that June is the month of roses, but in reality the pæonia is the flower which is relied upon to meet the June demands in many a wholesale market.

THAT well known rose, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, according to Rosen Zeitung, has produced a beautiful red sport with Mr. Lehrer, a gardener of Waltershausen, Germany.

THE grower of a specialty who does his work well can frequently convince buyers that he has something highly desirable by maintaining the price at a point sufficiently elevated to attract attention.

TWO of the popular eastern plant specialties for Christmas and Easter, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Crimson Rambler rose, which are little known in the west, will be very generally tried next winter.

AT the office of the Western Passenger Association, in Chicago, we learned this week that the various railroad associations east and west of that city have recently decided to allow a special rate for the S. A. F. convention in New York next month. No doubt the secretary of the society will shortly announce the rate.

In connection with the sweet pea conference which will be held in London this month, it should be stated that Joseph Breck & Sons, of Boston, were the first in this country to introduce the Eckford varieties, in 1885, George C. Watson, now of Philadelphia, being in charge of their flower seed department at that time.

The S. A. F. Meeting Place for 1901.

The silver-tongued Scott and the persuasive Taylor, backed by all the weight of the Pan-American Exposition, having organized a crusade to secure the convention for Buffalo next year, it seems necessary that a few words be said on behalf of Chicago, lest the matter be settled in favor of the fellows with the big guns and the smokeless powder before we have had our day in court.

We wish to assure those interested that Chicago is still in the race and will be in at the finish, and to ask the mutual friends of the two contestants to make their decision at the convention after both sides have had a hearing.

MARKET DULL AND STOCK POOR—HOT WEATHER PUTS A QUIETUS ON TRADE—SEASON OF VACATION IN TOWN.—GROWERS HARD HIT BY THE HEAT.—CONVENTION TALK.—ROSE GROWERS HAVE THEIR TROUBLES—VARIOUS NOTES OF PERSONAL DOINGS HERE AND THERE.

It is unnecessary to make further comment upon the state of the market after recording that the thermometer has been up in the nineties this week. There isn't anything doing and there's nothing in sight. Of course there is more or less funeral work, for its so hot that people are prostrated in the streets, but the retailers and the out of town buyers are only investing when they have taken an order. Of course stock is pretty poor and there is no great quantity of anything coming in except carnations and garden flowers and these the street boys take care of but at very low prices. There are considerable supplies of water lilies and they are to be seen in nearly every store window. There is hardly anything which makes a better display, or cheaper, than a miniature pond with lilies surrounded by nice green banks of ferns; it looks cool and inviting and creates the impression that there's summer life inside the store, though, as a matter of fact, the only person in the place is one sleepy clerk. This is the season of baseball games, horse races, fishing and sunburn and the only ones who are not indulging in this field of endeavor are the greenhouse men, who are sweltering away under the hot glass, repairing, filling benches, planting and preparing to meet the demands of the winter. It's mighty hot in the greenhouses these days, but as one philosophical grower remarks, that has its compensations, for the underpaid apprentice no longer has to give up hard earned money for turkish baths; he has them as he works.

Convention talk, since the hot weather, is quite lively. According to all reports Chicago will be represented by the largest delegation which has ever gone from this city to a convention. Among the many names mentioned, and the air is full of rumors, are those of Messrs O. P. Bassett, Peter Reinberg, W. E. Lynch, E. F. Winterson, Flint Kennicott, J. B. Deamud, Hauswirth, Kreitling, and the whole family; Vaughan, Degnan, Wilson, Sanders, Rudd and Darby. A much larger proportion than usual will be accompanied by their wives and many will linger in the east for some weeks.

Some of the rose growers out Bowmanville way are fighting the worms again. Last year, for about the first time, they were visited by a little, black-headed green worm with a fondness for Bride roses and an appetite which was not in the least affected by the warm weather. The intruder was of unknown species, was credited to the butterflies and this year he's worse than ever. The only remedy which is effective is hand picking and that is a thoroughly unsatisfactory process. Last season the worm maintained his foothold nearly all summer.

Mr. Jacobsen, formerly of Hills & Jacobsen, Maywood, Ill., who has just returned from the east, where he has been variously employed, has gone to Colorado Springs, Col., to locate. He was formerly with the Park Floral Co., Denver.

William Desmond, a florist, sixty years old and living alone on Cottage Grove avenue near Saunders' fell as he was alighting from a cable car June 30 and did not regain consciousness. The physician said it was heart disease.

P. J. Saunders, who has done business for years on Cottage Grove avenue at Fiftieth street, has opened a flower store on Fifty-first street, opposite Washington Park, in one of the stores built beside the Edelweiss garden.

Anton Then and H. N. Bruns have had the pleasure of sitting together on jury for two weeks and during the same time John Junius was serving the county in a similar manner but in another court.

Nic. Wietor is planning a vacation trip and his friends tell him that he's only waiting for his sore thumbs to get well enough so that he can handle a fish pole with a reasonable degree of comfort.

T. J. Corbrey's health is such that he has determined to close out all his interests here and make for Southern California, where he intends locating permanently this time.

Peter Reinberg has given up his trip to Paris and the exposition; he's too busy building and planting greenhouses to spare time for more than the S. A. F. trip to New York.

D. R. Woods, superintendent of East Lake Park, Los Angeles, Cal., passed through the city July 3 enroute home from an eastern tour of inspection.

J. Fuhrmann sailed on the steamship Potsdam for a two months' trip through Holland, Belgium and Germany. He will also take in the Paris Exposition.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago will be held at the Sherman House next Tuesday afternoon, July 10, at 2 o'clock.

A. L. Vaughan and his family are expecting to go across the lake next week to occupy a cottage on the St. Joe river for the summer.

The geraniums and other bedding plants at Washington Park are now as fine as were the tulips which occupied the ground in May.

If its as hot at West Baden as it is in Chicago, E. E. Pieser will be in the baths most of the time during his outing there.

Poehlmann Brothers have completed their new houses and have them planted to Beauties.

"Scottie," the irrepressible, at Kennicott's, goes fishing to-night, for two weeks.

Visitors: S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; J. J. Soper, Mrs. Soper and their daughter, Rockford, Ill.

Hardiness of Deutzias.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Your interesting article on Lemoine's new hybrid deutzias, reminds me of the fact that the severity of our winters here prevents the successful growing of the ordinary forms of this genus. D. crenata, D. scabra and their varieties, including the Pride of Rochester, winter-kill. Even when well protected none survived the winter of 1898-9. I am pleased, however, to note that D. parviflora and D. hybrida Lemoinei both stood the severity of that winter unprotected and bloomed, even to the tips, the following summer. Both plants were in a trying position, being so much in the shade that the wood could not ripen as well as if fully exposed to the sun. D. Lemoinei compacta and D. Boule de Neige have not been tried by me.

LOWELL, MASS.—Paul R. Burtt has bought the entire stock, establishment and good will of the firm of Sheppard & Son and will do a wholesale and retail business. Mr. Sheppard, now aged and infirm, will reside with Mr. Burtt.

OBITUARY.

MRS. T. W. GOODWIN.

Mrs. T. W. Goodwin died on June 26 at her home at Newburyport, Mass. Mrs. Goodwin was a good business manager, a clever decorator and highly esteemed by neighbors and the trade. She conducted a successful florist business in Newburyport for thirty years.

S. J. JOHNSON.

Samuel J. Johnson died June 20 at Philadelphia. He was known as a manufacturer of seed separators and was in his sixty-fifth year. Mr. Johnson was a native of Tennessee, the son of a captain of the war of 1812, and himself a member of the Fourteenth Tennessee under Stonewall Jackson. His demise was the result of paresis following the grippe and pneumonia.

WM. HALL.

The demise is chronicled of William Hall, one of the best known landscape gardeners and florists of the south. Mr. Hall was born in Scotland sixty-two years ago. He was apprenticed at landscape gardening and when he came to America in 1871 he was thoroughly conversant with his profession as practiced in his native land. His first employment was at Elmira, N. Y., but he soon removed to Knoxville, Tenn., where he has resided ever since. It is largely due to his efforts that the Col. Perez Dickinson estate is one of the finest in the south, for he was in charge for ten years. In 1892 he became superintendent of New Gray Cemetery and at the same time embarked in the florist business, building up a considerable establishment. He leaves a widow and four children. Mrs. Hall will continue the business under the management of her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Ryno.

DUTCH houses report a favorable outlook for harvesting the best crop of bulbs in recent years.

ABRAM AGNEW, father of H. C. Agnew, of Agnew, Cal., died at his residence, Santa Clara, Cal., June 20.

COOL spring weather has been favorable for the potato crop generally, but the drought has hurt it in the northwest.

ONION seed crop prospects in California have improved. Some effects of the blight have disappeared and a fair crop seems assured. Spinach bad.

THE Iowa Seed Co., of Des Moines, will shortly erect a three-story building 32x66, well located for side-trackage, to facilitate the handling of their business.

JUNE CLOSED WITH UNPRECEDENTED ACTIVITY IN THE FLOWER STORES—WEDDINGS AND COMMENCEMENTS MADE TRADE HEAVY.—PRESENT CONDITIONS DIFFERENT.—CLUB ENJOYS AN EXCURSION.—LAST MEETING DEVOTED TO COAL DISCUSSION.

Summer conditions have suddenly settled down upon us, but the wind-up of the season was conspicuous for an extraordinary activity occasioned by the many weddings and school commencements that marked the two last weeks of June. It was a daily rush to fill orders, and flowers of all kinds were speedily used up. The local carnation growers, who only the week before threatened the retailers that they would load their wagons, parade the streets, and sell their flowers for 10 cents a dozen, were unable to fill orders at good prices. Roses, too, were scarce, especially Beauties; many more of them could have been sold if obtainable. Pæonies were grand and their season was prolonged till nearly July. At present roses are still scarce owing to the early planting of new stock by most of the growers. Carnations are good and more than sufficient to meet the limited demand now prevailing.

Our last club meeting was devoted to the consideration and discussion of the co-operative purchase of coal, and a committee was appointed to confer with the dealers to ascertain the prices at which deliveries could be made the coming season. It was found that about 4,000 tons was the probable consumption by florists in and about this town. The responses made by the few dealers so far approached indicate a difficulty to get a special price owing to the constant changes in freight rates, which are at present impossible to determine for fall deliveries. The matter will be followed up, however, and if any advantage arises from the plan it will be adopted.

An outing enjoyed by thirteen members of the club took place on June 28. Leaving Detroit in the morning on the new and elegant steamer Tashmoo, a pleasant trip was made to Algonac, a summer resort on the St. Clair river, arriving there at 12 o'clock. After dinner at the Riverview Hotel the party was divided into pairs and furnished with fishing equipments. Indians from Walpole Island rowed them along the shore in search of fish. This fascinating sport was indulged in till after 6 o'clock, when, after a fair division of the catch, a grand fish supper was served, enlivened by short speeches. The return trip was made by trolley car via Mount Clemens, arriving home about midnight. It was the first experience of some of the boys at fishing, but their success was so flattering and the enjoyment so great that already another trip of the kind is planned for the near future.

Chas. Schaible is busy renovating his new store and building a conservatory at the rear.

Breitmeyers are rebuilding three houses, each 20x65 feet, on their Mack avenue place.

Recent visitors: Chas. B. Weathered, New York; C. Nall, Dayton, O; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; Daniel B. Long, Buffalo; C. W. Ward, Queens, L. I.

TRADE DOWN TO THE USUAL PROPORTIONS AT THIS SEASON—ABSENCE OF SOCIAL ACTIVITY THE CAUSE.

Trade is rather quiet this week. The weather has been extremely hot and good stock very scarce. A great many society people left this week for their summer residences which, together with an almost total absence of weddings, are causes for business falling off. Roses are coming in a little better than last week, but Brides are in somewhat short supply. Carnations hold their own at from $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Sweet peas have taken a tumble to themselves and the supply is now nearer to the demand.

The funeral of L. M. Rumsey, the manufacturer, on Sunday, called for a large amount of flowers, which were purchased largely in the West End. Ellison & Tesson received the Rumsey family order.

Dr. Wm. Trelease of the Missouri Botanical Garden, has returned from his trip to New York, as has also R. J. Mohr.

M.

Nashua, N. H.

A. Gaedeke & Co. never do things by halves and when they concluded to rebuild their houses they did so in a manner to meet all the modern requirements, as well as the approved methods of the up-to-date florists. Their new store needs to be seen to be appreciated. It is both an attractive and well appointed floral establishment.

Geo. E Buxton is adding a carnation house 20x135 to his already extensive greenhouse plant. As a carnation grower Mr. Buxton is pre-eminently successful, and may well rank among the foremost growers in New England. It goes without saying that the best varieties are being grown on his place. Three seedlings of his own may be heard from some day. Mr. Buxton has removed his store to 133 Main street. Modern and up-to-date in all its appointments, Nashua may well boast of its two floral stores.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

BUSINESS has this year continued considerably further into the summer than is usual.

GEO. C. ATWOOD, of Geneva, is now in charge of New York's San Jose scale department.

THERE is a strong movement toward reforesting denuded areas with catalpas for commercial purposes.

SILAS WILSON says that he is booking many orders for the McPike grape for fall and spring delivery.

THE nursery stock of Southern Bros., in Wood county, West Virginia, has been sold to A. S. Dyke for $12,705 at bankruptcy sale.

A. BRANSON, the New Sharon, Ia., nurseryman, has been nominated for congress upon the prohibition ticket in the sixth district of his state.

AT Corinth, Ia., the Corinth Nursery Company has been incorporated with $50,000 capital stock by A. C. Necke, Ada Necke and A. N. Hill.

THERE was a great gathering of horticultural enthusiasts at College Station, Tex., July 3 to 6, the Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas societies being in joint session.

THE original Concord grape vine still thrives upon the estate of the originator, E. W. Bull, at Concord, Mass., which has been purchased by Mrs. Daniel Lothrop and preserved as a memorial to the man and his work.

RIGHT to a mechanic's lien, says the Chicago Daily News, for the improvement of grounds by enrichment of the soil, planting flowers, shrubs, trees, etc., without making any structure thereon, except a rustic bridge of slight importance, is denied in Nanz vs. Cumberland Gap Park Company (Tenn.), 47 L. R. A. 273, where the statutes clearly contemplate such liens shall be created only by the erection of some building.

Philadelphia.

HOT WEATHER MEETING OF THE CLUB.—THE CHIEF SPORTSMAN DISSERTATES UPON HIS HOBBY.—ASSURANCES OF A BIG CONVENTION PARTY.—WILL TRAVEL IN A SPECIAL TRAIN.—ANOTHER BOWLING TROPHY.

The July meeting of the Florists' Club, held last Tuesday evening, was a hot weather affair, as the attendance was limited to the faithful. The event of the evening was the address of John Westcott on "Kindling Convention Enthusiasm." His remarks had not been put to paper, as intended, as on account of a busy season he had not time to do so. He, however, in his usual happy style, set forth his ideas as to what draws the crowd. Some go to hear and discuss the papers read, some to see the trade exhibits, some on account of the good company they are sure to find there and to see, perhaps, a city and section of the country they have not visited before. But all who attend are out for a good time, and the side issues, the entertainments and the attractions of the bowling and shooting contests, he thinks, have as much to do with getting out a full attendance as does Smith's paper on how to kill mealy bug or Jones' essay on the higher education and the elevation of the business. He hopes that as many as can will come to the convention by way of Philadelphia and join the party here, to go with us by special train the balance of the distance. To all who will stop over here for a couple hours and stretch their limbs he guarantees to give something that will arouse their enthusiasm to concert pitch and send them on their journey in a merry mood. There will be about 200 delegates from this city who will have a special train with decorated cars and everything up-to-date.

The subject for the next club meeting is to be the best cool room methods for keeping flowers. H. C. Geiger, of the Floral Exchange, is to be the essayist. Some new members were elected and others proposed for action next month. There was on exhibitian a magnificent silver vase given by the Floral Exchange of Philadelphia and Edgely. This is donated by the firm to the Florists' National Bowling League as a trophy to be bowled for at the annual tournaments until it has been won twice by the same club, when it is to become their property. It is called the Queen of Edgely Bowling Trophy, named in honor of the new rose, the pink American Beauty. The vase stands thirty-two inches high and is of beautiful design.

Business is very quiet; good flowers are exceedingly scarce.

Jacob Becker sailed for Europe on Saturday last. K.

Bloomington, Ill.

It is a sad, gloomy and most desolate spectacle that presents itself to the view of the stranger upon arriving in this town. Five business blocks in the very heart of the city have been reduced to brick, mortar and ashes. What has but recently throbbed with life and activity has been silenced by the recent conflagration, a calamity that was simply appalling. It is characteristic, however, of the American spirit to go ahead despite adversity and misfortune. No sooner had the smoke disappeared and the bricks cooled off than an army of men was set to work to clear the ground. A year hence one may see some imposing buildings in place of the present ruins. Notwithstanding the calamity, business has been brisk all along, while the outlook for the coming fall is decidedly encouraging.

A. Washburn & Son have commenced making extensive alterations and improvements about their greenhouse plant. A new house 35x140, intended for carnations, will soon be in course of erection. It is Mr. Washburn's intention to grow carnations more extensively as the demand, both from his wholesale and retail trade, has more than kept up with the supply. He will likewise grow more roses, two houses, each 18x150 being now especially equipped for that purpose. Besides the improvements about the greenhouses, their flower store on Main street will also undergo repairs and alterations, chief of which is the extension of the store proper by thirty feet, while the conservatory in the rear will be somewhat remodeled and improved.

W. T. Hempstead, as usual, has no complaints to make. Business has proved all that could possibly be desired, bedding stock of all grades selling out clean. Mr. Hempstead will give his houses a thorough overhauling.

Miss Emma F. Washburn, daughter of A. Washburn, was recently married to Henry H. Edmunds, superintendent of schools at Atlanta, Ill. The young couple have the best wishes of their many friends in and out of the trade.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting on Thursday, June 28, Wm. Turner reading a very interesting paper on the cultivation of the rose. Wm. Magee and Mark Drury were elected to membership. Ernst Asmus offered a prize for a vase of Liberty rose to be exhibited at the November show, and John H. Troy offered a prize for the use of the society. J. M. Thorburn & Co. give a prize for vegetables grown from their seeds and F. R. Pierson Co. a cup for twelve blooms of Col. D. Appleton chrysanthemum. R. ANGUS.

F. Stollery	173	113	157	148

Degnan won out in the ten-game match between himself, Hauswirth and Winterson. Hauswirth was second, but Winterson, although classed as an "also ran" as regards the finish, made the high score of the contest, 211; Hauswirth's highest was 192. Eight games were played in one evening and it was a very even thing up to the last game, in which Degnan made 204.

At Boston.

For half a dozen years the bowling interest in Boston has been hibernating. On Monday evening of last week it peeped out of its hole in a timid way; on Monday of this week it emerged and began to get a move on. Old war horses and youthful aspirants there were in the bunch that congregated at the Webster bowling alleys on Warren street. It took a deal of cajolery and coaxing to get some of them to doff their coats and face the pins, but once started, like the old maids at a dance, it was next to impossible to get them to stop. M. H. Norton, although he apologetically assured his backers that he hadn't handled a ball for four years, made the best score. P. Welch could not keep his attention from Lawrence Cotter's new bowling slippers or his score would have been better. Here are the merciless figures as they stared at the participants as they started for home and meditation; meetings every Monday till further notice:

Player	1st	2d	3d	4th
Rough	116	94	100	90
Stewart	111	120
Morton	59	92	112	110
Norton, Sr		140	157	164
Norton, Jr	172	128	132	135
Sutherland	123	132	183	107
Ed. Welch		101	108	142
P. Welch		103	93
Leavitt		105	118	97
Cotter		114	123	118
Martin		126	104

At Philadelphia.

There have been warm times lately for the struggle for team places has now commenced on the outside alleys. The following gentlemen are eligible for the team to represent the club in the international tournament at New York the middle of this month; the first match was bowled on the American alleys, Sixth and Chestnut streets last Monday evening; the score follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d	T l
Peterson	186	176	159	521
Jackson	161	179	164	504
Connor	175	141	149	465
Hamilton	110	193	144	447
Westcott	147	175	123	445
Moss	148	150	145	443
Walker	118	158	153	429
Allen	147	136	142	425
Harris	129	133	135	397

Hamilton, our crack bowler, broke another record last month by making an average of over 180 pins to a game in twenty-five games. K.

TRADE ON THE DECLINE—STOCK GENERALLY POOR BUT EXCELLENT DECORATIVE PLANTS ARE SEEN.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

Trade is on the decline, and, on account of the hot weather, stock is only fair. N Studer, at Anacostia, has a fine lot of his fern, Nephrolopis Washingtoniensis erecta, which is a very free grower and makes fine specimens in a short time, and also a form which he calls N. Washingtoniensis pendula. He also has a large stock of the Boston fern and of Nephrolepis exaltata. His palms, such as Kentia Belmoreana, Areca lutescens, Cocos Weddeliana, Latania Borbonica and Seaforthia elegans are in good shape and brisk demand.

Wm F. Gude has returned from Louisville, Ky., where he went as one of a committee of Knights Templar to make arrangements for the triennial conclave. On the trip home their train collided with a freight train, wrecking the engine and a baggage car, causing a delay of six hours and administering a good shaking up, but no one was injured.

The American Rose Company has seven houses planted to roses, two of Mme. A. Chatenay, four of Ivory and one of Golden Gate. They will soon plant two more houses of roses. The company had an offer of $2500 for the entire stock of Ivory rose but declined. Their carnations are doing very nicely out of doors

Wm. H. King has leased his place at Pathfinder, D. C., to Jos. P. Hauck, of Pittsburg, Pa., who will grow roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and violets for cut flowers, and bedding plants in general. P. G.

Making the Plants Go Round.

The new reporter, in his story of the wedding, wrote: "The floral display stretched from the chancel rail to the doors of the church."

The City Editor, in a mild manner, as is the custom of City Editors with new reporters, suggested:

"Couldn't you have used a better word than 'stretched?' Say the floral display 'nodded,' or 'twined,' or something like that—some word more suggestive of flowers."

"'Stretched' is all right," replied the new reporter, with the stubborn courage of a realist. "The decorations consisted of six rubber plants, and they had to stretch to go the distance."—Boston Journal.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO.
324 Dearborn St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Newport, R. I.

The annual rose and strawberry show of the Newport Horticultural Society, at Masonic Hall, on June 26 and 27, was pronounced to be the best exhibition of its kind ever staged in Newport. The local gardeners all contributed liberally and M. H. Walsh brought a very large contribution from the Fay estate at Woods Holl. The hall was further adorned by a number of large groups of fine foliage plants and orchids. These were arranged by A. S. Meikle, gardener to W. S Wells; C. D. Stark, gardener to Mrs. Fiske, and Robt. Laurie, gardener to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Among the rose exhibitors, beside Mr. Walsh, were Thomas Beatty, Hugh Williamson, C. Robertson and Alex. Frazer. The Gibson Bros. took first prize for a very handsome fancy basket of roses, Bruce Butterton being second and Robt. Laurie third. There were some handsome fern dishes from Robt. Laurie, Arthur Griffin, Arthur Gardener and others.

Certificates of merit were given to James Mattison and W. J. Lynch for hybrid roses, Arthur Griffin for Liberty rose and M. H Walsh for seedling rose Mrs. J. S. Fay. Mr. Walsh also received a silver medal for his collection of roses. James Boyn was given honorable mention for Marechal Niel roses. The judges were Henry Siebrecht, Wm. Anderson, Arthur Griffin and John Ash.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—H. B. Snow has purchased the Seeley property adjoining his place, affording a valuable addition to his facilities.

BARABOO, WIS.—Hugh Hills has sold his business here to R. H. Williams and has gone to Elkhart, Ind., where he has purchased the establishment of R. Hoffman, a place of 10,000 feet of glass.

KEWANEE, ILL.—Hamilton & Plummer secured and excellent advertisement by inviting the public to their greenhouses to watch the blooming of a Cereus grandiflorus, the night flowering cactus.

324 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A.

Louisville.

BUSINESS GOOD IN ALL DEPARTMENTS THIS YEAR.—BEDDING MATERIAL SOLD OUT CLEANLY.—EUROPEAN VOYAGERS AND OTHER NOTES.

Spring trade has been excellent. Cut flower trade has been good. particularly during the week of the reunion of Confederate veterans, although it raiued the whole time. Ol course a quiet time may now be anticipated. Rose buds are now small and sell at $1 per dozen; carnations are good but retail for 50 cents a dozen. The plant sales were unprecedented this year. Everything seemed in demand but roses were most popular; the two-year stock was practically cleaned out. Jacob Schultz had a splendid stock of Crimson Ramblers and he sold every one.

Charles Raynor, of the Anchorage Rose Company, has returned from a short trip to England and his health is much improved, although he still suffers from rheumatism.

Wood & Stubbs have had a fine trade and will remove to a large store on Main street, retaining their old place as a branch.

Frank I. Walker, of F. Walker & Co., has sailed for Paris, intending to make a tour of Europe.

Louisville promises to be well represented at the New York convention.

H. G. W.

MONTPELIER, VT.—E. Jacobsen sailed on June 28 for Germany, on the Fuerst Bismarck from New York.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—C. H. Reed, of Birmingham, Ala., is at Belvidere Park, where he will remain through the heated season, or until about September 1.

ISHPEMING, MICH.—Miss Carrie Williams has been forced to leave the Ishpeming Floral Co., which is doing a particularly fine business this spring, because of illness in her family.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thresher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. ☞A CHILD can run it.

Just the thing to fight crab grass.

It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.

HOT SEASON QUIETS MATTERS IN TENNESSEE.—ROSES POOR AS A RULE.—GENY BROTHERS TO INCREASE THEIR FACILITIES.

The heat of midsummer and the lull of July days is on the floral trade in this city, and the growers are making a manful fight to get everything in shape for another season. Roses are very small, with the exception of some Kaiserin and Carnot, which show up pretty well for this time of the year. Some very good longifiorums have been on the market and funeral work made a sale for them. Smaller flowers are in abundance, but they give the usual summer look to the designs.

Geny Bros. are putting up a new chrysanthemum house 100 feet long. They are very successful with chrysanthemums and carnations, of which they make a specialty. They will also build a smaller house for general plants.

NEW BRITAIN, CONN.—Carl Lorenzen started June 27 upon one of his periodical trips to Germany to see his aged mother.

PECATONICA, ILL.—Rufus Winchester is about to embark in the florist business, beginning with the erection of one house.

TAUNTON, MASS.—Bernard J. Connolly was married on June 26 to Miss Eliza Dowd. The floral decorations in the church were very handsome.

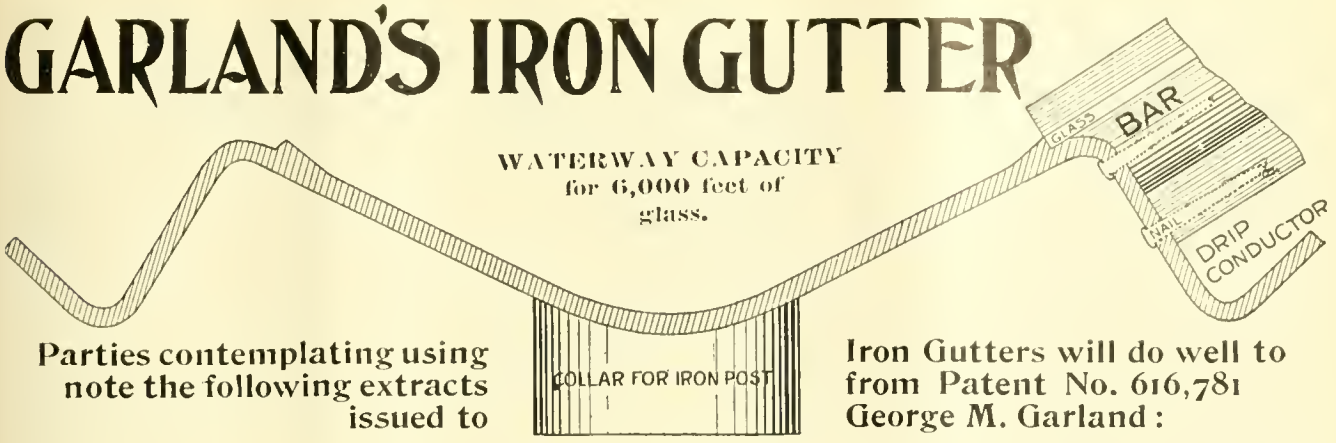
GARLAND'S IRON GUTTER



Parties contemplating using Iron Gutters will do well to note the following extracts from Patent No. 616,781 issued to George M. Garland:

The object of the invention is to provide a valley-gutter for Greenhouses which will be so constructed as to combine a stop for the glass and a drip conductor.

Another object of the invention is to so construct the gutter that the devices for fastening the gutter to supports will be below the weather-face of the gutter, thus avoiding perforations of the weather-face and consequent liability to leakage.

The nails, screws, or other fastening devices are passed through the drop flanges and into the lower ends of the roof-beams, so that these fastening devices for connecting the valley-gutter to the roof structure are below the weather faces of the valley-gutter, and consequently the weather-faces of the valley-gutter need not be perforated, insuring against leakage.

Conventions at Expositions.

Because of the interest manifested in the contest for the S. A. F. convention of 1901, the editor of the AMERICAN FLORIST addressed the following letter to a score or more of those gentlemen who have been active in the society's affairs:

There being at the present time quite a lively argument in progress among the trade as to the advantages and disadvantages to the S. A. F. of holding its convention in a city when an exposition is in progress, we would like a word from you as to whether, in the light of your long experience in the society, the holding of the convention under such surroundings is for the best interests of the society.

The following are the replies:

J. L. DILLON, BLOOMSBURG, PA.

I am not prepared to discuss this matter but I think we had a larger meeting, everything considered, at Omaha during the Trans-Mississippi Exposition than we did at St. Louis during the World's Fair in Chicago.

A. HERRINGTON, MADISON, N. J.

The advantage, as far as I can see, of holding a convention in a city that is conducting an exposition is that it affords, those who wish, an opportunity of taking in the two at one cost. There may be disadvantages arising therefrom but I have never attended a convention under such circumstances and consequently do not feel qualified to express an opinion.

GROVE P. RAWSON, ELMIRA, N. Y.

I am in favor of Buffalo and do not believe Chicago the place for holding the S. A. F. convention of 1901. The Pan-American will attract the most attention and Buffalo is more centrally located as far as the society membership is concerned. When the St. Louis convention was in progress, most of the visiting members stayed at Chicago, as I did. I like Chicago first-rate, but would prefer a visit there in 1902.

GEO. A. RACKHAM, DETROIT, MICH.

I do not believe it conducive to the best interests of the S. A. F. to hold its convention in a city in which an exposition is in progress. In the first place, it would make it impossible to secure the required attendance at the meetings, as all know who have attended the S. A. F. conventions how difficult it is to get any larger number of the members to attend the business sessions on account of counter attractions. Then, I do not think a trade exhibit in a city in which an exposition was being held would secure as many entries nor would those making the entries try to make as large displays, as no doubt the large exhibitors would also have exhibits at the exposition. Third, I do not think that anyone can successfully attend to business and pleasure at one and the same time. Chicago is the choice of the Detroit boys.

WM. WEBBER, OAKLAND, MD.

I do not see any particular advantage in having the S. A. F. meet in Buffalo during the Pan-American Exposition next year. What advantage would come, I think, would be counteracted by lack of attendance at the business sessions of the meeting. There will undoubtedly be much to see at the exposition that will be beneficial to florists, but for reasons above stated, I question the advisability of holding the S. A. F. meeting there next year.

THEO. BOCK, HAMILTON, O.

I am strongly opposed to holding our convention in a city where an exposition is in progress, because the exposition is so potent an attraction that it is impossible to hold the members together for the very purpose for which the conventions are held. I find that in a city with no exposition there is plenty of pleasure and it is all the S. A. F. can do to keep the men long enough together to look after the work of the society. Let us not make it all play and no work, please.

ELMER D. SMITH, ADRIAN, MICH.

It appears to me that the members who have the good of the society at heart will not be drawn away by the attractions offered by an exposition. As you are aware, there are a large number of members who take this time for an annual outing and believe in having a good time without entering the convention hall. Such members will not be present wherever it is held and as before stated I think the active members would not be enticed by the attractions of an exposition.

ADAM GRAHAM, CLEVELAND, O.

Providing other things are equal, I see no disadvantage in holding the S. A. F. convention in a city in which an exposition is in progress. It is possible that counter attractions might draw somewhat upon the attendance at the sessions of the society, but, on the other hand, the additional attraction of the exposition might fairly be considered as drawing many to the S. A. F. convention who, failing the added card, might not attend at all. An objection that might be raised, would be one relating to difficulty in obtaining hotel accommodations at reasonable rates. I think, however, that American enterprise has usually been equal to the task of providing reasonably good service at fair prices in such cases, and I do not believe that such an objection would have serious weight in many minds at this time. In any case, reduced rates of travel would seem to be sufficient to counteract such a fear in most cases. Location with reference to present and prospective membership, combined with necessary facilities should, I think, rather be considered than any question of exposition or no exposition.

C. B. WHITNALL, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Where the business of a society's convention is properly conducted an exposition in the same city is of little harm or benefit. In selecting a convention city the aim should be to equalize the traveling distance for the earnest members, as they may be distributed over the country, and in this an exposition city may have some advantage in reduced fares, but this should only be considered as a benefit for those who would attend at any place. In point of comfort an exposition city is apt to put us to a disadvantage, as the city makes every effort to obtain a crowd. The use of an exposition as a drawing card, or any other inducements foreign to our work, to attract attendance is an injury to our cause. Attendance secured by such advertising is of little value; it swells the S. A. F. treasury some but that is not the fundamental object of our meeting. The receipts in that department should be as a result of appreciative work done by the earnest workers. Numbers will be the result of successful labor but success will not be attained by securing a larger attendance through the popular attractions of an exposition. The individual interest is the fundamental basis on which the collective effort should build and the number will be the true measure of success. Sideshows may increase the gate money temporarily but render the path of true progress more obscure. Let us know our weakness that we may more intelligently study our needs.

H. A. SIEBRECHT, NEW YORK.

From my experience, I can see no objections to holding our conventions in cities where expositions are in progress. I really think that it would be an advantage, unless it were that such an exposition was held in a very large city, where a great amount of trade centers in our line of business. Then, in that case, the nurseries and places of interest in the trade might be somewhat neglected in case there was an extended trade and horticultural exhibit in such exposition.

I think that in Omaha two years ago, it was rather an advantage to the convention and to the S. A. F. in general that it was held there when the exposition was in progress, for I really think that there was more actual good work and business done in Omaha, notwithstanding the exposition, than in a good many other conventions. Now, it is my opinion, that Buffalo (no doubt this is the objective place for next year) would make an excellent place for our convention of next year, as it offers double facilities and inducements.

We go to the S. A. F. conventions, to take up matters of importance, which will advance the interests of the trade in general. We interchange facts and ideas, speak and listen and then go and see all we can; feast our eyes upon some grand exhibits and displays, whether they are directly trade exhibits or ornamental displays for competition or fame; it does not make much difference, as long as we see things that improve our minds and give us a higher standard and create for us higher ideals in our profession. But, of course, on the other hand, should there be a World's Fair or large exposition held in New York this year, the attendance at the sessions of the convention might be seriously interfered with. New York, as it is, has grand expositions every day. It is a continual exposition. And therefore, a large city like New York, Chicago and perhaps Philadelphia, for a convention and large exposition added, might not be advantageous for holding conventions therein at such times.

WM. SCOTT, BUFFALO, N. Y.

You request my opinion on the advantages and disadvantages of holding the conventions of the S. A. F. in exposition cities. First, I must say that it is very much as the old adage goes, that "circumstances alter cases." You can use good arguments on both sides, as you can in almost everything. The convention did not go to Chicago in the World's Fair year. Neither would it have been desirable. The city hotels were filled up, the people would have been widely scattered and the business of the convention would have been neglected. These objections would also apply to New York, Philadelphia and Boston, for between the sights of the great cities and the exposition attractions, the attendance at the sessions of our convention would suffer.

In cities of what me may call the second size, such as Cincinnati, Buffalo, Cleveland or Pittsburg, these objections would hardly apply. The convention at Omaha was a decided success. It was too far west to expect a large delegation from the Atlantic states, but there was a fair attendance from the east. I failed to notice that the Trans-Mississippi Exposition interfered in the slightest with the business of the convention but the exposition undoubtedly was the inducement for many of us to travel as far as Omaha. All who were there can look back with much pleasure to the visit, and yet Omaha was not an ideal city for a summer convention; it was too hot. When sweltering up a hilly street I remarked to a native, "Its pretty hot to-day, 98°; do you get so hot often?" "Well, we don't call this hot. It don't go over 103° many times during summer."

It is for the welfare of the S. A. F. that its officers and members are working, and not for the advancement of expositions, yet there is another side in that a great majority of our good members take but one week's holiday, and many make the S. A. F. convention their holiday and outing for the year. If they can take in a beautiful exposition and at the same time attend our convention, they are glad of the opportunity. The double attraction will bring out a large attendance and, after all, it is the dues we want; we want a good audience to listen to the papers and discussions, if possible, but if we cannot get the audience, get their dues.

The experiment has not been tried of holding a convention in an exposition city in our eastern states, but I will conclude by supposing that the convention was held in Buffalo in 1901. The conditions would be these: The coolest city in the union or on the continent; a city that has the largest number of beautiful residence streets in the world; a city that is within reach of 40,000,000 people in one night's ride, brought here by twenty-three different railroads; a city that is healthful, clean and cool, whose luxurious street car service is unequalled, whose people have time to be civil and polite, for the breezes that are wafted from Lake Erie keep everybody good tempered. Twenty minutes ride from the center of the city will be the Pan-American Exposition, which, if not as large as the World's Fair, will be the most artistic, the most attractive and novel, not in electrical features, not in horticulture, not in liberal arts or amusements, in none of these alone, but in all its features the most beautiful, attractive and instructive exposition the world has ever seen. These are a few of the conditions and reasons why I think that an exposition city may, at the same time, be a good convention city, when circumstances favor it.

A House of Rhododendrons

For bold decorative effect in cut flower work the rhododendron has no rival in its season. It gives a good range of massive color, its foliage is rich and ample and its culture is of the simplest character. It suffers nothing from frequent disturbance of the roots and, given a year's rest after a season of forcing is again as good as new. There is no conjecture regarding a prospective crop of flowers, for it is all in sight before the plants are housed. Our illustration shows a house of large plants lifted from the garden and planted closely in the greenhouse bed, in full bloom during the month preceding Easter. The proprietor, James Comley, whom many of our readers will no doubt recognize as the former gardener at the F. B. Hayes estate in Lexington, Mass., stands among the rhododendrons with the serene confidence of a man who knows when he has a good thing. Cut in long branches the flowers from these plants sold well on the Boston market.

SEEDSMEN'S DISPLAYS AT THE EXPOSITION.—WHAT AN OLD FRENCH HOUSE HAS DONE IN THIS LINE.—NOTES OF EXHIBITS AND AWARDS AT THE FIFTH SHOW.—VILMORIN'S MANY GOOD THINGS.—VISITORS FROM PACIFIC AMERICA.

The official catalogue of the exposition not having appeared, it is difficult to estimate exactly the number of exhibits made by seedsmen. Every country shows, among the agricultural products, a greater or less variety of seeds, or rather grains, but I do not think that the entries of those who are generally known as seedsmen are many, nor is this usually the case at expositions. The fact that seeds can only be staged in bags or bottles renders it difficult to make such an exhibit very attractive or striking. However, Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., have done unusually well in this exposition. It is only fair to say that few houses have at their disposal such a variety of material, panels, models and illustrations, as has the firm in question, which can show a collection of its catalogues dating back to 1766. Vilmorin & Co. exhibit at nine or ten different places, but their leading display is made in a special pavillion bordering the Avenue de la Motte-Picquet, behind the Machinery Hall and Palais des fetes. The pavillion looks like an agricultural museum. It contains not less than eighty varieties of wheat, including many hybrids introduced by the firm; about sixty varieties of forage and agricultural plants, fifty varieties of grasses and all the leading kinds of oats, barley, rye, millet, moha, buckwheat, sorghum, fiber and dye plants, etc., grown in France. These are all shown with their straw, roots, ears or heads. Here we also find a large collection of the most interesting beans and peas, with straw, pods and roots, rendering the comparison between them very easy. But what is of special interest to seedsmen is the splendid collection of several hundred plaster casts of the leading vegetables. These casts, made of a composition which is almost unalterable, are true models not only as regards size and color but also as regards weight of the plants they represent. The artist who makes them, and who belongs to Vilmorin's staff, gives them such an exact resemblance as to mislead many visitors. A number of other features, such as specimen charts, graphics, experiment reports, illustrations, etc., which are of educational value to the farmer as well as to the student, may be found in the pavillion. On one of the tables may also be seen a Brown bag filling machine run by electricity, which puts up papers distributed free to the visitors.

The fifth flower, vegetable and fruit show has just been opened at the exposition and the Americans, as usual, secured many first prizes for their apples and fruits. Among the winners were the New York and California commissions, the horticultural societies of Illinois, Virginia, Nebraska and Missouri, the U. S. Department of Agriculture Division of Pomology, and Patrick Gleason, of Leroy, N. Y. The display is really fine and due credit ought to be given to Mr. Taylor. Canada, too, received several first prizes. Some of your readers may ask why so many first prizes are awarded. The reason for it is that each display is judged on its own merits. If it receives the required number of points, from sixteen to twenty, it receives a first prize. I think that the New York and Illinois exhibits received the maximum number of points.

The cool weather we are experiencing is very favorable to the flowers, which are dazzling in the brilliancy of their colors, scent the air of the big horticultural palace and seem to look fresher than at the previous shows. The palace, as usual, contains some excellent groups and collections of annual and perennial flowers, roses, begonias, cannas, geraniums, orchids, cacti, etc., but which differ only in the disposition of the beds from the shows previously described.

Paillet, of Chatenay, has an exquisitely beautiful group of hydrangeas, the trusses of most of which do not measure less than twelve inches in diameter and well deserve the first prize which they were awarded. Vilmorin & Co. received the same award for a group of their single, large flowering Petunia superbissima, many of which measured over seven inches across. The same firm, which secured not less than eight first prizes at this show, staged a collection of 180 kinds of alpine plants gathered from all over the world.

The successor of Hochard, who used to be one of our best carnation growers, Mr. des Digueres, of Pierrefitte, had a remarkably good collection of carnations, and C. Beranek, Paris, showed a splendid brilliant red sort named Dr. J. Mayer and another notable variety, a pink color with red stripes, called Slovanka. Croux & Son, of Sceaux, made a novel display in grouping some standard grown gooseberries and currants among their flowering shrubs, the fruits showing well above the flowers and foliage.

At the meeting of the French Horticultural Society June 28 Vilmorin staged a collection of about twenty varieties of lobelias, notable among which were Prima Donna, red with large white eye; Magenta, red, white center, with small eye; erecta bicolor, blue and white; Crystal Palace, fine dark blue with dark foliage; speciosa superba, dark blue with light green foliage; speciosa grandiflora, large indigo blue flower and small eye, and nana compacta Kermesina, of a fresh pink color. The same firm also exhibited a collection of about half a hundred varieties of stocks, two dozen varieties of poppies, several varieties of larkspurs and a large lot of sweet peas. Their Cupids were Boreatton, Primrose, Beauty, Firefly, White and Rose. The latter (Rose) seems to be the finest variety and a grand sight when in full bloom in the fields. I expect that after a few such exhibitions sweet peas will become popular in France.

We seem to have a good many visitors from your side just now. Some come from the farthest states, Mr. Poppleton, of the Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore., and Louis G. Pfunder, florist, from the same city, being here at present.

CONVENTION PREPARATIONS MOVING SPIRITEDLY.—MUCH ENTHUSIASM AT THE CLUB MEETING.—ASSURANCES OF A BIG HORTICULTURAL DISPLAY.—QUIET PERVADES THE MARKET.—VARIOUS NOTES OF INTEREST.

Convention enthusiasm advanced several degrees more at the club meeting last Monday evening. The attendance was large and every working committee was on hand with a cheering report of substantial progress in convention preparation. It was announced that the advertising pages in the beautiful souvenir book which is to be presented to every member of the S. A. F. will positively be closed on July 18 and that all orders for space therein must be in Mr. Weathered's hands on or before that date. On recommendation of the horticultural exhibition committee a special scale of points was adoped for use in awarding the two large cash prizes offered in the schedule. An additional 1000 schedules were ordered printed to supply the unlooked-far demand for copies and authority was given the horticultural exhibition committee, also the hall decoration committee, to employ assistants to guard and attend to the large number of valuable plants that are to be staged. A splendid show is assured in this as well as in the trade exhibition department.

Many features of the proposed entertainment of S. A. F. visitors were fully discussed and plans laid for a systematic carrying out of details. The reception committee was empowered to add the names of twenty-five ladies to their number to assist in the entertainment of of visiting ladies. Secretaries of clubs and societies and local vice-presidents of the S. A. F. will confer a great favor by reporting to Secretary John Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city, the number of people expected to attend the convention from their vicinity. E. A. Asmus was appointed captain to manage a shooting team and Wm. Duckham was appointed a member of the award committee in place of C. H. Allen, resigned. Five new members were elected and, thirty seconds thereafter, each was duly placed on some important committee by President O'Mara, who thoroughly appreciates the dignity of labor and believes in passing it around liberally. An appreciative letter was received from F. L. Harris, of Wellesley, Mass., in recognition of his election as an honorary member of the New York club. The next meeting will take place, Monday evening, July 23.

It is hardly necessary to devote any space to the cut flower trade at the present date. Very few flowers of mentionable quality are being received at the wholesale marts and customers exist only in reminiscence. Many employes in retail and wholesale places are off on vacation and quiet and general indifference rule everything in sight.

Julius Roehrs' nephew, chief engineer of the Kaiser Frederick, was one of the heroes of the terrible Hoboken dock fire. He is credited with having saved thirty-seven lives, while the soles were burned from his shoes and the metal actually melted in his watch chain by the heat.

Arthur Taylor, brother of John H. Taylor, of Bayside, died suddenly on Friday, July 6. This affliction, following so close upon the death of Mrs. Taylor, is keenly felt by Mr. Taylor's many friends and sympathy is expressed on all sides.

W. T. Hutchins, of Indian Orchard, Mass., sailed July 11 on the New York for Liverpool to attend the bi-centenary sweet pea conference at London, July 20 and 21, at which he is to read a paper on "Sweet Peas in America."

Jos. Zahitaky was sent to the county jail for three months for stealing potted plants from the greenhouses of H. Maenner at Maspeth, L. I.

THINGS BRIGHTEN UP A BIT UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF COOLING BREEZES.—ROSES SHORT OF THE SUPPLY.—WHITE CARNATIONS ALSO IN DEMAND.—EVANSTON GROWERS ARE BUILDING.—REINBERG REMODELS SALESROOM.—HENDERSON COMMITS MATRIMONY.—A COAL CONTRACT AND OTHER NOTES.

This week has been more moderate as to temperature, more active as to demand and weaker in point of supply. The torridity of two weeks ago put an end to the rose crop and shipments have fallen off all at once, with the result that really good roses are not to be had and even the poorest are short of the demand. The call for Beauties and Meteors has let up a little, as most material finds its way into funeral work, in which Bride and Bridesmaid roses and white carnations are generally more serviceable. The latter are also somewhat under the demand and such fair stock as is coming in is quickly placed. Shipping trade is holding up fairly well for mid-July. Of course there are the usual quantities of garden flowers but these are little in demand and not salable in any quantity, even the street fakirs refusing to handle them. Gladioli are, perhaps, an exception to this rule and as soon as asters are available they will probably meet with sales in keeping with their quality.

Weiland & Risch broke ground on Wednesday for the addition of 50,000 feet to their range of glass at Evanston. The new houses, which will be thoroughly built, will be used for carnations, the firm now having 40,000 plants in the field, such varieties as Mrs. Lawson, The Marquis, G. H. Crane, America and Melba.

Peter Reinberg's wholesale store looked more like a carpenter shop than a flower market during the early days of this week, but things are now getting into shape again, and much better shape than ever. The whole internal economy of the place has been rearranged, affording more room and many other conveniences.

The list of those who intend going to the convention from this city and vicinity is continually growing, the latest additions being Mr. Risch, of Weiland & Risch, and C. E. Finley, of the Finley Lawn Rake Co., Joliet, Ill.

Alexander Henderson, at Vaughan's Seed Store, is receiving congratulations upon his marriage Saturday, July 7. His bride was Miss Minnie Sorenson, who until very recently was also employed at Vaughan's.

J. A. Budlong has made a contract with Hull & Company for forty-five cars of Thacker splint coal, which he figures is about his winter's supply, 1,350 tons.

L. Wassermann, of Muskegon, Mich., was a visitor this week, returning from the national democratic convention at Kansas City.

Nic Wictor started for Tomahawk Lake on Tuesday evening for ten day's fishing with a trio of friends from Rogers Park.

John Zeck is enjoying a week's vacation from his duties at Budlong's and has visited at his old home at La Porte, Ind.

Chas. Hughes, of Deamud's, is spending his vacation at his old home, Hillsdale, Mich.

GARDEN FLOWERS AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—WALSH GETS A SILVER MEDAL.—BUSINESS CONTINUES SLACK.—REPORT OF PARK INVESTIGATORS.—NOTES HERE AND THERE.

Horticultural Hall was filled on Saturday, July 7, with an exceedingly fine display of garden flowers. Another big contribution of roses was brought by M. H. Walsh, for one of which, a hybrid between Wichuraiana and Bridesmaid, he was awarded a silver medal. Rea Bros. were represented by an interesting lot of hardy perennials including early blooming phloxes, E. C. Lewis by hollyhocks and Shirley poppies, W. J. Clemsen, Blue Hill Nurseries, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence and Mrs. E. M. Gill by promiscuous collections, and several young ladies by interesting tables of wild flowers. Hollyhocks, unfortunately, are a lost art in our flower shows. A few years ago superb displays were made, which are now impossible because of the fungus, for which no efficacious remedy has yet appeared.

The long-delayed report of the park investigating committee of the aldermanic board was presented on Monday of this week. It not only exonerates the park officials on every charge, but in addition compliments the commissioners, Superintendent Pettigrew and the employes for their efficiency. This, however, is nothing more than was expected. The public recognized, and the daily papers reflected their sentiments, as the investigation went on, that no more baseless and frivolous accusations were ever made against a faithful and efficient administration. Boston has every reason to feel proud of her park board and its work.

Business continues at a standstill. Roses are small generally, and badly mildewed. Carnations are of good quality for the season. Delphiniums, lilies, gaillardias, corn flowers, gypsophila and other garden flowers are seen abundantly in the retailers' windows, giving a bright show at a trifling expense. Water lilies are plentiful, even in fancy sorts, and many of the stores display a tank of them. Wholesalers are closing early regularly now.

It was announced at the July meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society that arrangements had been made to send a picture of the new horticultural building to the Paris Exposition.

Wilmington's famous old tree, the Whitefield elm, has been cut down. This tree, reputed to be nearly two centuries old, measured sixteen feet around the trunk at a point two feet above the ground. It was struck by lightning two years ago and has been dying ever since.

Jackson Dawson's hybrid rose, W. C. Egan, has made a fine record as to blooming and vigor this season and has received much favorable comment from good judges of garden roses.

A. Leuthy is booked to sail for Europe on the Saxonia from Boston on Saturday, July 14.

J. M. Cohen is remodeling and refurnishing his store on Bosworth street.

W. C. Barry, Rochester, N. Y., was a recent visitor.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—NOTHING BUT POOR STOCK IN SIGHT.—NOT ENOUGH FIRST-CLASS FLOWERS TO SUPPLY A LIGHT DEMAND.—JOHN WALKER BUYS THE HIPPARD ESTABLISHMENT AT YOUNGSTOWN.—DOINGS AT CRAIG'S AND OTHER NOTES.

Oh, for some good flowers! The average flower chest has such a poverty stricken look these days that one is ashamed to switch on the current and open the door for fear the little, shrivelled up blossoms will drive his customer away. Asters, sweet peas, antirrhinums and water lilies are in fair shape, also a few Meteors and Kaiserins, but there are very few really good, even of these varieties. We hope the red Kaiserin spoken of in last week's issue will develop into something good, and the grower lucky enough to discover a pink sport would certainly have cause to be congratulated. One might ask the use of having flowers when there is no demand; there is little doing, to be sure, but the fact remains that there are not enough good flowers to supply what little call there is and even a day's notice hardly suffices to get an order together. Robert Craig is commencing to cut his Japan lilies. These will make a welcome addition to the assortment of summer stock. Sweet peas are now 20 cents per hundred; asters, $1; gladioli, $3; pink water lilies, $3; Meteor and Kaiserin roses, $4; lily of the valley is plentiful at $4.

John Walker, who has been connected with the Craig nurseries for twenty-two years, and for the past twelve or fifteen has been foreman there, is to leave Philadelphia. He has purchased the business and entire greenhouse establishment of the E. Hippard Co., of Youngstown, O. The plant contains over 60,000 feet of glass, all in good order, a number of the houses being of very recent construction. All the trade in the city feels a strong interest in the movement but there is universal regret that Mr. Walker, who has been, from his youth up, so closely identified with the business in this city, is to permanently remove. He carries away with him, however, everyone's best wishes for success in his new venture. He is eminently qualified by his long schooling and experience at one of the best establishments in the country to maintain a model and thoroughly up-to-date place. This, together with the fact that he is just in the prime of life, with an untiring energy, seems to make his success assured.

At R. Craig & Son's annex, Sixty-second and Market streets, two new carnation houses are going up. The great success of the Crocker and other choice varieties makes these additions necessary. The stock of young plants in the field is looking fine. Four entire houses here are filled with Boston ferns in various sizes, which will make tip-top plants by fall.

John Habermehl is recuperating at Atlantic City, where he expects to spend the entire summer. K.

Society of American Florists.

The following circular letter has been issued from the office of the secretary under date of July 6:

DEAR SIR:—With persistent individual effort the convention of the Society of American Florists to be held in New York city next August can be made a memorable event in American horticulture. It is the desire of President Wood that each member of the society constitute himself or herself a committee of the whole and obtain at least one new member and as many more as possible, either life or subscription.

If each member will make this effort, the strength of our organization will be greatly increased and our ability to carry forward the work of the society in the coming century will be strengthened accordingly.

President Wood also requests that each member read his remarks at the Detroit convention, upon co-operation, which were published in the last annual report of the society; also the discussion and the society's action upon this subject, and come to the New York convention prepared to act and vote understandingly upon the measures which will be presented for the future management of the co-operative department or for the organization of a corporation with capital. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Transportation to New York Convention.

It has now been definitely settled that practically all the railroads and steamship lines in the United States, as far west as Utah, have concurred in a uniform rate of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan to those attending the convention. Attention is called to the following rules, which must be followed in order to obtain the benefit of the concession:

1. Tickets at full fare for the going journey may be secured within three days (exclusive of Sunday) prior to and during the first three days of the meeting. The advertised dates of the meeting are from August 21 to August 24, consequently you can obtain your ticket not earlier than August 17 nor later than August 23. Be sure that when purchasing your ticket you request a "certificate." Do not make the mistake of asking for a "receipt."

2. Present yourself at the railroad station for ticket and certificate at least thirty minutes before the departure of the train.

3. Certificates are not kept at all stations. If you inquire at your station you will find out whether certificates and through tickets can be obtained to place of meeting. If not, agent will inform you at what station they can be obtained. You can purchase a local ticket thence, and there take up a certificate and through ticket.

4. On your arrival at the meeting, present your certificate at once to Secretary Stewart, who will return it to you after it has been duly validated.

5. It has been arranged that the special agent of the Trunk Line Association will be in attendance to validate certificates on August 22, 23 and 24.

Canadian Horticultural Society.

The annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Society will be held in Montreal on Thursday and Friday, August 16 and 17. As there is much active interest in the organization and a railroad rate of a fare and one-third has been granted upon the certificate plan, the attendance is apt to be large. The sessions will be held in Natural History Hall, 32 University street, and the programme, which is arranged in an order familiar to all those who attend the S. A. F. meetings, includes, besides the items of routine business, the following papers: Roses up to Date, J. H. Dunlop, Toronto; How to Make a Private Place Most Attractive, G. Robinson, Montreal; Public Parks and Gardens, John Chambers, Toronto; Violets, Wm. Fendley, Brampton; The Advantages of Organization in Our Business, S. S. Bain, Montreal; Herbaceous Plants, T. Manton, Eglinton; Heating and Ventilating, R. W. King, Toronto; Commercial Orchids, J. Goodier, Toronto; Carnations up to Date, Wm. Gammage, London.

President James McKenna has issued the following invitation to the florists of the United States:

On behalf of the members of the Canadian Horticultural Association, I wish to offer you a most cordial invitation to attend our third annual convention, which will be held at Montreal on August 16 and 17. I can assure you that it will give us great pleasure to fraternize with you on that occasion, and to reciprocate in the most ardent manner, the very kind hospitality that many of us have received from you, when we have had the pleasure of attending the conventions of the S. A. F. in the different cities of your great republic. You will notice that our dates have been so arranged that our meeting will not clash with your own in New York the following week. Many of us intend to be with you on that occasion, and we hope that a large number from your side of the line will make the round trip, and stay with us for a couple of days before going to New York. I will not attempt to enumerate the advantages and pleasure to be derived from such a trip. Just come and see for yourselves—and come in large numbers; we can accommodate you all.

DROUGHT IS BROKEN AND ALL NATURE SMILES —OUTSIDE STOCK NOW MAKING PROGRESS.—END OF A GOOD SPRING.—SEEGER COMPLETING A FINE RANGE.—STOCK TO BE GROWN.—JOTTINGS.

The long continued drought has been broken by bountiful showers and all nature again wears a smile. Many carnations that had not received a drop of rain since being planted out will now make strong plants by the end of August. Cannas that were apparently lifeless are sprouting nicely and sweet peas with drawn, pinched buds are suddenly transformed into masses of blooming vines. The spring trade has been very satisfactory in this section. Bedding plants never sold out as cleanly as they did this year, while the demand for cut flowers exceeded the supply of home grown stock. Prices have been well maintained, although some of the smaller growers cut prices early in the season, only to reduce their profits. But very few good cut flowers are now brought in.

C. Hansen is cutting a fair supply of Beauties, Testouts, Siebrechts, Meteors, Perles and Kaiserins. His damage suit against the gas company for $20,000 has been continued until the October term of court.

L. L. May & Co. are busy renovating and replanting. A new crop of Kaiserin and Meteor roses just coming in is very fine. Their stock is particularly clean and healthy as they believe in firing upon less provocation than most growers require.

R. C. Seeger is very busy building and will soon have his new range completed. When finished this will be one of the best equipped establishments in the state, consisting of seven houses each 200 feet long, varying from eleven to sixteen feet in width, in all about 25,000 square feet of glass. Several of the houses are constructed on the short-span-to-the-south plan. By raising the ridge high enough Mr. Seeger hopes to overcome the lack of sunlight on the north bench, which is the chief objection to this system. For summer he is growing Kaiserin, Carnot and Meteor and for winter blooming he will have Liberty, Meteor, Beauty, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate and Bride. In carnations he has G. H. Crane, White Cloud, Flora Hill, Jubilee, Triumph and Mrs. Bradt. Two horizontal tubular boilers will furnish heat to this range.

G. Monson, formerly with the C. A. Smith Floral Co., Minneapolis, is erecting a range of houses near Lake Calhoun in that city and L. Anderson, for several years with L. L. May & Co., has become foreman for the Smith Company.

The Twin City florists will picnic at Lake Park, on the shores of Minnetonka, on Thursday, July 19. An interesting programme of sports has been arranged.

SUMMER SOLSTICE CUTS DOWN FLOWER TRADE.—PROSPECTS FOR CONVENTION PARTY.—A PICNIC PLANNED.

Business has suffered the usual summer stagnation and is now down to its lowest ebb. Flowers are poor in quality, worse than usual in some lines, by reason of the very hot and dry weather that we have been suffering.

There is to be a picnic this summer, given by the Cleveland Florists' Club, to which all members are welcome with their families, and a friend or two in addition. It is to be held at Martinitz's grounds, on the West Side, Thursday afternoon and evening, July 19. Dinner, light refreshments and music for dancing will be furnished by the club, so that those who attend may expect a good time with the minimum of trouble.

As to the convention attendance, it seems still too early to speak with any certainty, but from the present outlook the attendance from here will be from ten to fifteen. There seems no great probability of getting anything different from the usual fare and one-third. Should anything special develop in the way of a rate it will probably be made known at the next club meeting, July 22. Mr. Rackham, of Detroit, who dropped in on us lately, imparted the cheering information that they expect to take twenty-five or thirty from Detroit.

Heating With a Flue.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I have built a house 14x50, seven feet to the ridge, south span nine and one-half feet, north span eight feet; there is a two-foot plank wall on the south side of the house, which is two feet lower than the north side, where there is a four foot wall. I wish to know if an ordinary 12-inch sewer pipe tile flue running along the south side with a rise of five feet from furnace to chimney will serve to heat the house to 55° in zero weather?

MOUNTAINEER.

A temperature of 55° can be secured under the conditions mentioned but it will require frequent firing to maintain it in zero weather. Especially if coal is used as fuel, there will be danger that the tile near the arch may crack and fill the house with gas, and it will be better to construct the first twenty-five feet of brick. A better way to arrange the flue is to run it up one side of the house and back on the other side to the chimney, which should go out just above the arch.

SUMMER CONDITIONS PREVAIL IN ALL THE STORES. — FUNERAL WORK THE SOLE RELIANCE.

Trade is quiet in general, for many of the flower buying people have left the city. If not for an occasional funeral order some of the retailers might close their stores. A. Gude & Bro. were very busy with funeral work at the first of the week. They can sell all the callas they can cut at $2 per dozen.

Most of the growers are getting their houses planted and are putting things in shape anticipatory to visiting New York next month to attend the convention of the S. A. F. N. Studer intends to make quite a show of palms and ferns in the trade exhibit.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Lehde family has gone into court to determine the ownership of their greenhouses at Cheektowaga. Henry undertook to remove them, then John, Amelia and Henry, Sr., sought to restrain him and he brought suit to evict them. The tangle is in the hands of a referee.

VISITED ST. PAUL:—H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; A. Ringier, Chicago.

THE strike of dock laborers at Rotterdam, Holland, may affect bulb shipments.

VISITED CHICAGO: B. David, representing J. M. McCullough's Sons, Cincinnati, Ohio.

L. L. MAY and family are at their summer home, Mayfield Farm, sixteen miles from St. Paul.

ONION sets are looking well but need hot ripening weather to check the strong growth of the crops now showing.

PICTON, ONT.—John H. Allan, of the John H. Allan Seed Co., and Miss Bella Lake were married here recently, and left for Paris shortly afterward.

S. B. BEAL, who has travelled for L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, for sixteen years, met with a painful accident recently. In endeavoring to board a moving train at Longview, Tex., he slipped and the injury to his foot necessitated the amputation of two toes.

PARIS, FRANCE, June 28.—We are having just now very cool weather and were favored lately with some good showers. Unfortunately the rain came too late to benefit the radishes, of which less than one twenty-fifth of the required area could be planted. From a commercial point of view the crop may therefore be called almost a complete failure.

IN a Detroit justice court it has been decided that "immediate" means right away, and not some time within two hours. A dealer offered a carload of beans to a country customer to be accepted immediately by wire on receipt of the letter. After considering two hours the customer accepted the offer. The seller wired back that it was too late. Thereupon the country dealer brought suit for damages, but lost his case.

VARIOUS DOINGS OF THE GROWERS AND RETAILERS —A BATCH OF PERSONALITIES GLEANED BY A CASUAL VISITOR TO THE HOOSIER METROPOLIS.

George Wiegand has recently returned from an Eastern trip, having visited Buffalo, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Newport and other points. Although on pleasure bent, he had an eye on business and what he saw in the east in the way of up-to-date florists' establishments will, with a few variations to suit his own ideas, be incorporated in the Wiegand establishment, where a force of men is now at work rebuilding the office. It will be deepened by thirty additional feet of space, and attractive show windows, a tiled floor, mirrored walls and elaborate counters will serve to make the place one of the finest in the city.

Bertermann Bros. have enlarged their plant by an additional chrysanthemum house 20x112. Business has been exceedingly good all through the season, the only cloud to their otherwise bright horizon being the absence of W. Bertermann, who after a winter's sojourn in California, has left for Carlsbad, Germany, for the benefit of his health.

Henry Rieman has rebuilt one of his houses and while at it gave his entire plant an overhauling and sprucing up. As usual Mr. Rieman will be "in it" as to chrysanthemums, first premiums generally being his reward at the shows.

Baur & Smith, the young firm located at Twenty-ninth and Senate streets, reports a far better trade than they expected. They will grow carnations largely during this coming season.

John Rieman & Co. have made some alterations and improvements about their store. Of late they have had considerable funeral work, which has kept them quite busy.

Convention talk is rife and in all likelihood the Hoosier state in general and this city in particular will be well represented at New York in August.

A. Pahud, the Crown Hill florist, has left for Paris, to be gone three months.

St. Louis.

TRADE STAGNANT. — MARKET EASY. — STRIKE ON AGAIN.—A NEW RETAILER.—OTHER NOTES.

Stock is coming in about as it did last week. Sweet peas are gradually letting up, very few being on the market at present. Gladioli and tuberoses are bringing 2 cents to 4 cents, but there is no demand worth mentioning. The street car troubles are on again.

Wm. Gibbon, a former resident of Chicago and grower of pot plants, has opened a most attractive stand at 1044 Grand avenue. Mr. Gibbon later on will grow palms and other pot plants for his own trade, but will not attempt to do anything with cut flowers, preferring to get his roses from Chicago and other stock from our wholesalers.

The Michell Plant & Bulb Company has all hands busy planting chrysanthemums, of which they have over 7,000 plants to move. They have one of the finest lots of Boston fern in the west and some very fine large pots of Asparagus Sprengerii.

J. W. Kunz is the committee of one appointed to arrange with the railroads for a rate to the convention in New York. Anyone contemplating the trip should immediately advise Mr. Kunz of the fact.

Geo. Scherer, of the Plant Seed Company, surprised his many friends last week by entering the holy bonds of matrimony.

At the club meeting on Thursday it was decided to postpone the picnic two weeks. It will very likely be on July 25.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

WITH THE GROWERS.

STORRS & HARRISON CO., PAINESVILLE, O.

During June and early July, that is to say, while the hardy roses are in bloom, the nurseries of Storrs & Harrison Co., at Painesville, is the Mecca to which journey the inhabitants of northern Ohio for miles around. Visiting florists are in evidence there at all seasons, but rose time is the period especially set apart when all the world and his wife take a day off and go to view the display made by fifty acres of roses all in flower, so that the eye sees little but a solid vista of vari-colored bloom. Row after row, they stretch away, big roses and little roses, all sorts and kinds, climbing, creeping and bush, grafted and own root, anyway you want them, every known variety, and some you never heard of, in practically any quantity you want. They make a sight never to be forgotten. To enjoy them one season is to make certain that you will be on hand again another year to see such a sight as probably can not be seen anywhere else in the United States and in few places outside.

Robert George was kind enough to abandon his multifarious duties and responsibilities long enough to show the writer over as much of the establishment as one can see in half a day, and so those things here set down were seen under expert and exact guidance. Naturally we went first to the roses. The establishment in the past two years has handled over 900,000 hybrid roses alone, consisting, naturally, for the greater part of such sorts as Ulrich Brunner, Magna Charta, Paul Neyron and Anne de Diesbach. In looking over the hundreds of other sorts, one notices a few that make him wonder why they are not better known. There is, for instance Rhodocanachi, a beautiful, low-growing clear pink variety, the plants of which were literally covered with beautiful flowers. This variety was recommended to Mr. George by John Thorpe, so it ought to be good.

Silver Queen is a beautiful light pink, but unfortunately not a good forcer. Clio is about the same in color, a fine flower and good forcer. For a fine cherry red that blooms steadily through the summer, Tom Wood commends itself on sight. Countess of Londonderry, that grand sort, with its fine, robust habit and huge flowers of leather-like texture, should not be forgotten. Margaret Dickson, of the white varieties, is a leading sort and is certainly beautiful. Eugene Furst is one of the finest and most vigorous growing dark red roses that the writer has ever seen, although Prince Camille de Rohan, as grown in Painesville, is noteworthy. One of the things that strike the observer most forcibly is the magnificent growth that nearly all the varieties make. Whether this is due to soil, climate or care deponent saith not, but the fact remains as stated.

One would, perhaps, suppose from the above that roses absorb a great part of the firm's attention. Far from it. Twelve hundred acres of land require far more than a few hundred thousand roses to occupy the ground. Among other items that Mr. George mentioned I caught figures like these: The firm employs from 250 to 400 men, according to the season, part outside, the balance in the greenhouses, of which there are forty-four, covering about 100,000 square feet. At this season some of the houses are empty, although many are either full or being filled, the stock being now largely palms, including three or four houses of very fine kentias in all sizes, besides other houses of arecas, latanias, ficuses, pandanuses, Boston ferns and small material for ferneries. The houses are either all new or are in process of rebuilding, with cypress lumber, the benches being largely tile, with iron frames. The houses rebuilt this season have the Garland iron gutter. The tiles used are the ordinary square building tiles, which are split lengthwise before being burnt. They make a fine, durable bench, and are not tight enough to become sour. The propagating houses, or rather three of them, are now being filled with cuttings of hardy shrubs, such as Hydrangea paniculata, viburnums, weigelias, spiræas and others. These houses, each 20x175 naturally hold a good many thousand cuttings. All that I can recall as to figures in that line was a batch of 60,000 hydrangeas that Mr. George pointed out.

In speaking of this part of the establishment, probably the packing and storage shed, a magnificent, new, brick structure covering an area 120x180 feet, should at least be mentioned. During the shipping and storage season this building is jammed to the roof with stock. After many years of argument with the Lake Shore railroad, which runs through the nursery, the autocrats of the railway have furnished a switch into the grounds that will save a haul of over two miles for all stock and supplies, no small item when one thinks of it.

One very large feature of the business is the department devoted to hardy perennials of all sorts. This, in fact, is one of the principal features, many acres being given up to it. The use of this class of stock is on the increase very rapidly, and during the past season, everything available in that line has been completely sold out. There is not space here to make extended mention of the fruit tree department nor of the section devoted to hardy ornamental trees and coniters of all descriptions, although a large part of the fame of the establishment is founded upon the record it has made in these lines. It would be quite impossible to say how many hundred thousand apple, pear, peach and other fruit trees there might be, but the writer saw, among other large plantings, one lot of one-year pear trees covering about twenty acres, fields of peach trees over thirty acres in extent and other things, plums, grapes and so forth, on an equally large scale. And should you visit the establishment at the proper season, do not fail to find the way to a certain little gooseberry patch that the writer knows of. Mr. George can furnish directions.

The Queen of Edgely Trophy.

The Florists' National Bowling League is the recipient of the very handsome trophy illustrated on this page, the donor being the Floral Exchange, of Philadelphia. The trophy is thirty-two inches in height, beautifully wrought, and is to be known by the name of the new pink sport of American Beauty, the Queen of Edgely. The cup is given to the bowling league without reserve, the only stipulation being that it shall be won twice before becoming the property of any club.

THE QUEEN OF EDGELY BOWLING TROPHY.

At New York.

The New York bowlers were honored with a visit from the Flatbush team on Monday afternoon, July 9. Four alleys were necessary to accommodate the crowd in attendance and it was a very enjoyable time, brought to a close only by the arrival of the hour for the monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club. The crack bowlers are improving their averages and visions of silver cups haunt their dreams, while the Philadelphia spectre's stature grows smaller and smaller as the weeks pass on. Monday's scores were as follows:

Player	1st	2d	3d

QUIET PERVADES THE MARKET.—STOCK GOOD BECAUSE OF RECENT RAINS.—VISITS TO GROWERS.—VACATION NOTES.

Decided quiet has prevailed since the Fourth. Carnations and peas are good, the latter particularly so, thanks to the delightful rains which have given all outdoor stock new life.

This is the period for summer outings. Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Kasting are at Crystal Beach; S. A. Anderson and wife are at the Canoe Club and J. H. Rebstock and wife are at their summer home near Crystal Beach.

Wm. Scott took a trip to Jamestown last week to see the Lakeview Rose Gardens. Summer stock is good there. On another day Scott and Andy Adams journeyed out to Christensen's to look at his new houses. While they were there a test was made of his new water tank, which was constructed by the Aremotor Co., Chicago, and is doing its work well.

S. A. Anderson has been entertaining Richard Ludwig, superintendent for A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn. Mr. Ludwig is very much pleased with Buffalo.

Mrs. D. Newlands has started work on her new greenhouses on Delavan avenue, opposite the entrance to Forest Lawn Cemetery. The houses will be completed by September 1 and will be well adapted for her business.

Jerry Brookins has everything ready for his new houses at Orchard Park and R. C. Avery is remodeling his range at West Seneca.

J. Bernhart Wiese, of the Chippewa market, has about completed arrangements for a new house, exclusively for palms, at his new home on Humboldt Parkway.

All the stores, now close at 6 o'clock and everybody is happy. W. A.

ELKHART, IND.—R. Hoffman, who recently sold out to Hugh Hills, of Baraboo, Wis., is planning a trip to Germany and the French fair, after which he will return to this country and engage in business at Cleveland, his former home.

BUSINESS SLACKS UP AND FLORISTS HAVE TIME TO PLAN PICNICS.—HAIL DOES SOME DAMAGE.—NOTES.

On July 6 there was quite a heavy hail storm north and northwest of Omaha and some damage was done at A. Donaghue's and Hess & Swoboda's.

As business is now dull we have more time to spare and the club has voted to have a picnic at Krug Park on July 20. As over $30 has been contributed for prizes, the various games are sure to be full of interest.

Omaha now has a first-class bowling alley, as good as is to be found anywhere, and as there is no saloon in connection its gets the support of some who would not visit it otherwise.

John Simmons, one of our oldest florists, died recently after a protracted illness. He retired some fourteen years ago but was widely known and popular.

J. N. Craig, superintendent of Forest Lawn Cemetery, has been appointed a member of the park commission.

TRADE GOOD CONSIDERING THE SEASON.—VARIOUS ITEMS OF VARYING INTEREST.

There is a good, healthy summer business and prices are fair, considering quality. Garden flowers are averaging first-class. The montbretia has made its appearance in the flower market and is well received. This is not the most profitable time for them but growers think there would be no difficulty in bringing them in earlier another season. They are certainly beautiful and durable, with stems sixteen to eighteen inches long.

A. E. Binzel has decided to discontinue his business in the Boston Store and is preparing to go to Texas to accept a position offered him there.

Holton & Hunkel Co., will close at 5:30 p. m. during July and August.

Recent visitors: John Didier and John Muno, Rogers Park, Ill.; Chas. Raupach, Park Ridge, Ill.; Mrs. A. Senff, Menominee, Mich.; Silas Button, Lake Geneva, Wis.; C. B. Tremain, Oconomowoc, Wis.

C. B. W.

GALESBURG, ILL.—I. L. Pillsbury, who has for some time owned greenhouses at Macomb, has found it undesirable to continue the establishment there and last week tore down the houses, intending to add them to his range here, which is doing a good business.

OCEANIC, N. J.—The Lord & Burnham Co. is about to begin the erection of a range of greenhouses for Hon. C. N. Bliss, N. Butterback, gardener. The new range will consist of one palm house, one intermediate house, one carnation house, one rose house, one fern house, one violet and propagating house; also workrooms, office, etc.

STEAM COAL ...FOR FLORISTS.

CHICAGO, April 7th, 1900.

HULL & COMPANY, 74 and 75 Traders' Building, Chicago, Ill:

Gentlemen.—In reference to my opinion of your THACKER SPLINT COAL, will say I am very well pleased with it and think it is superior to any Coal of the splint grades we have yet used. Burns free, making an intense heat with very few ashes; no clinkers, and has the lasting quality of all high-grade Coal. I certainly consider it a very economical Coal to burn. Yours very truly, J. A. BUDLONG, Wholesale Florist.

Sweet Peas in America.

[Read by W. T. Hutchins, of Indian Orchard, Mass., at the bi-centennial of the introduction of the sweet pea into England, London, July 20 and 21, 1900.]

Gentlemen of this bi-centennial celebration, and friends of the speet pea in Great Britain—In one particular I feel like the Apostle Paul before the men of Athens: "What will this babbler say?" But with this difference, that Paul was no babbler. I am profoundly gratelul lor the honor of being asked to prepare a paper for this celebration, and very thankful to a favoring Providence that I am permitted to be personally present. But a less complacent feeling just now spoils my sweet peace of mind, as I remember that I am to speak to the patrons and specialists and trained workmen of this motherland of the world's best gardeners. We have English trained gardeners in America. They are in great demand to fill responsible places. Our finest estates seem incomplete without them. They have learned the "know-how" thoroughly, and they have the "how-to-do-it" in their very finger tips. Pity me then, ye men of Athens, ye who have inherited all past wisdom in this art and are the patrons of its highest development, ye gardeners of Great Britain, for my paper will be but baby prattle to you. My ancestors on my father's side were English, therefore the love of the garden is in my veins.

Since I am to speak of "Sweet Peas in America," I beg to convey to you, first of all, America's floral greetings. As fraternally as our flags lock into each other's folds, and as strong as the tie of a common speech binds us, I assure you that to-day our mutual love of the flower that brings us together is an index of a common sentiment, born of a common blood, that in the future will more and more draw the best side of our hearts together, and hold us even where other interests fail. God bless our mutual love of flowers.

From Ceylon to Sicily, from Sicily to Great Britain, from Great Britain to the continent and to America the sweet pea has migrated, and now America not only desires to pay her debt with interest to Great Britain, but would be glad to put a liberal row of sweet peas into every garden on the face of the earth. By right of discovery Italy might lay claim, in the name of Cupani, to this flower, but by the right to which America justly and graciously bows, Great Britain is now the motherland of the sweet pea of to-day. The sweet pea has a keel that was meant to seek all shores, it has wings that were meant to fly across all continents, it has a standard which is friendly to all nations, and it has a fragrance like the universal gospel; yea, a sweet prophesy of welcome everywhere that has been abundantly fulfilled. You have given it to us that we might, through our immense seed-producing facilities, give it to all the world. There are debts that men are ambitious to pay, that they may be free, but our debt to you takes a new and higher form.

I am not sure but that America discovered Eckford. I find in a letter of 1893, from a London seedsman, these words: "I wish somebody would wake Eckford up, but I guess none of the children of the west can do it. In fact he is simply incorrigible." In my visit to England in 1895 I felt that you had not discovered Eckford. And over in France they shrugged their shoulders at the mythical mention of Eckford's name. And to this day I cannot understand the tardy recognition of Eckford's superb work on the continent. But I hail with joy the fact that to-day it cannot be said that this floral prophet is without honor in his own country. I should call him a dear old Scotch-Welsh Englishman. In the floral calendar of America no name stands higher than his. Indeed, ten years ago our catalogues blazed with miraculous lithographs of the new sweet pea, and Mr. Eckford got all the glory. There was a blue sweet pea, as blue as Chinese larkspur, and a yellow sweet pea as a yellow as a dandelion, and for giant size the American woodcut was fully equal to any sensational demand.

Personally I am glad you have signalized this 200th anniversary of the introduction of the sweet pea into Great Britain, but I would love also to celebrate the birthday of Henry Eckford. I wish I might be alive on May 17, 1923, to help honor the hundredth anniversary of Mr. Eckford's birth. Let us not forget it. He will be embowered in the sweet peas of Paradise then, but it shall always stand true whose hand of skill and affection it was that drew from nature's mysterious bosom the colors that have made the sweet pea for the last decade a new flower.

We do not dub knights in America, but I have frequently said that the day would come when men would be knighted for work done on some particular flower. We need but to anticipate the day, which is surely coming, when the art of floral hybridizing and development will hold a place in popular esteem, and in national importance, that will command recognition and a badge of decoration ranking with any and the highest arts.

Mr. Eckford has given a perennial joy to mankind. A million gardens in America bless his name. We count it a sacred trust to hold the color and quality of what he has given us. He has been the prophet and high priest of this wonderful floral revelation. He has made the work of his successors easy. Whatever may be the last stage of the evolution of this flower, wherever its beauties may break forth with each fresh year, and whenever its praises are sung, there the memory of Henry Eckford will always be reflected in its colors, and his name be associated with its fragrance. But I am anticipating that part of my paper in which I take the most pleasure.

Let me say that in the cruder stages of American life flowers were associated with effeminate tastes and pleasures, but gentlemen, to-day in America floriculture is hard upon the track of manly arts. Nay, it is part of the mission of floriculture to save the manly arts of America from becoming brutalized.

When anyone hinted to me that it was rather remarkable for a man of nearly 200 pounds avoirdupois, to cross the ocean to read a paper on sweet peas, I pointed to the honorable list of names which I found on the prospectus of this bi-centennial celebration. Your vice-presidents and executive committee represent the masculine side of floriculture of to-day. This is the third time I have taken a 6000-mile journey from a disinterested love of one popular flower, and I am not conscious of having grown effeminate for this reason. Nay, we count among the forces that are redeeming America from the sordid lust of materialism this growing interest in floriculture, and the rapid increase of uses to which we are putting flowers, as attested by the last decade, is one of the most cheering heralds of the twentieth century. We have recently passed another Memorial day, the day of our tenderest patriotism, when we decorate the soldiers' graves, and our florists were simply overwhelmed with the demand for their finest products, and indeed for everything in the shape of a blossom. With us funerals have become the occasion of the most extravagant display of floral pieces, so much so as to already be a custom of questionable wisdom. The florists' trade is rapidly on the increase. We list 9000 florists in the United States.

I will not sing the praises of the vulgar display which proud wealth is tempted to make, for that would be the very antipode of the spirit of this occasion. But you who have been born and reared in the sweet English love of the garden will rejoice that America is now, more and more, showing her ethical and spiritual evolution in the abundant and significant uses to which she is putting flowers. Every year I see an increasing number of men, morning and evening, busy about their lawns and beds and borders, translating their own ethical and spiritual growth into the language of the beautiful products of the soil, and putting sweeter meaning into the word "home." Within the past decade our school yards have begun to add on this branch of education. And now our railroad stations, not so much as yours, but following your example, and with a prophecy of progress, have recently begun a lively competition in substituting little slices of paradise for the unsightly remnants of chaos that formerly prevailed.

That the commercial greed of a rapidly growing nation should so soon become amenable to these finer ethical and æsthetic dictates is one of the greatest encouragements to optimism. And I feel quite sure that America has overtaken Europe in the magnificent and elaborate layout, of the floral part, at least, of our public parks and gardens. We pay our compliments in flowers. We make love with flowers. We worship God with flowers in our church decorations. I live among them all the week, and unless I can preach from the midst of them I miss their inspiration. In our weddings the old, conventional, orange blossoms have given way to elaborate floral dec orations, defying description. And we disguise the gloom of the grave and transfigure our affection and faith with floral tributes of unstinted cost. 'Tis but a step from the patriotism that decorates a soldier's grave annually with blossoms, to that manly occupation or diversion in which we give our surplus energy to the development of the highest floral art. We preach floriculture as a hobby to busy men, who are in danger of suicidal application to business.

It would be about the same thing if my subject were, "A Decade of Sweet Peas," for this flower hardly attracted attention in America till this last decade of the century came in. And to tell of the wave of interest that has swept over the land since this flower was regenerated would put your credence to a sore test. Of course the old-fashioned Painted Lady sweet pea is still remembered in old gardens, and as many as a dozen sorts were found in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's exhibitions, twenty years and more ago. My soul was kindled at that time by a magnificent row grown by a well known Boston man, at one time Mayor of Newton. Twelve years ago I had begun to get together a collection of varieties, and when I had nineteen distinct sorts the fact was worth publishing. About that time I began to notice Mr. Eckford's name in Farquhar's catalogue, and in a sort of timid foot note, and about the most modest thing I ever saw in a seedsman's catalogue, they intimated that they could supply, but did not feel warranted in recommending, the latest sealed packets of the Eckford introductions. The sensations I felt in those days as I succeeded, one by one, in getting the named sorts into bloom, are still vivid. In those days Scarlet Invincible and Butterfly and Adonis, and Crown Princess of Prussia and Princess Beatrice were treasures indeed. The first vision I had of Mr. Eckford's work was in Boreatton, and Splendour, and then came Orange Prince and Countess of Radnor. I exhibited the first that had been seen in Boston of these last colors. There was no longer any skepticism in my mind about Mr. Eckford's achievement. I do not believe any flower yields more jealously to the hybridizer's art than the sweet pea. It was wonderful that Mr. Eckford got such colors, even after years of effort. And then we began to see his work in the hooded and grandiflora form that now characterizes nearly all the novelties.

The Eckford sets of 1892 and 1893 set the United States ablaze on sweet peas. California was just in time to prove that sweet pea seed could be grown in America and to meet the enormous demand the seed houses jumped from a few pounds of stock to tons. A small florist would sell a hundred pounds, an ordinary seedsman two or three tons, and one jobber has had twenty-five tons in stock in a season. Ten years ago a Boston seedsman declared to me that sweet pea seed could not be grown in America. Within four years of that time I visited California at the growers' invitation, and inspected the sweet pea fields of four growers, altogether not less than 350 acres. Sixty varieties were represented at that time, and were rogued carefully to name and type.

Now, the subject of sweet peas in America covers a wide range of data in the matter of climate and local conditions for their successful culture. We have every possible kind of soil, every degree of altitude, a wide variance of season. Sweet peas are grown in every state of the Union. They are planted all the way along from November to June, from the semi-tropical belt of Gulf states to the Canadian latitude. For 3000 miles, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, almost every garden has in the last decade had its row of sweet peas. And even when people have had ill luck in trying to grow them they still try and try again, for of all flowers they think they must have sweet peas. The American seed trade handles somewhere from 125 to 150 tons of seed of this one flower. I suppose that at this moment there are as many sweet peas in bloom in America as at any time during the last decade. We have such a diversified territory that there are always localities where people are making a fine showing on this flower, and plenty of new localities where the interest in them is in its first flush. Previous to this last decade they would grow as thriftily as weeds in our gardens, but since they have been so highly developed they demand virgin soil or something approximate thereto. We do not get so strong a fibrous root as we used to and hence our season of bloom is a good deal shortened. But every year shows the market full of them, and for July and August they are our leading flower.

It has taken rank as an exhibition flower. In several cities our sweet pea shows have for some time been an annual event. We are still competing for an Eckford cup at Springfield, Mass. The cup was taken last year by a gentleman who sent his flowers 300 miles, from western New York. He sent magnificent bunches of the complete set of Eckford's latest introductions, and as nearly as I could figure, it cost him about $10 per bunch to grow and transport and table them at our show. But the whole town where he lived celebrated the event of his winning the cup, for the whole town has had a sweet pea craze for three years. That is Cohocton, N. Y. It is a sample of a locality where this flower does splendidly and where a local interest is kindled to a high pitch.

But let me say, you who know only the moderate range of temperature which you have here in England, with its abundant moisture, cannot realize what our gardens have to contend with in America. Our summer's work is often spoiled in a single day by a scalding sultriness with the sun close on to 100° in the shade. These extremes of temperature, often accompanied by drought, not only burn the finer shadings out of our blooms, but put a ruinous strain on the less thrifty root which we now get. So exhaustingly does evaporation go on in our mid-summer days that only by heroic fortitude can we follow up the battle, year after year. It is a joy to come over here, where your climate smiles upon the delicate shadings of Mr. Eckford's beautiful seedlings, but with us only the stronger colors hold. We have to translate your descriptions into a much narrower vocabulary of colors and markings. Still our enthusiasm for ten years has, I think, led the world on this flower. It is not to be expected that we can Americanize the results of Mr. Eckford's work in ten years. I look upon Mr. Eckford's work as a permanent legacy. As a rule, a new color once made on the sweet pea is forever a fast color. Even if we have temporary set backs in America, we shall again and again revive this splendid annual in more and more acclimated form.

And now, I take it, your committee desires me to speak of that very important branch of my subject, the growing of American sweet pea seed. It is not all grown in California, but the great bulk of it is. I believe there are three main points in the production of good seed. First, conditions that will produce a strong, well nourished plant and bring it steadily to full maturity. Second, conditions that will, at the best stage of the plant's strong growth, throw out promptly and ripen uniformly, just as much of a seed product as the plant can, at one normal effort, carry out. Third, conditions insuring good sunshine for uniformly ripening and harvesting the product. Now, the seed ranches of California are located where the most wonderful virgin soil is found in abundance. It is of inexhaustible depth. Some of it is a heavy adobe soil, but in other places it graduates off into a quality that pulverizes well. It is a wonderfully rich deposit, often of great depth. The California year is pretty evenly divided between six months wet and six months that are rainless. But when the rains begin in the fall they begin to plant. The southern part of the state is semi-tropical, and north of that the winters are sufficiently mild, so that the sweet peas go on making root all winter. As far as possible they get their stocks in to catch these fall rains. Much of it comes into bloom in April, and May is a grand month to visit those immense seed ranches. I have seen thirty acres of one variety in bloom, but when you come to compare that with one block of onion seed a mile square, dimensions become dwarfed. I am sure that California soil makes a strong seed-producing plant. And the work done on sweet peas by these California growers is not only intelligent and conscientious, but enthusiastic. And their harvesting conditions would make English seedsmen hilarious. I am here to tell the simple truth. No storms ever beat their crops down, and just at the right stage they pull up those vines loaded with pods, and lay them upon great sheets in the sun, and that seed doesn't see a warehouse till it reaches the eastern jobber.

If I am to be honest to-day, I ought to say that three things will occur to any observing man who visits the California growers and carefully examines their conditions and products. You are entitled to ask whether the method of planting in November and harvesting in July has a tendency to change the habits of the vine, whether a seed matured two months later would carry the vines in our gardens through midsummer better. I do not know. Then there is the question of whether seed produced under very stimulating conditions will hold up under the trying conditions which the amateur grower has in many localities. And then seed ripened under such a sunny sky sometimes makes a hard baked shell that is tardy about swelling in the moist spring ground. But which would you rather do, harvest in rains or in a sure sunshine? Sum up the pro and con of California conditions. The conditions there are like everything else Californian. You can travel 900 miles in a straight line without crossing the boundaries of that state, and the creator gave them conditions for seed growing on the same grand scale, and I do not know where else the present enormous demand can be met. And I have not been able to find any seed that is better. The trouble is likely to be in other localities that vines will not mature so strong a product uniformly. I do not think you can pick pods from a growing vine and get as good a result as from seed that has matured uniformly, and taken the whole strength of the plant at one time.

I was fearful once that Mr. Eckford's novelties would deteriorate under these wholesale conditions of growing seed, but I think the Eckford blood is improved by being transplanted in California, and it is the common opinion on our side that the American grown seed is holding up the Eckford quality very well. But I do hope that specialists in this flower will multiply, for we need from various parts of the world that painstaking work that will do for this flower what is done for other flowers to hold them up to the highest type.

Perhaps I ought to say a word about American novelties. I think our claim to American novelties is legitimate, and yet, of course, we owe it to Mr. Eckford that he has made it easy for us to get them. Where a grower has from 200 to 250 acres of this flower in bloom, and most of it has come from the Eckford stock, of course his eye is always out for any precious rogue that may appear. And he frequently finds them, and carefully saves every seed from such a plant. The Eckford sealed packets are likely to break at any time into the most remarkable seedlings. The California growers have in reserve, with quite an accumulation of stock, many beautiful things. I don't know how you can stop them. And then, too, if you now cross two of Mr. Eckford's fine sorts you get the result of that hybridized blood that breaks in all directions. The California growers have done some of this crossing successfully, but they do not need to do much, for the list is already overloaded. I know this, that they very sincerely want Mr. Eckford to hold the lead. We feel almost a sacred dependence on him. We should count it a calamity to have any other name but his hold the pre-eminent place.

Gentlemen, there is one debt that has troubled my conscience for three years. It was an event in my life when I formed the acquaintance of S. B. Dicks, of London, and after that I looked forward to his annual coming with eager anticipation. He was a walking encyclopedia. If I could only have him to fire questions at for five minutes I was happy for a year. You could not rely upon what the catalogues said about sweet peas, but I became an authority after Mr. Dicks answered my questions. It was largely by his help that I was able to go to California in 1894 and set the growers right in their names and types of the sixty varieties then known. One day, about four years ago, I met him, and he said he was going to add something to the literature of the sweet pea. From that day to this no opportunity has offered itself to worthily tell him of the personal debt I felt toward him for that chapter on the history of this flower. If I were to name the salient points that should form the corona of this celebration, that historical chapter by Mr. Dicks would be one, and worthy to be put beside the splendid work of Mr. Eckford. His article, with valuable illustrations, appeared in the New York Florists' Exchange and American Gardening in 1897. You have surely added luster to this occasion by giving him again the history of this flower.

Gentlemen and friends, the facts are so evenly divided between Great Britain and America on this flower, that while I feel that I must come to England to see it at its best, I am quite sure you also must visit America to see it at its best.

Pan-American Notes.

Frequent heavy showers have been a great help to the trees, shrubs and lawns upon the exposition grounds. The large area between Elmwood avenue and the park entrance, which has been laid out in hundreds of beds, mostly to receive exhibits, is now assuming a most beautiful and finished appearance. By the energy and skill of Mr. Ulrich, what was a few weeks ago a most forbidding waste of clay, is now covered with a velvety lawn. No expense is spared in preparing the beds for exhibits. They are excavated fifteen inches and filled in with rich soil. The banks of the lakes and grand canal are as green as beautiful grass can make them.

The sunken gardens, which lie between horticultural hall and the United States building, are nearly completed and make a grand effect. There are two sets of them, each 800 feet long, The extent of the landscape features now begins to be evident; they are most lavish and diversified. Wherever shrubbery will adorn, it is planted and between the shrubs the ground will be covered with herbaceous plants. To supply all these Mr. Ulrich has raised immense quantities of the leading sorts.

A visit to the propagating houses and a chat with the foreman, Herman Searman, who walked me over two or three acres of frames which were filled with hardy plants and grasses, convinced me that there are plants enough to make this department of the Pan-American truly remarkable. They were sown during the winter and are now strong plants and will be planted permanently early this fall. There are 100,000 of these hardy plants and another 200,000 low growing or creeping plants that will need the protection of a frame this winter and will be planted out early in the spring.

These plants, such as vinca, lysimachia, othonna, cerastium and others will be used to cover the ground beneath the groups of palms, etc. The herbaceous plants make a long list and include most all of the hardy, showy sorts. There are achilleas, potentillas, digitalises, campanulas, lobelias, platycodons, polemoniums, gypsophilas, delphiniums, rudbeckias, chelones, aquilegias, asters, salvias, heleniums, lychnises, coreopsises, dianthuses, geums and many others. Then there are thousands of the handsome grasses that will be placed on the banks and margins of the lakes, lagoons and picturesque inlets. There are varieties of agrostis, andropogon, eulalia, bambusa, elymus, erianthus, panicum, pennisetum and other less known sorts. Surely all these plants, wisely distributed, must make an unparalleled display.

Random Notes in and About Philadelphia.

One new palm house about 30x200 is the extent of Joseph Heacock's building at Jenkintown this season; but nine of the older houses have been re-piped and re benched, entailing considerable labor and expense, which accounts for the air of bustle and activity that greets the visitor here these hot, midsummer days. The benching has been done in latest style, with the walks close to the walls. Red cedar is the wood used, Mr. Heacock having given up the idea that locust is the most lasting of timbers for this purpose. Palms and roses are the principal crops grown and it is a pleasure to note their fine condition, the former especially. House after house of kentias in all stages, from the seed bed up to 15 inch pots, greet one in passing through and all in the cleanest and most vigorous state of growth. One batch of 5000 Kentia Belmoreana seedlings about three inches high was particularly noticeable for its vigorous and uniform growth, showing stronger seed vitality than is usually found in this crop. Areca and latania are important crops also, although in less quantity than kentia.

American Beauty is the standard variety grown in the rose line, the teas being subordinate. Mr. Heacock grows a good many Meteor and has generally done well with it. This year he has the usual quantity planted and they are well forward. Of Liberty only about 100 plants have been put in as an experiment. The growers around Philadelphia seem to be taking hold of this new sort much more gingerly than their brethren in Boston and other parts of the country. They say the large quantity held for cut flowers by the introducers here makes but a poor inducement for the man who has to pay a high price for his stock.

Mr. Heacock is building a new underground cooling room for his cut flowers, the big refrigerator which has done duty for so many years having outlived its usefulness. The expense for ice will be avoided and many other advantages are to be gained by the new method, which reminds me that this "cooling room" matter is the subject up for discussion at the next meeting of the Philadelphia club. There is, I believe, more meat in this matter than would appear on the surface, to the casual observer, and we are to be told about some new and interesting methods by Mr. Geiger, who has been gathering pointers from east and west the past few months. It is a nice, cool, refreshing subject for August 7, which is usually a sizzling time of the year.

Emmet Canning has rented the old Hunter place at Fifty-sixth street and Lansdowne avenue. He will grow chrysanthemums, carnations, roses and miscellaneous stock, chiefly for local trade.

Jno. Habermehl has been sojourning at Atlantic City for the past month, having been packed off there by his doctor and relatives, much against his own inclinations. The boys here are hoping that his health will be greatly improved by convention time, as his presence as captain of the bowling team is much desired. He has not been able to qualify for a place on the team this year but they'll take him at face value if he's in form. During his absence the business is well looked after by his brother, Edward. This firm, J. J Habermehl's Sons, has come rapidly to the front during the past few years. The are hustlers and keen, shrewd people and are now enjoying a well deserved success.

Mrs. Edwin Lonsdale and daughters are enjoying the cooling breezes at Ocean City with Mrs. Robert Kift and family for near neighbors. Jno. Burton is away fishing. Ino. Westcott is so often away on that errand that by way of novelty I report him at home at present but open for any congenial suggestions at any hour of the day or night. Jacob Becker and Emil Lieker have gone to Europe, while others too numerous to mention have hied them to seashore and mountain. Altogether the Quaker City is pretty empty but there are still enough of the craft here to welcome any brother passing through.

Jno. G. Gardner has severed his connection with the Stoke Pogis Nurseries and has launched out for himself at Villa Nova, Pa., under the style of The Montgomery Nurseries, where he will cater mostly to the local trade. He is well and favorably known among the best people in the neighborhood and has the most flattering prospects for success. He has a good field for cricket and invites the florists of Philadelphia to a game sometime soon. Jno. Burton will have to get his team of cricketers organized again and take this in. Dodds, Thatcher, Goebel, and a lot more good cricketers are just pawing around like hounds in leash, eager for the fray.

I saw about as fine a lot of Pandanus Veitchii yesterday as it has ever been my pleasure to witness, at John Welsh Young's. This gentleman has been making a specialty of this plant for several years and does it well. Roses are the chief item grown here and planting is about over for the season. The past year was a very satisfactory one on the whole, both as to crops and prices, and PHILADELPHUS SPECIOSUS.

Mr. Young is in a more than usually cheerful mood, brimful of quips and wreathed in smiles for all callers of respectable antecendents and good condition.

H. W. Wieland, up at Newtown, is another of the active florists of this neighborhood who is doing some building during the hot spell. He is using the Jennings gutter and drip catcher, which looks like a good thing. There is said to be an improvement on it, however, the lengths being about twenty feet instead of five feet, and requiring less bolting. I think the improved pattern is the Hippard, but am not sure. Jno. Walker was telling me about it and John knows a good thing when he sees it.

I think war must have been declared between the two Darby Road nabobs, Anderson and Harris. You can hear the noise of them a mile away, as they sit on the front porch at Anderson's on a Sunday afternoon and discuss the fine points of gunning and other sports and pastimes. The amount of wind jamming indulged in on some little subtelty that none but the Galloway born could understand, is something remarkable. There's the handicap, for instance. A great theme! How these two whang it and bang it, and toss it up, and throw it down, and thresh it, and smash it, scatter the remains broadcast and then gather them all up and commence over again! And bowling averages! That's another bone to worry and fight over and snap and growl at. They whisk it this way and that, they chew it in this corner and gnaw it in that, and raise such a hullabaloo generally that the neighbors have much ado to hear their own ideas come into their heads. There are no casualties to report at this writing beyond great effusion of breath and perspiration, three suspender buttons, four damaged chairs, one stiff hat and one old weskit. After the convention struggle is over it is expected that peace will again be restored between those two estimable citizens and near neighbors. G. C. WATSON.

Philadelphus Speciosus and Falconeri.

Our illustrations present two contrasting types of this popular garden shrub. P. speciosus is one of the largest and showiest early flowering species. The flowers are snow white and very fragrant. As to the origin of P. Falconeri, no one appears to know. Its characteristics seem to suggest deutzia blood and it is possible that it may be a hybrid. The flowers are silky white, very dainty, and would be pretty in florists' work of the choicest character. Both the above described plants are perfectly hardy and highly prized at the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, where the photographs were made for our reproductions.

New England Park Superintendents.

The third annual meeting of the New England Association of Park Superintendents was held on July 11 and 12 at Worcester, Mass. The sessions opened with a banquet at the Bay State House on Wednesday evening, and after one and one-half hours attention to this feature the meeting was in proper condition to attend to business.

The meeting was called to order by chairman Edwin B. Curtis, of the Worcester park board, who introduced J. A. Pettigrew, president of the association, who read an address upon the work of the association. He was followed by James Draper, secretary of the Worcester park board, who addressed a few words of welcome to the visitors and told of the work of inaugurating and constructing the distributed system of small parks which Worcester now enjoys. He traced the beginning of the present system back to the common, or training field, which was a part of the beginning of almost all New England towns, and paid an enthusiastic tribute to E. W. Lincoln, who was instrumental in acquiring and laying out the present large public areas, and to O. B. Hadwen, who had served continuously for thirty-three years on the park board of the city.

J. D. Fitts, the superintendent of the parks of Providence, R. I., was next called upon for an account of the recent meeting of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association at Chicago. Mr. Fitts rehearsed the work of the association briefly and referred pleasantly to the hospitality extended to the visitors in Chicago.

Secretary Geo. A. Parker read a paper upon the uses and influence of parks, which was of great interest, full of poetical sentiment and much enjoyed by his audience.

Henry Frost, superintendent of the parks at Haverhill, Mass, gave an account of his efforts to beautify his city, and Chas. S. Anthony, president of the Tauton, Mass., park board, told in a very interesting and exceedingly humorous manner of his experiences in developing the parks of his city.

Superintendent Frank L. Fish, of the Taunton parks, also made a few appreciative remarks, and Nathaniel Morton, president of the Plymouth, Mass., park board, spoke entertainingly of the park interests of his own city. He stated that he has devoted fifty acres of land to demonstrating that the white pine can be successfully cultivated and invited all to come to Plymouth and see what is being done there.

The business session of the association was then held, President Pettigrew in the chair. Secretary Parker read the report of the proceedings at the Providence meeting last year and Treasurer J. H. Hemmingway presented his financial report, which was very encouraging. The secretary reported, for the executive committee, recommendations regarding changes in the by-laws, which were adopted without opposition. At the election of officers the following gentlemen were selected to serve for the ensuing year: President, J. A. Pettigrew; vice-presidents, Jos. D Fitts, John A. Holmes, Chas. E. Keith, W. H. Richardson; treasurer, John A. Hemmingway; secretary, G. A. Parker. All, with the exception of Mr. Richardson, are re-elections. Seven new members were elected and it was voted to continue through the coming year the circulating bulletin which had been inaugurated during the past season by President Pettigrew. An invitation having been presented by Superintendent Theodore Wirth, of Hartford, Conn., on behalf of the park commissioners of Hartford and the Keney Park trustees, to hold the meeting of 1901 in the city of Hartford, on motion it was voted unanimously to accept the invitation.

The second day was passed by the visitors in inspecting the park system of Worcester as guests of the park commissioners. Elm Park was first visited. This territory contains eighty-eight acres once a meadow but now covered with a luxuriant growth of trees and herbaceous plants in great variety and adorned with a fine lake with two fountains. The high eminence in this reservation, known as Newton Hill, was visited, and the commanding view from this observation point greatly enjoyed. Some one suggested to O. B. Hadwen, who assisted in escorting the party, that there were several trees that might with benefit be removed; that gentleman replied: "The man who would dare suggest to cut down those trees would be hanged; I have had all I want of it and have done all I dared to do in the past."

Compton Park, fifteen acres in extent, was next visited and found to be mainly a play ground with a large wading pool, of which a myriad of youngsters were taking full advantage. It is located in the tenement district and serves one of the most useful purposes in the park system.

University Park, fourteen acres in extent, with its lake, fountain and nymphæas, and Institute Park were next in order. Institute Park was originally a gift from Hon. Stephen Salisbury, who has paid, besides, a large amount toward the improvement of the grounds. There is a fine lake here, also, on an eminence, a reproduction of the famous stone mill at Newport. A lunch was served at the refectory.

Dodge Park, containing fifteen acres, was next visited. It was a gift to the city from Hon. Rufus B. Dodge, but little work has been done on it yet. North Park, thirty-nine acres in extent, has a fine rolling surface and picturesque lake and is well covered with thrifty young plantations. East Park has an extensive play ground with wading pool, and it also includes Chandler Hill, an abrupt eminence, from which a fine view can be obtained. This reservation contains eighty acres.

The largest reservation is Lake Park, containing 110 acres, located on the beautiful Lake Quinsigamond. The visitors were given a trip the entire length of the lake on a steam launch and the scenery along the shores, where many private club houses are located, was thoroughly enjoyed. Special note was made of the Wapita Club, which is an organization of Elks, their grounds being located on an island. It was suggested that this is the only case in history where the Elks are known to be entirely surrounded by water. Lake Park was a joint gift of Hon. E. L. Davis and H. H. Bigelow, who each contributed fifty-five acres. It is covered with fine oak and chestnut forests.

A shore dinner was given at the Edgemere Hotel in Quinsigamond Park, also abutting on the lake. Commissioner Curtis addressed a few words of welcome to the guests, thanking them for coming to Worcester and extending an invitation for another visit in the near future. He introduced Commissioner Draper as chairman, who called upon Mayor Rufus B. Dodge, who spoke enthusiastically of the recent park development in Worcester and predicted greater extensions to its area in the future. President Pettigrew replied for the association, thanking the people of Worcester for their kindness and hospitality, saying that their parks were advantageously located and approving particularly of the wading pools provided for the children. Secretary Parker and Superintendent Keith, of Bridgeport, Conn., followed in a similar strain. Commissioner Hadwen, being called upon, told of his interest and pride in the parks of Worcester. At the close an enthusiastic vote of thanks was recorded. One of the most remarkable features of this meeting was the promptness with which the programme was carried out, from the first to last. The various features which were scheduled on the programme, being some fifteen in number, were all followed up on time, almost to a second. It is doubtful if a similar record has ever been made by an organization at its meetings heretofore.

The following gentlemen were present: John A. Pettigrew, H. B. Clewley, J. B. Shea and W. J. Stewart, Boston, Mass.; G. A. Parker, Theo. Wirth and J. W. Phelps, Hartford, Conn.; Joseph D. Fitts, Providence, R. I.; Henry Frost and Dudley Porter, Haverhill, Mass.; Nathaniel Morton, Plymouth, Mass.; Herbert A. Hastings, Springfield, Mass.; Henry C. Fuller, New London, Conn.; Chas. E. Keith, Bridgeport, Conn.; Robt. Elder, Waverley, Mass.; C. S. Anthony and F. L. Fish, Taunton, Mass.; W. H. Richardson, Concord, N. H.; T. W. Cook, New Bedford, Mass.; W. B. Whittier, South Framingham, Mass.

WITH THE GROWERS.

WALTER RETZER & CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

Those persons who are admirers of cleanliness cannot do better than to pay a visit to Walter Retzer, up on the North Side of Chicago, where the lake breezes blow. To begin with, the houses are all new and well conditioned, which is a great thing in itself, and then the active head of the institution is one of those persons who are so fortunate as to have rubbed off some ideas of order as practiced by Dr. Wm. Trelease, at the Missouri Botanical Garden, and O. C. Simonds, at Graceland Cemetery, with both of whom he has been associated. The result is that the store is as neat as it can be, the big show house is as orderly as a regiment on parade, the greenhouses are as clean as constant care can make them and, as for the stock, there is hardly an unhealthy plant in the whole lot and not a trace of any of the many pests with which the plantsman must contend.

Mr. Retzer has been in business only three months and he is young enough to feel that it isn't necessary for him to make his fortune the first season. With this idea in view he is engaged in getting things into such shape that it will be unnecessary to extol the merits of his wares, believing that it will be worth while in later dealings to have the stock speak for itself. He isn't crowding things but there are huge quantities of material under the cover of his 125,000 feet of glass and the way it is thriving and selling is a surprise, even to the sanguine owners. There is a splendid lot of Boston ferns of various sizes and scattered here and there are several batches of Livistonia rotundifolia, about 8,000 in all, which are remarkably vigorous. This, by the way, is Mr. Retzer's favorite palm and he proposes to grow it extensively, believing that the public will appreciate it at its true worth; he has, in fact, invested in such small lots as he has encountered, to increase his stock. There are, of course, all sizes of kentias, latanias and cocoses and out in a shaded hothed are many thousands of arecas which are making a remarkable growth after only a few days in this location. In the propagating beds Mr. Retzer has 50,000 kentia seeds, 25,000 latanias, 25,000 arecas and 8,000 cocoses, all germinating nicely.

He has, of course, considerable quantities of stock demanded by his very handsome retail trade. This spring he had several houses of bedding material but found that he had to buy as much more to fill his orders. He does not expect to grow more than a portion of the cut flowers he requires but has planted 500 Liberty roses, which are starting away finely, and is now benching 15,000 chrysanthemum plants which will all be grown to single stem. One of the novelties of the place is the use made of a dozen big sago palms, the patriarchs of the considerable portion of the family which are at present occupying quarters there. These plants made such excellent growth that Mr. Retzer cut the leaves for his design work and then began sending them to a down-town commission dealer who sold them at such profitable prices that the plants will be planted out in a big solid bed and given every encouragement to keep on growing into money.

Mr. Retzer was educated as a landscape architect and has found his location to afford excellent opportunity for the exercise of his talents in this direction. He did a little work of this character during the spring season and is booking a number of good orders for fall planting. It is his purpose to eventually be able to procure a considerable proportion of the material required for such work by drawing from his own stock and he now has a quantity of cuttings of shrubs of various character in a propagating bed and has secured a couple of lots adjoining the greenhouses, where he has planted an importation of clematises and roses, all grafted and in variety; this additional land Mr. Retzer proposes to shortly cover with glass.

If the future fulfills the promise of the roseate horizon Mr. Retzer proposes to use his present range merely as a retail and distributing point, doing the bulk of his growing upon a forty-five-acre tract at the corner of Lincoln avenue and Crawford avenue which he has just acquired. For the present this land will be utilized for plantations of shrubbery of the choicer kinds, such as are required for his landscape work, but Mr. Retzer hopes that the time is not many years distant when his wholesale trade will justify him in covering a large portion of it with glass.

Sweet Pea Notes.

Sweet peas grown out of doors at Memorial day may seem almost an impossibility for New England. This season I picked sweet peas on May 23 and have been having a continuous supply ever since. The system which I adopt was first suggested to me several years ago by that well known friend of horticulture, James Wood, of Mount Kisco, N. Y.

I sow the seed during the first week of October. This allows the young plants to be about two inches or more above ground before severe freezing sets in. As soon as frosts become severe enough to warrant protection I set a board ten or twelve inches wide on edge along each side of the row and about six inches away from the row. I then earth up the board nearly to the top on the outside. Along the top I lay sashes the proper width to fit snugly on the edges of the boards. This is all the protection necessary for this locality. Too much protection with salt hay or litter is apt to rot the plants.

During winter the sashes are taken off every fine day but during a severe spell they are left on all the time. As soon as the severe frosts are past the sashes and boards are removed, the plants earthed up a little and a fine, hardy growth will be the result. This system, which does not seem to be much used, should be tried by all those who have had poor success with spring sowings. The vines will have a stronger and healthier growth and the flowers will in many cases be double the usual size, with much longer stems. I have this season picked blooms with stems fifteen inches long, which is certainly a good length for this popular flower. JOHN W. DUNCAN.

A Kansas City Design.

We reproduce herewith a photograph of a design made by Arthur Newell, of Kansas City, the second one made for the same customer. The arm of the cross was entirely of pink material, Bridesmaid roses, Scott carnations and Blanche Ferry sweet peas, with some bronze galax leaves on the outer edge, partly covered by sprays of asparagus. The upright portion and the base of the cross were worked out entirely in white, with the exception of some three-foot Beauties and long Bride roses used at the base, the material used being white roses, Brides and Kaiserins, white carnations and sweet peas. The combination produces a very striking as well as pleasing effect.

CARNATIONS.

THRIPS AND THEIR EXTERMINATION.

The time is not far distant for growers to begin housing their carnations, and it is none too early to begin preparations for this work, which will be unusually severe this season on account of the almost universal prevalance of thrips, unsuspected, perhaps, by many growers, but present nevertheless. All rubbish is a harbor for thrips and the houses should be cleaned with the greatest thoroughness; then, for at least three days before planting begins, close them up tightly and fumigate by burning about four times as many tobacco stems as you would use if the houses were planted. Do this for three or four nights in succession and you will exterminate not only the thrips but most other insects.

The thrip might be classed with the red spider as an enemy of carnations and is a greater menace than any fungus disease. It is not difficult to detect the presence of thrips when acquainted with their marks. On young plants and those growing in the field they can be detected by the curling and distortion of the young leaves as they come out from the extremities of the branches. An examination of these leaves will show that they have been eaten, either at the tip or along the sides; the portion traversed will be from one-fourth of an inch in length to as much as two inches and usually about one-sixteenth of an inch in width. They seem to work only on the epidermis of the leaf.

Thrips are very minute and one must look closely to see them with the naked eye. When mature they have black wings and are very lively, jumping almost as soon as they are exposed to the light. They are not exclusively carnation feeders but attack a number of flowering and vegetable plants as well. On outdoor carnation plants they will be found in the center of the bunch of leaves forming the terminal of each branch, and it is this which makes the application of remedies difficult, but it, at the same time, affords us a chance to destroy a goodly portion of them by gathering up and burning the branches severed in topping.

As thrips are not friends of tobacco in any form, some of them may be driven from the plants by an application of strong tobacco dust, preferably in the morning, when a heavy dew is on the plants. A sprinkling with diluted tobacco extract is also of some benefit, but best of all outdoor remedies, where the cost is not prohibitive, is to mulch the entire patch with tobacco stems. Where none of these methods check the thrips, the only thing to do is to house the plants at once and fumigate them heavily two or three times a week as long as may be necessary.

For an even-span house, 22x256, the ridge fifteen feet high, six fumigators should be used, each holding one-half bushel of tobacco stems; on the top of the stems in each of these fumigators sprinkle one-fourth of a pint of pyrethrum powder. This strong fumigation is very damaging to the flowers, but it will so reduce the thrips that ordinary winter fumigation will keep them under control. It will be as well to cut all the buds off the plants, and pay attention to getting rid of the thrips first and get the flowers afterward.

During the winter months the flowers are the principal feeding ground and the presence of thrips will be manifested by white spots at the edges of the petals. As long as there are any signs of them in the houses it will be well to keep up a regular fumigation with the stems and pyrethrum powder once every two weeks. Be sure to have the flowers picked as closely as possible before fumigating, as it greatly reduces the keeping qualities of the flowers.

Every grower of carnations should look upon thrips as an exceedingly dangerous enemy and should fight them from the start. There may be some growers who have escaped thus far, but a careful look over the plants in almost any section of the country will reveal their work. They are not likely to be disseminated by the interchange of cuttings, but they seem to be like the aphis and red spider, ready to go to work wherever there is a plant upon which they can feed. In the greenhouse they seem manageable; outdoors they are a menace to carnation growing and it is to be hoped that our experiment station experts will take up the study and devise some practical method for their extermination.

DECKS CLEARED FOR ACTION ON CONVENTION MATTERS.—PREPARATIONS PROGRESSING APACE.—SPECIAL MEETING OF THE CLUB ON MONDAY EVENING.—VARIOUS MATTERS.

Business having come to a standstill in the city, replanting having been generally attended to in the suburbs, the European tourists having about all departed, everything is now clear for steady convention preparatory work. Little else is talked about, in fact. The souvenir book is, at last, on the press and the committee that has worked so industriously on this feature have taken time for a breathing spell and left the ground free for the entertainment committee, which is taking full advantage of its opportunity and making as much bustle as half a dozen ordinary committees all together. Brooklyn and Manhattan have developed a sharp rivalry as to which shall make the deepest impression upon the lady visitors to the convention and it looks as though the ladies are booked for the biggest time on record.

The special meeting of the club next Monday night, in view of the short time yet remaining before the convention is expected to bring out a large attendance and very complete reports and estimates are expected from the working sub-committees. It is generally understood that in every department the prospects are of the rosiest character and everyone is full of enthusiasm. Secretary Stewart will be prepared to issue membership certificates and badges at the meeting to such as desire to take membership in the national society and avoid the crowd who will all want to pay at once on the opening day of the convention.

As indicated in our advertising columns, Wm. Ghormley succeeds to the business of Ghormley & Perkins, Mr. Perkins retiring from the firm. Mr. Ghormley's first season as a wholesaler has convinced him that the commission cut flower business calls for a high order of ability and some lively hustling as it exists in New York today.

E. Alvin Miller, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., accompanied by his wife, sailed from New York, July 14, on the steamer Pennsylvania, for Hamburg, intending to spend several months in Germany, Belgium and France. Mr. Miller is planning especially to visit the leading European rose growers.

The ninth annual excursion of P. L. Bogart's employees took place on Wednesday, July 11. It was a very merry crowd that the steamer Geo. Starr took aboard and their anticipations of a royal good time were fully realized.

H. D. Darlington, of Flushing, was married to Miss Mary F. Perpall, on July 17. How the heaths will bloom this season!

C. A. Dards sailed for Europe on Saturday, July 14.

ROSES SHOWN AT ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S MEETING.—THE MATTER OF MUTILATED LILIES.—SWEET PEAS AT THEIR BEST.—TRADE QUIET.—GENERAL CONDITIONS.

At the Royal Horticultural Society's meeting, July 3, the hall was again well filled with exhibits, roses being the leading feature. There were special prizes for several classes, which resulted in close competition. There were also good displays of hardy and other seasonable flowers. Sweet peas were well shown by Veitch & Sons; delphiniums and gaillardias came from Kelway & Sons; Messrs. Wallace staged lilies and Cannells' begonias were very good.

It has been the custom of growers to remove the anthers of Lilium Harrisii as soon as the buds open to prevent the pollen staining the flowers. At the very successful Richmond show in the last week of June, Sir Trevor Lawrence, president of the Royal Horticultural Society, remarked that he considers it a mutilation of the flower and that the R. H. S. will not in future recognize any exhibit containing a flower so treated. It is suggested that the soiling of the flowers could be prevented if the anthers were encased in tissue paper until after the plants are staged.

Sweet peas will be at their best the third week in July, the occasion of the sweet pea conference and the visit to the trial grounds of Hurst & Sons. The weather has been most favorable and all varieties have made strong growth. I have found a few instances in which the flowers would have been larger had the growth not been so vigorous, and in some cases the buds will drop when the development of the plant is too rapid.

The London season is now at an end and trade is very quiet; there is a superabundance of cut blooms and buyers have things pretty much their own way. The facilities for transportation are now so good that the shipping trade has grown amazingly and the ever present demand for flowers for funerals and weddings makes an outlet for white material. The use of flowers at funerals has increased wonderfully of late years. H.

EXCELLENT MATERIAL SHOWN AT HORTICULTURAL HALL.—NOTES OF THE EXHIBITS AND AWARDS.—THE CAUSE OF BLUE HYDRANGEAS.—BUSINESS VERY QUIET.—STOCKS AVAILABLE.—COMMAND OF THE FAKIRS.—WEATHER HARD ON PARK PLANTATIONS.—NOTES.

On Saturday, July 14, there was an excellent exhibition of herbaceous flowers, ferns, etc., at Horticultural Hall. M. H. Walsh showed another of his Wichuraiana hybrids, one of the parents being Baroness Rothschild. The foliage is heavy and highly polished and the fragrant flowers, soft pink in color, are borne in long and full clusters. A certificate of merit was awarded. Kenneth Finlayson exhibited blooms of Gerbera Jamesonii, a brilliant, herbaceous flower from South Africa, which does not appear in Nicholson's dictionary. This also received a certificate of merit. As usual, the Blue Hill Nursery and Rea Bros. sent fine collections of hardy garden flowers comprising about fifty species each. A tank of hardy aquatics from Mrs. J. L. Gardner attracted much attention. D. F. Roy showed the best tuberous begonia flowers seen here for a long time; E. C. Lewis, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence and W. J. Clemsen staged sweet peas and there was quite a good display of hollyhocks from Jos. S. Chase, E. C. Lewis and C. F. Curtis. W. J. Clemsen showed a table of fine Japanese irises. Seven magnificent specimens of Hydrangea Otaksa completely filled the center area of the hall. They were from H. Dumaresq. Three of them were each eight feet in height and of equal diameter. The flowers in these three were deep blue, while the smaller sized plants bore flowers of bright pink, with one exception, which bore flowers of both colors. W. Downs, the gardener, on being asked as to the variation in color asserted that the plants were all from identical stock and said that he attributed the result in the case of the blue flowers to the fact that the plants had become pot bound. Starvation, and not the presence or absence of iron or any other subject is, in his opinion, the cause of blue flowers in hydrangeas. Arthur Griffin brought two handsome hybrid melons for which he received a certificate of merit, and Oakes Ames was given a silver medal for a cypripedium seedling named W. R. Lee.

Business in general is unusually quiet, even for midsummer. The demand for flowers for the summer resorts, heretofore brisk at this date, amounts to nothing. So many people have gone to Europe this season that little improvement is looked for in this respect. Roses are of very poor quality, with the exception of Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and President Carnot. Carnations are abundant and low priced, but lily of the valley is of excellent quality, not too plentiful and therefore holds its value well. Pond lilies are now at their height. The pink variety is most salable but at times they are not all marketed and then the ever ready street fakirs get them at nominal figures. It takes a man with a Napoleonic will to control this street horde. When they swoop down, thirty or forty strong on the wholesale house they are worse than an army of Boxers. I saw David Welch the other day clear the store in the space of thirty seconds and was filled with admiration of his superb generalship. Just one majestic sweep of his arm with "Come, boys, move on," and the long rows that had been roosting on the counters and blocking the passage ways, melted away like magic and without a word of remonstrance.

The dry weather of the past few weeks has been very hard on newly planted material in parks and gardens. There has been considerable rainfall, but it has come in sudden, brief showers and did not sink into the soil. A steady rain of several days is much needed. The Michigan prairie roses are making a magnificent show just now on the parkway at Forest Hills. They are planted with an undergrowth of Wichuraiana and, both blooming at the same time, the effect is beautiful. Mr. Pettigrew's method with the prairie roses is to cut out all the old wood as soon as it is through flowering, depending upon the young growth entirely for next season's bloom. The pond lilies are doing finely in Ward's pond. There are fully 300 blossoms open every day and they attract much admiration.

Thomas F. Galvin has just returned from a short trip to Europe.

In town: G. W. Hilliard, Exeter, N. H.; F. C. Jackson, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Fuller, Leominster; Mrs. H. Berger, New York.

STATE OF THE MARKET.—DEMAND VARIABLE AND SUPPLY HEAVY.—MATERIAL AVAILABLE.—DOINGS DOWN INDIANA WAY.—CARNATIONS ARE TO SUPPLANT CUCUMBERS—VISITORS FROM AFAR.—WHOLESALER PLANS A LONG OUTING.—REINBERG MAKES CHANGES.—ON TO NEW YORK.—VARIOUS ITEMS.

Trade has gone by fits and starts this week. The demand is exclusively for funeral material; city trade is very light and shipping trade the greatest reliance of many houses, but there isn't enough of it to go around. Once or twice this week the orders have come in at such a rate that everybody worked for an hour or two, but it was soon over, and quiet has prevailed for the greater part of the time. As to supplies, there are very few Beauties and not nearly enough good tea roses, although there are thousands of rubbishy buds which are almost worthless, the street fakirs being able to do very little with them. There is a superabundance of carnations, even of whites, which were scarce last week. There are sweet peas to throw away, many sales being made at a cent a bunch. The only grower whose stock sells out well is C. W. Northrup, of La Grange, one of Kennicotts' consignors, whose flowers are so good and so carefully bunched that the light colored sorts are always chosen where sweet peas are wanted. There are almost as many gladioli as there are sweet peas. Asters are in and the good ones sell fairly well, at the expense of the carnations, no doubt. Auratum lilies are holding up well but longiflorums move slowly; to many it seems like a mistake to prolong their season.

Last Sunday E. C. Amling visited the South Park Floral Company at New Castle, where a splendid new range of houses is now completed and planted with 20,000 Beauties, all except one house, in which there is a new red rose which is to be offered to the trade this season. All the old houses are also replanted and the stock well forward. They have carried over two houses each of Brides and Bridesmaids, with which they have been particularly successful. One of the wonders of the place is the new well of natural gas struck last week. The flame is fully thirty feet high and the rock pressure 275 pounds. Messrs. Heller and Dittman accompanied Mr. Amling to Richmond for a visit to E. G. Hill and his sister, Mrs. Graves, who has such remarkable success with carnations. All these growers are consigning stock to Mr. Amling.

Nic Reading has bought an establishment of six houses of John Zender at Rogers Park. Mr. Zender has been growing vegetables near his brother, Adam Zender, on Ridge avenue boulevard, but Mr. Reading, who has been growing Beauties for John Muno, will essay carnations as soon as he can clear out the cucumbers now in the houses.

Among the week's visitors was E. R. Roberts, superintendent of the parks of Tacoma, Wash. The system embraces some 800 acres and the rose display is superb. Mr. Roberts says that when he left home 150,000 plants were in full bloom, a showing of 125 varieties. They have had no glass in the parks but will this season put up a house 25x200.

E. E. Pieser has been in town this week. He is feeling fine after his stay at West Baden, just right, in fact, to enjoy the trip upon which he expects to start on Tuesday, doing Mackinac Island, Marquette, Buffalo, the Thousand Islands, New York and Boston, returning about September 1.

A. C. Kohlbrand, who has been with "Mosco" for the past few months, will go to work for E. C. Amling after a brief vacation. For a long time, and up to the date at which they ceased selling for themselves, Mr. Kohlbrand attended to the disposal of the cut of the Klehms' Nurseries; later he was with Kennicotts.

Out at River Forest, F. Calvert & Son report a good business. They have 20,000 feet of glass and are right beside the north shore electric railway, which has built a platform at their place and lands customers at their very doors. They say that they have a very large demand for material for ferneries.

George Reinberg's wholesale store is being remodeled and rearranged to give greater convenience and enlarged selling capacity. Mr. Reinberg is now cutting some of the best roses in the market, Kaiserin, Meteor, Perle and Beauty.

A. N. Kinsman and his son, of Austin, Minn., were in town for several days this week. They rode from Austin to Milwaukee on their bicycles and came to Chicago by boat, intending to return in the same way they made the first half of their journey.

Word has been received that C. W. McKellar's father died at Chillicothe, O., at 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, July 18. The funeral will be held this afternoon, Saturday, at 4 o'clock, and Mr. and Mrs. McKellar will arrive home on Monday.

A. G. Prince will probably attend the convention. Mr. Prince, in a foot race at the Royal League picnic last week won the first prize, a $65 sewing machine. Prince's bookkeeper, Miss Wilson, is taking her vacation this week.

Nic Wietor is at home from his fishing trip and reports excellent luck. He is now awaiting the call to start for the S. A. F. convention and will be accompanied by their foreman, Luke Collins.

Miss Lizzie Joho, bookkeeper for J. T. Corbrey during his wholesale days and later in charge of the books at McKellar & Winterson's, is now keeping the accounts at Amling's.

Weber Brothers are now cutting very good new Brides and Bridesmaids, to which they will devote their newly rebuilt place, selling through J. A. Budlong.

The Chicago committee has selected the L. S. & M. S. R. R. for the trip to the New York convention. Details of the arrangements appear elsewhere.

O. P. Bassett has taken a cottage at Delavan, Wis, and is installed there for the season. C. L. Washburn is taking his outing piecemeal.

Carl Trager, gardener at the Montezuma Hotel, Los Vegas Hot Springs, New Mexico, is spending a six weeks' vacation here.

Among the visitors have been A. E. Crooks, of Benton Harbor, and Chas. Dutton, of Holland, Mich.

LITTLE DOING IN A BUSINESS WAY.—STOCK AVAILABLE.—VISIT OF WESTCHESTER GARDENERS.—PERSONAL DOINGS.

There is little to talk about. Many of the hustlers are away on vacations or taking flying trips to the sea shore and business in all lines is almost at a standstill. The past few days have almost broken the heat record. The greenhouses are too hot to work in at the middle of the day; at many places work commences in daylight and the middle hours of the day are passed in rest. The stock of cut flowers is about the same as last week. Kaiserin roses are becoming more plentiful and asters are growing better. Craig & Son are cutting Japan lilies in variety and they help to give character to many a funeral design.

The Westchester County Gardeners' Association of New York paid a flying visit to the city last Wednesday. Thos. Meehan & Sons' nurseries and Fairmount Park were their objective points. Messrs. Meehan & Son showed their visitors through their establishment, after which they were taken in tally-hos over the celebrated Wissahickon drive and through the park. This parkway along the Wissahickon creek is one of the finest drives in the world. The scenery is all natural, there being nothing done to ornament it in any way, save to make a good roadway and deep it sprinkled. Trees shelter almost every yard of its seven miles and the creek lies either on one side or the other of its entire length. The party took a late train home, much pleased with their trip.

D. D. L. Farson has been acting as agent for the New York club's souvenir in this city and reports having taken quite a lot of orders for space.

Commodore John Westcott is off with a squad of the boys to the Waretown fishing grounds. K.

New Haven.

BUSINESS QUIET.—OUTDOOR STOCK GOOD.—VACATION TIME.—LONG GOES TO EUROPE.

Business has been very quiet during the past two weeks, for the flower buying public has gone to the summer resorts and all that is left for the florist is an occasional funeral order. Outdoor flowers, such as asters and sweet peas, are in large supply and of good quality.

W. H. Long, of Chapel street, has sailed for Europe, intending to be absent for two months. He will visit the Paris Exposition and some of the growers in Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Champion are at the Pequot House, Morris Cove, for the season.

Recent visitors: Jas. Beach, Bridgeport; Mrs. D. C. Lines, Milford.

G. H.

RICHMOND, IND.—E. G. Hill has returned from his European trip.

MIDDLEBORO, MASS.—T. F. Creedon, who has been employed at the L. P. Thatcher greenhouses for the past twenty-two years, has purchased the establishment and will conduct the business for himself hereafter.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—Meyers & Detgen, who recently embarked in business here, have two houses and are planning to build two more. Mr. Meyers will live at the greenhouses and watch the stock while Mr. Detgen will do the selling at their Pine street store.

Chicago to New York.

The committee on transportation has arranged with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad for a special train to convey the Chicago Florists' Club to the New York convention. It has been arranged that the train will leave Chicago at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday, August 19, reaching Niagara Falls at 8 a. m. Monday, where it will remain for an hour and a half to permit those who wish to make the trip down the gorge on the electric railway. The train will arrive at the Grand Central Station, New York, early Monday evening.

The return journey offers the choice of several routes. The trip may be made by rail, or by boat up the Hudson to Albany, one of the prettiest rides in America, and thence by rail. Stop-over at Buffalo is granted, and one may, if he chooses, travel from Buffalo to Cleveland, Toledo or Put-in-Bay by boat.

The special train will consist of solid, wide-vestibuled buffet, chair cars and sleepers, and it has been arranged that a fine new dining car with a well stocked larder will accompany it through to New York. Tickets going will cost $20; the return ticket, if the purchaser has a certificate, costs $6.70, and will be good for four days after the close of the convention.

The Chicago committtte hopes that every one passing through Chicago to the convention will arrange to join the Chicago delegation, and that the representatives of eastern cities may be picked up enroute. The special train will make the fewest possible stops, but will be halted wherever there are convention-bound florists who wish to board it. Toledo will be reached at 10:30 p. m. Sunday and Cleveland at 2 a. m. Monday. At the latter point it is hoped to arrange to pick up a special sleeper in which those who join the train there may be passing the night in sweet repose. The Chicago committee or L. F. Vosburgh, city passenger agent of the L. S. & M. S. R. R., who will personally conduct the party, will be pleased to correspond with any one wishing to arrange to travel with the Chicago club.

THE SEED TRADE.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Pres.; F. W. BOLGIANO, Vice-Pres.; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Sec'y and Treas.

MUCH needed rain has fallen copiously in eastern Nebraska.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. B. Coe, representing D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, Mich.

WISCONSIN pea reports are favorable but the early green wrinkled kinds will be short again.

W. ATLEE BURPEE and wife passed through Chicago this week, returning home from California.

PRODUCE prices are low on the west market, Chicago; beans 10 cents per bag; peas 15 cents to 25 cents per bag; cabbage 35 cents per 100; cauliflower 10 cents per dozen; white tipped radish 50 cents per hundred bunches; lettuce 15 cents per barrel. Gardeners who have not paid their seed bills are complaining with good reason at these low rates. The great union labor strike is said to be the cause.

St. Louis.

BUSINESS AT THE NORMAL STAGE FOR THE SEASON.—PREMIUMS FOR THE FALL SHOW.—VARIOUS NOTES.

Trade has been from poor to fair the past week. Wholesalers receipts are beginning to swell, but the amount of stock handled just now is not large. We are in our dull season and there are no excuses to offer for the state of trade. Roses are in right supply. Carnations of outdoor growth find a limited sale, especially the white sorts. Asters are being extensively retailed at from 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen. Gladioli and tuberoses are getting their share of attention and some very fine spikes of the former are seen. Sweet peas are practically out of sight, as the hot weather the past two weeks has burned them all up.

The preliminary list of the premiums to be offered at the tenth annual chrysanthemum exhibition, November 14 to 16, is just out. Premiums offered under the different sections are as follows: Chrysanthemum plants in bloom, $282; cut blooms, $39; cut roses, $106; cut carnations, $50; violets, $6; for floral designs and table decorations will be announced later. The Henry Shaw premiums on plants amount to $300 and on cut chrysanthemum blooms to $72.

The date for the picnic has been set for July 25. The boat leaves at 3:30 p. m. and tickets will be 25 cents each. A good time is promised all who participate.

On account of alterations which are to be made, John W. Kunz has vacated his old stand at 504 Olive street. M.

Indianapolis.

JOTTINGS OF LOCAL INTEREST BY OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.—CLUB PICNIC PLANNED.—MEETING OF THE CLUB.

The last Florists' Club meeting was poorly attended. It was decided to have the annual picnic at Haversticks. The party will meet at Broadripple, from there taking the steamer to the grounds. Everybody wishing to attend is requested to be at Broadripple on July 25 at 10 a. m. bringing dinner baskets.

"Billy" Langstaff is in distress because his well known saying that he never knew of a florist being in a penitentiary will no longer hold good. It was reported to the society that the Jeffersonville prison greenhouses are selling plants in competition with the florists there.

Planting roses in this vicinity is nearly finished. Most of us have had a hard time fighting mildew, which has been greatly favored by dampness and cold weather.

A. Wiegand and one of his sons have announced their intention to attend the New York convention; this brings the number up to four from here.

Irvin Bertermann was married June 27 to Miss Beatrice Galbreath, of Greenfield, Ind.

John Heidenreich has returned from the east well pleased with his trip. H. J.

Chestnut Hill, Pa.

There was an attendance of sixty-eight at the July meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society and the exhibits were all of high quality. R. G. Carey, gardener to T. C. Price, was awarded the premium for sweet peas and was given special mention for a vase of Lathyrus latifolius albus and four varieties of gooseberries. Wm. Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener, was first on collection of annuals, for collection of cut blooms of herbaceous plants and received special mention for single and double tuberous rooted begonias. Harry Harris, gardener to Mrs. Fell, was first for raspberries and received mention for potatoes. Frank Gould, gardener to J. T. Morris, was first on currents and received special mention for Iris Kæmpferi, fancy-leaved caladiums, calathea and Clerodendron Balfouri. Thos. Henning, gardener to Mr. Biddle, had the best potatoes. Wm. Robertson, gardener to J. W. Pepper, was mentioned for sweet peas and so was John Little for raspberries. The Andorra Nurseries were specially mentioned for a collection of Phlox decussata varieties.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.—M. S. Worden died on July 14 after an illness of four months. His age was 43 years.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

It is said that every section of the country is producing an unprecedented peach crop this season.

The consensus of opinion among nurserymen is that stock will be short next season, with the possible exception of apple trees.

Southwestern Nurserymen Organize.

Pursuant to a call made through the press of Texas, a number of nurserymen met at College Station during the Texas Farmers' Congress and organized the Texas Nurserymen's Association. E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney, Texas, was made president, Stanley H. Watson, of Brenham, vice-president, and John S. Kerr, of Sherman, secretary and treasurer.

The constitution and by-laws provide that the membership shall consist of active nurserymen throughout Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and the Indian Territory, and contemplates the furthering of all the interests of the craft. Over twenty members were enrolled from among the leading nurserymen of the states of Texas and Louisiana. It is provided that all nurserymen who join the association within sixty days shall become charter members. The annual membership fee is $3.

The Work of Our Association.

[Read by J. A. Pettigrew, President of the Association of New England Park Superintendents, at the meeting at Worcester, Mass., July 11, 1900.]

The tendency of the times is toward concentration; capital and labor, workers in the trades and arts, professional and scientific men, all follow the drift of the prevailing inclination to meet for the interchange and discussion of ideas and theories, or to record, for mutual advantage, the results of experience, thought and experiment in their various lines.

The Association of New England Park Superintendents, now entering its third year, has been organized for a definite purpose, that of raising the standard of excellence in park work. This probably has not been sufficiently realized by us, and, beyond the memories of two or three pleasant meetings, not much of lasting importance has been done for the welfare of the association or its object. Let us lay off this lethargy and bestir ourselves. The field is large; work lies on every hand; let it be taken up with persistence and determination. Abuses are creeping into the management of parks; let them be attacked and overthrown. We may not be able to obliterate all evils with which parks and park departments are afflicted, yet we may effect a partial regeneration and even partial success will repay when taken in connection with the opportunity our meetings give for becoming acquainted with brother craftsmen in their own fields of labor.

In particularizing the work of this association I would call attention to an evil which it should be the object of the association to attack vigorously, that of the overcrowding of trees in park woodlands and plantations. This results mostly from a fear of public criticism, or rather, I might say, abuse, leveled at the trained superintendent who cuts down a tree. Many people who are perfectly rational on most subjects, and who would accept without question the opinion of the doctor or the engineer in matters pertaining to his special profession, are ready to criticise any attempt on the part of the forester to better the condition of growing trees. And to this abuse may be attributed, in a great measure, the lamentable lack of fine tree growth in the public parks throughout the country. This calamity, however, is not confined to the parks; every street and every square calls out for reform in respect to the care of its trees. And this reminds me that the planting and care of street trees may be a matter of legitimate interest to this society. Progressive communities are beginning to recognize the fact that nothing adds more beauty to the streets than fine trees, and are placing them under the care of the park departments, or other authorized officers, for protection and development. The laws governing these transfers are varied, and not, so far as one can hear, entirely satisfactory. It would seem that a law simply giving full and indisputable authority over the trees to a competent body would be the most effective measure.

Another form of the desecration of public parks, which should be a subject for our consideration and discussion, is improper planting. Seven years ago I saw a public square, in the center of a smoky city, planted, in all the awful grotesqueness of an old craze, with geraniums, echeverias, alternantheras and other plants of like character, the blackness of death covering the whole. A few days ago I again saw this square planted in a similar way—no change, no awakening. In the same city I saw beds of fancy conifers set in the bays of a beautiful natural foliage line along one of the parkways. It seemed as though the landscape gardener, in an aimless way, had siezed each open space, saying, "here is room for a bed, I will make one," utterly spoiling the foreground and the predominating natural features by the forced intrusion of trees and shrubs of variegated foliage, or of beds of Crimson Rambler roses and other plants properly belonging to the garden.

In another prominent city I found lines of shade trees newly planted along curving drives throughout a park of several hundred acres. It is to be hoped that good taste will prevail and cause the removal of these trees before they attain to any size, or the temptation to flank them with stone curbs and sidewalks may be too strong to be resisted. Another instance, and I have done. In the most beautiful park in the Empire City I found an island planted with scarlet geraniums, where they disputed possession with a few trees and shrubs. Surely, here is a field for work, and work which will repay in the elevation of our profession.

Much can be done by this association in preserving public parks from desecration by those who have schemes for turning a penny by the introduction of various devices, ranging from observation towers or merry-go-rounds, to peanut stands. The petitioners for such concessions usually pose as philanthropists and in this guise are well calculated to deceive.

Another evil, against which the weight of this society's influence should be thrown, is that of the introduction of politics into park management. This abuse is steadily growing, and is a dangerous one. Positions of importance in connection with the welfare of parks are being absorbed by men who have no fitness for the work, and whose qualifications are only valuable in ward politics. Under the politician's creed, "To the victor belongs the spoils," tenure of office is insecure and offers no inducement to young men to educate themselves for park work. Many other lines of action will suggest themselves as the work progresses; for the present those above noted will perhaps suffice.

As a means of communication and a medium for the expression of the ideas and experiences of the members of this association, I would suggest the circulation, monthly, of a recording bulletin, passing from member to member for contributions or perusal, and returning in reverse order to the secretary. It is quite possible that many contributions could be culled from the bulletin which would be valuable from an educational point of view, and would be readily published by horticultural journals and city newspapers. The bulletin would serve to draw the members into closer fellowship and acquaintance, and help to heighten their interest in the work of the association.

BAY CITY, MICH.—Joseph C. Gooding has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States court at Toledo, scheduling liabilities slightly exceeding $2,000. The assets, entirely personal property, well handled will exceed this sum and S. A. Court, Mr. Gooding's attorney, expects to make arrangements whereby his client can continue.

Thursday evening, July 12, saw a great time on the Flatbush bowling alleys. New York came over; she saw but she didn't conquer, as the following scores will show. SHORT SUPPLY TO MEET A HEAVY FUNERAL DEMAND.—PLANS FOR THE CONVENTION TRIP.—INDIGNATION AT CREPE CHASING.

The past three weeks have been marked by a great scarcity of roses and only a meager supply of carnations to meet what was really an extraordinary demand for the summer season, funerals requiring much stock. No asters have yet appeared and carnations are heavily drawn upon, the quality becoming poorer as the summer season advances. Beauties are called for daily, but from all sources the supply is limited and the quality poor. Sweet peas are now abundant and meet with fair demand.

A party of about thirty will go from here to the convention, and it is believed that others from points throughout the state will join our delegation, increasing the total to probably fifty. The president of our club has appointed Geo. Rackham to make all the arrangements for the trip, including hotel accommodations. At present it appears likely that the route will be via the Michigan Central and New York Central, leaving Detroit Sunday, July 19, at about 4 p. m., arriving at Albany Monday morning, thence taking the delightful daylight trip by boat down the Hudson, arriving at New York the same evening. A rate of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan is the best yet offered, but the Michigan Central will assign our party a special car, or two if necessary.

Our club meeting Wednesday evening was a spirited one, occasioned by sweeping denunciations of the crepe chaser who at present infests our town. He hails from the Forest City and represents a local florist here who is not a member of our club and is consequently beyond the sphere of its wholesome influence. It was pointed out that in other cities where the odious business was practiced it resulted in time in greatly reducing the popular demand for flowers for such occasions, thus to a great extent destroying the most lucrative branch of our business. This solicitor has already met with some warm receptions where he attempted to get orders from grief-stricken families, and it is to be hoped he will receive enough of such treatment to prompt him to desist from further operations here. THIRD OUTING OF THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY AT GRAND ISLE.—THE PARTICIPANTS.

For the third year in succession the New Orleans Horticultural Society went to Grand Isle, in the Gulf of Mexico, for its annual outing. Grand Isle is certainly beautiful. The committee in charge of the outing was Paul Abele, Joe Schindler and M. M. Lapouyade. The society is thirty-five strong but only nineteen members were present, namely, E. Valdejo, Paul Abele, Otto Abele, Chas. Ebele, C.W. Eichling, F. Faessel, M Huber, M. M. de Lapouyade, J. H. Menard, Dan. Neusham, C. R. Panter, H. Papworth, Joe Schindler, J. A. Shalk, R. Steckler, John St. Marc, Richard Eichling, P. A. Chopin and Geo. Mahn. There were also a few guests, but giving the privilege to outside persons to join the excursion will have to be looked after with more care in future.

The weather has been very rainy and everything is growing fast. We are quite busy with outside work, but plant and flower business is rather still just now. M. M. L.

STEPS TO SECURE NEXT YEAR'S CONVENTION.—MOELLER SELLS HIS PLACE—TRADE QUIET.

An informal meeting was held at the office of D. B. Long on July 13 for the discussion of ways and means of securing the S. A. F. meeting of 1901. Nothing definite was decided upon but a formal invitation will probably be extended the society at the next club meeting.

R. Moeller is cutting some very fine centaurea and Adams has been making a run on this material for boutonnieres, for which they are excellent. Mr. Moeller has sold his property at Woodlawn to the Lackawanna Steel Company and will vacate in the fall.

Trade is quiet and we are all sitting around with our hands folded. The only excitement is that occasioned by the activities of such indefatigable order chasers as Arnold Ringier, Harry Balsley and "Billy" Boas.

W. A. Adams and Mrs. Adams are visiting at Cleveland this week. W. A.

UTICA, N. Y.—L. P. Seaton has gone to Buffalo to work in the horticultural department of the Pan-American Exposition.

HAIL DOES SLIGHT DAMAGE OVER A WIDE AREA. — EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT BLOCKED.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS.

We have been visited by a hail storm which did a varying amount of damage in different parts of the city. The most remarkable feature of it was the wide area over which it was distributed. It extended from Glenville, in the extreme east of the city, where Fred. Aul was probably the worst sufferer, as far west as Rockport, a distance of perhaps ten or twelve miles, while florists as far from the lake as Newburg, six miles south from Glenville, suffered some loss. Many establishments, however, suffered no damage whatever. Mr. Aul estimates his loss at about $300 and aside from this case, the damage seldom exceeded 200 or 300 lights and was usually less. The breakage was largely confined to single thick glass.

Some of the retail stores have been trying to inaugurate an early closing movement for the summer months, but the fact that one or two hang back seems likely to bring the plan to naught. It is unfortunate that the idea should not be carried through, as it has been found highly satisfactory in former seasons. Not a cent is made by keeping open evenings during July, August and September.

J. M. Gasser has leased his store room at 101 Euclid avenue for a term of years and has moved, bag and baggage, one or two doors further west.

Casper Aul has a new greenhouse about ready for glazing at his place on Lee avenue.

A. Graham & Son are adding one house to their range, to be used for carnations.

Bate Bros. are progressing with the moving of their greenhouses to the new location which they have leased north of Euclid avenue in East Cleveland. A.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—At the University of Illinois they are adding two wings, each 18x30, to the greenhouse, affording much needed room.

SCARCITY OF STOCK TO MEET EXISTING DEMANDS.—DROUGHT AND HEAT INJURE STOCK.—SCHULER HOME FOR A VISIT.—CONVENTION MATTERS.

Flowers were never so scarce at this season. Good roses and carnations are unobtainable aud the medium qualities are scarce. It may be owing to the drought, or to the excessive heat, for at several places in the county the thermometer is climbing above 100° every day, and all plants not shaded and heavily watered dwindle and die. Whatever the reason, flowers of all kinds are in demand exceeding the supply. Apparently we are not the only ones, for you may see a gentleman from a neighboring city at the Exchange every day or two buying flowers for a short market, which used to be one of our chief sources of supply when in need.

Much talking is going on about the S. A. F. convention, and the prospect is good for a large delegation. The following have already announced positively that they will attend: Messrs. Vincent, Seybold, Burger, Moss, R. Halliday, Richmond, Seidewitz and Bauer. There are a dozen or two more who hope to be of the party.

Mrs. Mary J. Thomas has started for the Paris Exposition. As she intends taking a tour through the British Isles before returning, it will probably be autumn before she reaches Baltimore again.

Hans Schuler, son of Mrs. Otto Schuler, is spending two months at home. He is as vivacious and chatty as ever, and a conversation with him is next best to a visit to Paris. His statue of Victory, which secured him the Reinhardt scholarship, has been highly praised by Parisian artists, and Baltimore florists may well feel elated over the high distinction that has been achieved by one of the most modest and unassuming of their number.

Cincinnati.

MEETING OF THE SOCIETY.—ADRIANS THE HOSTS.— PICNIC AND OTHER PLANS.—WITH THE GROWERS.

The monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held July 12 at Mr. Adrian's place, twenty-three members being present. Mr. Gillett was appointed to wait upon the manager of the fall festival to secure the details regarding the floral floats which are to be the main feature in the parade. It was unanimously decided that the florists of Cincinnati and vicinity build a float to capture first prize. The picnic committee reported that all arrangements have been made and that the sale of tickets is progressing for the outing, July 25. After the routine business had been disposed of the boys were invited to an elegant spread by the hostess, Mrs. Adrian. A goodly number of ladies were present and Mr. Crouch, of Knoxville, Tenn , and Mr. Lodder, of Hamilton, O., were among the guests.

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thresher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. A CHILD can run it.

Just the thing to fight crab grass.

Bottomless Pots for Carnations.

The successful experiments in violet culture with bottomless pots induced the manufacturers of these pots to go a step farther and offer a larger size for use in carnation culture. Seeing some good points in this method, we concluded to give it a trial and purchased several hundred of the pots. The results were gratifying and our expectations realized to a great extent. The principal point of gain is in the quick root formation after transplanting from the field, preventing the plants from wilting and reducing to a minimum the retarding, harmful effect of transplanting. Another great advantage is the prevention of stem rot.

The pots we used are four inches high, six inches wide at the top and four and one-half inches at the bottom. The soil was rather light, not poor, but devoid of all semblance of manure or decomposed matter and such as one can get from the field where the carnations were growing. Moisture is all that is required to hasten the formation of new roots; any raw food such as is contained in most newly prepared soil for the benches is harmful at this time, although certainly needed when the plant is again in the condition to assimilate food. The poorer, clean soil is to the plant at this time as is the sand to the cutting; it conveys moisture and a sufficiency of food in easily assimilated form.

The planting was done on the potting bench. The pot was placed on the clean bench, some soil was put in and pressed solidly to about a half-inch in thickness and then the plant was set as in any other pot. No soil will fall through the open bottom unless the compost is half sand. In benching the potted plants we made an excavation a half-inch deep and level at the bottom to receive the pot, care being taken to see that no hollow space is left between the soil in the pot and that on the bench. When filling the pot allow a half-inch space for watering.

We experimented with different varieties, placing them in blocks, side by side with plants of the same varieties benched in the usual manner in soil prepared in the usual way. The advantage is readily seen; the plants in pots are in soil most suitable for a quick root formation in their checked condition, consequently do not wilt and take a ready start for their onward growth. There is no danger of overfeeding, as is often the case in very rich compost, for the roots will not penetrate into the soil below the pots until the plant is in full working order again; then the nourishment is right at hand as the plant is able to consume it and one need not be afraid to prepare the compost at the full strength the plants will require two months after benching. Neither is there any danger of overwatering, which generally retards the formation of new roots; the three and one-half inches of light soil in the pot drains readily into the bench. The bench needs no watering as the plants will be watered in the pot and an occasional syringing will furnish enough moisture to keep the bench soil in the right condition. The usual precautions as to shading, syringing and ventilating should be observed.

The marked difference in the appearance of the plants could be seen at a glance. The plants in the bottomless pots were of a healthier and more advanced growth. As to stem rot, every grower will admit that carnations should not stand wet, although the roots should have an abundance of water. Here we have the solution of the matter. When the roots have penetrated the bench soil there is no need of further watering in the pots; the water which may drop in at a general watering of the bench and the natural capillary action is sufficient and the plants stand dry, without being deprived of the water they need. This condition is, to our experience, the best prevention of stem rot, but, if necessary, a little sulphur may be sprinkled on the surface of the soil in the pots; it will not have any more bad effect than when sprinkled on the leaves and is not easily washed away. When a mulch is to be applied put it between and not in the pots; keep the surface of the pots clean and dry. The pots will not interfere with any kind of support. Supports may be required earlier than with planted out stock, as the plants cannot be set so deeply as in the open bench, but that is only to their advantage.

On the other hand, expectations must not be too high. If a plant comes in from the field infested with the disease, pot culture will certainly not cure it, for our experience is that an infested plant is doomed, and the quicker it is destroyed the better. Pot culture is, however, to our experience, the best preventative measure against a spread of the disease, as it gives the most uncongenial ground for it to start and thrive in.

We suppose the most interesting facts are those in regard to the blooming qualities of the potted plants. We did not keep any count of the flowers cut, but, as before stated, the potted plants showed a marked improvement over the same varieties planted in the bench. They were the perfection of health, advanced more rapidly, showed stronger growth, which resulted in stronger stems and better flowers. The difference was noticeable at a glance up to January; after that time the benched plants caught up with the pot plants, and the difference was less noticeable, although slightly perceptible up to March. We hardly think that we cut many more flowers from the potted plants than from the bench, but they were certainly better in the fall and early winter.

In general the results were so gratifying to us that we ordered several thousands of these bottomless pots for this season's use, especially for the plants we intend to take in early. True, the outlay is quite considerable, but these pots will last for several years. For medium sized plants a 6-inch pot is large enough, for larger plants the 7 inch size is more desirable. FRED DORNER.

A Provincial English Exhibition.

The chief floral event of the past week in England was the three day's show at Wolverhampton, which is now considered to be second only to the Shrewsbury show, which takes place in August. Roses were the leading feature and I saw a greater variety of these flowers than it had ever been my good fortune to encounter before. Of course they were all shown singly and on short stems and on that account were not as attractive to me as some of the other exhibits, although the flowers themselves were truly marvelous. The displays of sweet peas were superb, put up in the American style, showing their long stems. The colors of the varieties with which I am familiar were more brilliant than we can get them outdoors in America. Among the new ones I noticed particularly Lady Grisel Hamilton, a fine lavender; Countess of Warwick, pink and white; Lady Mary Currie, salmon scarlet, and Burpee's Pink Friar.

Carnations, like the roses, were shown on short stems and the colors were so far from our ideals that they were of very little interest to me. They remind one a great deal of the California varieties, but I must confess that I like the smooth edges better each time I see them. The only American variety I saw was Eldorado and, as far as I was able to judge, it was as good as anything else they have here. Two varieties that struck me favorably were Britannia, a clear yellow, and Mrs. C. Sharpin, clear orange. In form they very much resemble Olympia.

Double tuberous begonias grown in 8-inch pots were almost beyond one's imagination. They were a mass of bloom and I measured some of them five and one-half inches in diameter and five inches deep. All the shades were of a very pleasing nature.

The plant department throughout, both for quantity and quality, would be a revelation to the majority of our American florists. The groups were very artistic, an abundance of bark and moss being used to hide everything but the plants themselves, most of which were of the finer species, such as orchids, ferns, cocoses, grasses, anthuriums, dracænas, specimen allamandas, bougainvilleas, etc., arranged in a very light, airy and irregular manner, the center plant invariably being a specimen phœnix. There were a large number of entries for table decorations and bridal bouquets, but they were nearly all overdone. The arrangement of the flowers in their respective vases was good but in some cases there would be a dozen or more vases on one table, and too many colors were used. There were a few tables that an American judge would call good, but they received no recognition here, and the same may be said of the bouquets.

The specimen flowering plants grown by Cypher, of Cheltenham, were truly wonderful. I measured a Phænocoma prolifera Barnesi, and found it seven and one-half feet in diameter, more perfect in shape than any chrysanthemum plant I ever saw and just a mass of bloom. Ixoras, clerodendrons, bougainvilleas statices, ericas, vincas and allamandas, were just as good, some of them perfect balls in shape. All of these were grown in pots varying from 16-inch to 24-inch. A group of fancy leaved caladiums, shown not for competition, by the gardener of Wolverhampton parks, well earned the gold medal presented him.

German Exhibition of Floral Arrangements.

We have before us the reports by our German contemporaries, Die Bindekunst and Moller's Deutsche Gartner-Zeitung, of the exhibition of floral arrangements, such flowers and other material as comes within the range of this branch of the floral business, held at Frankfort, Germany, June 22 to 24. This exhibition of the work of floral artists was the second effort of its kind made in Germany, the first show having been held at Berlin, April 6 to 10, 1882. It is not to be inferred that this particular branch of the business has been unrepresented in general exhibitions in Germany, but, as is the case in our own country, these exhibits have generally been of more or less secondary interest. This last exhibition was most certainly an unqualified success, both in point of the general interest taken by exhibitors all over the country and for the generous attendance of the public, which appears to have been present from all parts of Germany. It must be remembered, of course, that this show was not a local but a national affair, which accounts for the large scope of the exhibition.

The list of premiums offered was large. In money prizes 128 firsts were offered, ranging from twenty to 1,000 marks each. In addition numerous gold, silver and bronze medals were offered, also special premiums of various articles of value, such as silverware, cups, vases, etc. The largest prize, 1,000 marks, was awarded for the largest and most complete collective exhibit. The exhibits were classified in ten groups, as follows: Group 1, artistic grouping of plants and flowers for decoration of rooms and halls: also winter gardens. Group 2, hand and corsage bouquets, specifying the use of different flowers, eight different styles. Group 3, arrangements in varied form; twenty-three prizes, of which the principal one of 300 marks was for the most original idea in floral arrangement. Group 4, table decorations for twelve persons, prize 200 marks; beside this there were eight other prizes for various styles and sizes on tables arranged for specified uses. Group 5, funeral designs. Group 6, garlands. Group 7, jardinieres filled with foliage or flowering plants. Group 8, cut flowers, such varieties as are suitable in floral arrangements. Group 9, foliage suitable for florists' use. Group 10 includes a large list of articles and material used in the business, such as baskets. wire and other designs.

In the matter of funeral designs it is worthy of note that greens and foliage of all sorts is considered of the utmost importance to all kinds of work. The use of foliage is not restricted, as with us, to a few varieties of adiantum, asparagus and smilax, but includes a larger list of material specially grown for this purpose. The wreath, as we know, is the principal emblem used in Germany for funeral purposes. There is an endless variety in style and material and a corresponding number of prizes were awarded to the various forms.

This exhibition was open to all persons wishing to compete, that is, as to the various classes of arrangements. In group 8 and 9, however, only growers were allowed to compete. Flowers grown outside of Germany were not barred, but it was requested that exhibitors confine themselves to home-grown material, or at least to stock having been flowered in Germany. This was to make the show a genuine German exhibition of both skill in arrangement and material produced.

To judge from the comments of the German press, the art of floral arrangement has made great strides in the right direction in the last two decades. As compared with the exhibition at Berlin in 1882 the show at Frankfort was quite a revelation. Those of us who remember the stiff and formal style of twenty years ago, a style of work to be found almost universally in Europe at that time, would doubtless be surprised at the radical changes that have been made abroad in this line. The stiff forms have given place to loose and natural arrangement and the short-stemmed flowers supported by wire have made way for long-stemmed material. The indiscriminate jumbling of colors is, unfortunately, still present to wear on the nerves, but yet the general trend of the modern florist is in the right direction and color effect is not considered as of secondary importance any more. Of course there were many new and original ideas worked out and, as with ourselves, in striving to be original we often become ridiculous. The unmerciful ridicule which Moller's editor hurled at this class of productions is something refreshing and shows that the German press can be just as free and outspoken in its condemnation as in its praise. Although we find that, as in all exhibitions, there is more or less opportunity for adverse criticism, this was more than outbalanced by the numerous exhibits of highly meritorious qualities, two of which we illustrate in this issue.

Acalypha Sanderi Alba.

This new plant is a sport from the well known Acalypha Sanderi, says Moller's Deutsche Gartner-Zeitung, and originated with H. Hasack, of Brechelshof, Silesia, about a year ago. The flowers are described as greenish white in color. A specimen was exhibited at a recent Dresden show, where it received an award as a novelty.

Cannas in Mid-July.

I would say that cannas are in better general condition than they were last year at the same date. We commenced planting June 2, most of the plants being from 3½-inch pots, and since then have had an ample amount of rain and considerable warm weather, conditions favorable to the growth of these plants. There is a difference in quite a number of varieties as compared to last season, particularly as to season of blooming. Nearly all the red sorts are a few days late, although the average size of the clumps is considerably larger. The varieties showing the most bloom at mid-July are Buttercup, yellow; Rosemawr, pink; Conqueror, red, mottled; Admiral Schley, gilt-edged dwarf; Orange Queen, orange; Queen Eleanor, yellow-spotted dwarf; Robert Christie, orange scarlet; Fair Persian, pink, apricot shading; Rosalba, pink. Of the red-flowered varieties those most advanced in bloom are George Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Black Prince and Duke of Marlborough.

Olympia, the new shade of purple, is now showing considerable bloom. Gloriosa is doing well. West Grove, the new pink, is one of the most sturdy dwarf varieties in the whole collection, with flowers and foliage not surpassed by any. Florence Vaughan is making good growth and commencing to bloom. Pillar of Fire, Imp., seven feet in height, is growing vigorously and showing considerable bloom.

Alsace is commencing to flower rather later than last year but is making good growth. Mlle. Berat is developing freely and the flowers will soon expand. Augusta, the largest gilt-edged variety to date, is blooming profusely and Pres. McKinley is rapidly approaching the flowering stage. The improved Lorraine, pink, edged white, is blooming well, as is Emma, the dwarf large red.

Enchantress and Mme. Crozy are in bloom and Triumph, the dwarf scarlet, has commenced to flower, as has Queen Charlotte. Zephyr, dwarf pink, is beginning and Montana, cream white, is flowering freely. Pres. Cleveland is getting under way. Alberta, violet pink with yellow border, and Souv. de Antoine Crozy are well advanced. Luray is growing very vigorously and is about thirty per cent in bloom. Alphonse Bouviere is making fine growth. Fairy Queen is well along and Maiden's Blush not so far. Egandale is doing better than last year. Mt. Etna and Philadelphia are equally advanced, Shenandoah not quite so far. Jacksonii, red, dwarf, is forty per cent in bloom, as is Dr. Nansen, yellow. Coronet, Martha Washington and Paul Marquant are each more backward; the latter shows no bloom at all.

WREATH OF CYCAS LEAVES AND ORCHIDS AT THE EXHIBITION OF FLORAL ARRANGEMENTS, FRANKFORT, GERMANY, JUNE 22-24, 1900.

Italia, Burbank, Allemania and Austria, the orchid flowered varieties, are growing freely but have not commenced to bloom. The new hybrid orchid flowered sort, Mrs. Kate Gray, is blooming but the flowers appear to be rather lacking in substance; in beauty of foliage and vigor of growth it is unsurpassed. Kemp's new hybrid, the result of crossing Duke of Marlborough and one of the orchid flowering sorts, will bloom in the field in a few days. It probably would have flowered sooner but the clump was divided May 23 and the plants were only recently set in the field. The flowers are very large, six inches in diameter, scarlet, petals over two inches wide. It has bloomed under glass and if it endures the sun in the field it will prove a valuable addition to the family.

Comparing varieties is difficult and unsatisfactory at this time because the blooming and other qualities vary greatly with the treatment; the time of potting the tubers and the condition at planting all have a bearing on the condition of the plants. As nearly as can be gauged the following is the stage of development of bloom on July 11, 100 per cent representing full bloom:

Gloriosa	25	Rosemawr	95
Buttercup	97	Duke of Marlborough	10

Glimpses of Orange, N. J.

Orange is a big place in many respects. To the railroad traveller it seems to occupy the greater part of the territory traversed by the D. L. & W. railroad. People have been known to age perceptibly during a trip on a train that makes "all the Orange stops." The railroad might find it profitable to provide a dining car for through passengers going to stations beyond "the Oranges," for there is certainly time enough to get real hungry on the way. To the visitor who falls into the custody of an Orange gardener, however, there is no such word as hunger or thirst, either physical or mental.

Orange is known as the most beautiful of New York's suburbs. Lovely private estates, stately villas, homes of comfort and refinement abound. Nature, too, has done much to give Orange her enviable reputation. No more picturesque and impressive scenery for suburban enjoyment can be imagined anywhere than the forest clad steeps of the Orange mountains, dotted here and there with cottages, the outlook from which affords a bird's-eye view of the great metropolis with its harbor, the North and East rivers, New Jersey from the palisades to Bayonne, and Brooklyn and Staten Island beyond.

It was a wise foresight that prompted the acquisition of large sections of this elevated territory as public park reservations. The most extensive of these forest tracts is the South Mountain reservation, comprising an extent of some two thousand acres. It is densely wooded with oak, chestnut, beech, tulip tree and sweet gum, and all it requires is a judicious opening out here and there, with some good roads aud paths to make it an ideal recreation resort for the people. Of like character is the reservation known as Eagle Rock, a steep precipice from whose crest a view of unsurpassed grandeur is obtained.

Branch Brook Park, also in the Essex County Park system, is located in the heart of the great manufacturing city of Newark. For it nature has done nothing except to provide a stream of water through its center, or, rather, what uature once did was long ago obliterated by the ruthless hand of the settler. This territory occupies about forty acres and much money was spent to acquire it and remove the buildings standing on a portion of it. The problem of how to blend in a consistent and pleasing manner, rural effects with the angular outlines of straight streets and the formal surroundings of city buildings, many being of the poorer class, presents itself forcibly here. The plantations are young yet and the future may yet show that the mind that planned the landscape effects knew more than his critics, but to the casual observer it looks as though a vast amount of money had been wasted in moving soil from one place to another for reasons that are not apparent, and it takes a tremendous stretch of the imagination to see anything in the design of a number of booths or shelters that might not have emanated from the mind of a South Sea Islander or of the inmate of some institution for unbalanced folk. And when the native assures the visitor that this noble park system is suffering from the blight of political control and the withering clutch of the spoilsman, evidence is not lacking to apparently support the assertion.

At Llewellyn Park, on the crest of the ridge known as First Mountain, close to the famous plateau of Eagle Rock, is Wildmont, where resides in single blessedness the ex-secretary of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, Jos. B. Davis. Wildmont is a paradise of about twenty-five acres, the indispensable feature, without which no place can be paradise, being well supplied by Mr. Davis' sister, who ably shares with him the pleasant burden of hospitality to the stranger. If you want to see the Orange gardener or florist at home, accept Mr. Davis' invitation for a ride behind Shine Oh. Shine Oh is a twin brother of Rain Oh and likes clover. His master pretends he doesn't think much of him, but he does. Shine Oh does not get over the ground fast enough to suit the sporting instincts of fastidious John Hayes, the gardener over at the Munn estate, but he never flinches at the steepest hill.

The O. H. Munn place is famous for the most extensive series of terraces in America. Planted with showy flowering annuals and perennials, and symmetrically edged with dwarf box throughout, they present a striking picture as viewed from the mansion at their foot and their ascent, although fatiguing on a hot day, is well repaid in the grand view from the rustic arbor at the top.

The J. Crosby Brown estate is presided over by Peter Duff. It occupies about one hundred acres on the ridge of the Orange Mountains. The rose garden is very fine and the greenhouses the most pretentious in this section. In them is much to interest the lover of tropical plants and it needs not the big frame that hangs on the office wall, filled with first premium cards, to convince one that Peter Duff is a tough proposition to run up against in a competitive exhibition. In one house are seen the chrysanthemums in big pots that are to make a sensation at next fall's show. Mr. Duff apologetically remarks, "they're only rubbish." Outside some more "rubbish" is noted—hollyhocks with leaves ten or twelve inches in diameter that bring a sigh of regret as one recalls the hollyhocks of the good old times when the fungus was unknown.

An earnest co-worker with Mr. Duff in the floricultural society is Malcolm MacRorie, who superintends the estate of Dr. Mandeville. Mr. MacRorie loves Orange because its picturesque scenery reminds him of his native Scotland. The trees, lawns and flowers, the plants in the houses, all indicate the well-trained gardener, and at the gardener's home the latch string is always out.

Montclair is one of the most conservative and refined residential districts of Orange. Its numberless well kept lawns and gardens would indicate that it must be a profitable spot for the commercial gardener and florist. A. David Rose, who moved here two years ago and took possession of the old Michie establishment, wears, in addition to his customary good-natured smile, a look of sleek prosperity that speaks well for the business end of Montclair. A. L. Wallace, who has been established here some twelve years has five greenhouses and does a good local and wholesale trade. Robt. Chesney occupies a neat little store on Bloomfield avenue, the main street to Newark, and has a large range of glass some distance away.

At South Orange is the already famous establishment of W. A. Manda. This wonderful place is a most striking example of the results of ambition, perseverance and industry. It now comprises twenty acres with a large range of greenhouses and frames filled to overflowing with choice material. To go through the immense collection of free-flowering perennials, novelties in conifers and other garden stock would require an entire day. Plans are now being carried out to secure a park-like effect by permanent plantations around the boundaries. The sensation of the season has been the evergreen hybrid roses, several new ones having bloomed for the first time.

Another South Orange attraction is the Japanese garden and nurseries. The grounds, four acres in extent, are laid out in Japanese style with a miniature lake, bridges and pagodas and many curiously dwarfed evergreens and other arboreal curiosities.

Herbaceous Plant Notes.

The hardy spring flowering border plants are past some time ago, but there is no lack of bloom in the herbaceous garden. Alyssum argenteum is still a mass of yellow and the broad, compound umbels are most useful for cutting, as they are excellent keepers; the stems are fifteen to eighteen inches long. The improved variety of Erigeron speciosum, called E. speciosum major, is vastly superior to the type, the rays being very long, narrow and fringe like; the disk is also larger and for cut flower purposes we can recommend it highly; a second crop of bloom is produced in fall when the flowering stems are removed close to the ground.

Nearly all the achilleas are excellent for cutting. The golden yellow, broad heads of A. Egyptica may be had with very long stems. A. ageratum is somewhat smaller but bright in color. A. tomentosa aurea is smaller still in every part, but bears its golden yellow, flat heads in profusion from early summer until late autumn; A. Ptarmica and A. serrata are too well known to need mention here, but A. millefolia rubra, a bright carmine-red variety of the ordinary A. millefolia, deserves to be planted largely, not only for ornamenting the border, but also for cut flower purposes; in rich soil it is a constant bloomer from June to fall.

Astilbe Thunbergii, with its long, graceful, feathery spikes of white flowers, and its delicately colored pink companion, A. Chinensis, are both out since the end of June, and are indispensable where cut flowers are grown for summer use; they require a somewhat moist soil to do their best and also are greatly improved in a partially shaded position. Spiræas require the same conditions; the early bloomers are past their best, but the white S. ulmaria fl. pl. is only beginning to open the first flowers on some of the stems. The beautiful pink, S. lobata, is not fully out either and the delicate, though large and tall growing S. Kamschatica is still in bud. All of these are excellent for cutting.

Veronica spicata and its white variety are in fine condition at present; V. incana, somewhat dwarfer than the foregoing, is now merely beginning to open. Eryngiums, too, are showing the steel-blue color on stems and calyx, and platycodons, with the exception of P. autumnalis, are all blooming profusely. The aconitums are beginning to look well, too; the yellow A. Pyrenaicum and A. lycoctonum are fully out. Among the blue flowering species, A. Tauricum is prominent. Statice Tatarica is in fine shape and the first of the aster-like, large, double, flowers of Stokesia cyanea are opening; they will continue in bloom until fall.

In the above I have mentioned some of the less known, summer flowering hardy plants which are useful for cut flower purposes; there are many more of them equally desirable. J. B. K.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE CLUB BRINGS MUCH GOOD CHEER.—REPORTS ON CONVENTION ARRANGEMENTS.—NEW MEMBERS.—LITTLE DOING IN A BUSINESS WAY.—JOTTINGS OF VARYING INTEREST.

The special meeting of the Florists' Club, on Monday evening, July 23, was the largest of the season, there being sixty members present. Beyond the admission of twelve new members the business of the evening was confined to convention matters, the consideration of which was agreeably facilitated by the generous provisions for the inner man which the house committee distributed lavishly throughout the evening. The various sub-committees were all on hand to report progress and things are going along in most satisfactory manner. A number of retail artists were added to the hall decoration committee and an unprecedented success is indicated for this feature. E. A. Asmus declined to act as captain of a shooting team in the sporting section. Mr. Roehrs reported having secured a number of individual prizes for the bowling tournament. It is understood that the shooting affair will come off at Dexter Park, Cypress Hills, and the bowling alleys selected are the Palace alleys on One hundred and Twenty-fifth street. A letter was received from Commissioner Brower stating that the word "Welcome" would be florally inscribed on one of the flower beds in Prospect Park in honor of the visit to Brooklyn of the S. A. F. ladies. A vote was passed inviting the presence at the opening session of the convention of Mayor Van Wyck, the heads of all the city departments and school committee, also the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington and the horticulturists of the experiment stations in the eastern and middle states. An invitation to the school children of New York to come and see the floral exhibition is also to be given. A vase of seedling gladioli from John Lewis Childs graced the exhibition table.

Very little business is being transacted these July days. It has been intolerably hot in the city and those who have not found opportunity to get away to rural retreats and cooler climes have been content to lounge in fatigue dress in range of a draught, where such could be found. As to flowers, but few are coming in and very few are wanted. Messrs. Weir and Mallon, of Brooklyn, make their habitual pilgrimages to Manhattan Island, the former daily, the latter more irregularly owing to the demand for his presence at birthday parties in Brooklyn where his placid features and sage philosophy are highly esteemed. The only flurries of excitement were on Friday of last week, when a brisk little call for flowers for watering place use was developed, and last Saturday, when J. K. Allen ran the price of lilies at Thirty-fourth street market up to $1.50 a dozen all by himself. When asked to explain his position afterwards he responded evasively and rambled off into a yarn, telling how the fire alarm in his town of Kearney had been set off by snakes.

PERPLEXING STATE OF THE MARKET.—TIME TO ACCEPT INVITATIONS.—ANOTHER GOOD SATURDAY SHOW.—DEMISE OF THAD. PAGE.—VARIOUS NOTES OF LOCAL INTEREST.

A flock of farmers every morning with burdens on their arms, of asters, sweet peas and other outdoor products, and burdens on their minds of anxiety as to what they will get for the stock, or whether they will get anything at all for it; a few crates of roses that look as though they had been through all the troubles that roses are liable to; an occasional forlorn looking funeral wreath or pillow; a bunch of argumentative characters fully capable, in their minds, of settling all the warlike, political and economic problems now distressing the world and incidentally to fix the price of lilies for next Easter; a prevalent atmosphere of dog day, shirt sleeves, gypsophila, bait, California plums and elusive creditors—that's the state of the market at present writing. It will improve after a while and in the meantime we are open to invitations to participate in any outdoor exercises in which clam bakes, buckboard rides and similar diversions figure. Engraved invitations are not necessary; everything goes.

Another good exhibition at Horticultural Hall on Saturday, July 21, attracted a large crowd of visitors. Sweet peas were displayed profusely and were of excellent quality. Among the contributors in this section were H. B. Watts, J. H. Fletcher, Mrs. H. A. Jones, T. F. Dwight, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence and W. J. Clemsen. All the varieties in each exhibit were carefully named. Mr. Watt's display contained ninety distinct sorts. Herbaceous flowers were again shown in fine form by Blue Hill Nurseries, W. J. Clemsen, Rea Bros. and Carl Blomberg. Oakes Ames showed two new nymphæas, Diana, a cross between Sturtevantii and Ampla for which a certificate of merit was awarded, and Niobe, a cross between Ampla and rubra. E. C. Lewis brought and attractive exhibit of Cupid sweet peas.

Old time Boston florists will be sorry to learn of the death of Thad. Page, which occurred last week after a long and painful illness. Mr. Page was formerly in the employ of Wm. Doogue in his old establishment at Floral Place for several years and was also employed in other prominent florist stores. For a number of years he has been engaged in the scales business in New York.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., was arrested and fined last Saturday for speeding his automobile on one of the Metropolitan parkways. He says he will do it again, having still a little money left with which to pay for fun.

F. S. Davis has just returned from Belgrade Mills, Maine, where he has been fishing. He says he caught—well, all fish stories are alike.

Jas. Rough, Jr., has leased quarters in a new building to be erected this season at the corner of Massachusetts and Huntington avenues, opposite the new Music Hall and Horticultural Hall.

Mrs. O. H. Hanlon, mother of Mrs. J. Mitchell Galvin, died at Mr. Galvin's residence in Dorchester, on July 19.

The cost to the city of the late useless park department investigation is said to be in the neighborhood of $6,000.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Newman are spending their vacation pleasantly down in Nova Scotia.

Visitors in town: Edw. A. Mosely, Washington, D. C.; H. S. DeForest, New York city.

ABUNDANCE OF FUNERAL WORK MAKES GOOD MATERIAL VERY HARD TO FIND.—MARKET AND PRICES.—COOL ROOMS.—PLANTINGS.—FISHERMEN.

There seems to have been considerable funeral work about the past week, for there was a scarcity of flowers. Good white roses and carnations were held as high as $1.50 per hundred. Ethel Crocker is still selling for $2, but is very scarce. Asters are now coming much better; $1.50 per hundred is asked for the best white and purple, the others going for 75 cents to $1 per hundred. R. Craig & Son's Japanese lilies sell well at from $4 to $10 per hundred. Kaiserins now have the field to themselves among white roses, but they do not fill the bill. The weather being so warm, the growth is very soft and the stems are scarcely strong enough to keep the buds erect. The price ranges from $3 to $6 per hundred. The supply of lily of the valley is very erratic; one day it is plentiful, the next scarcely a spray to be had. The price is $2 to $4 per hundred.

Most of the growers have finished their replanting, and, as far as can be learned, the assortment of varieties will be about the same as last season, with the exception of Beauties, which will probably be more plentiful. Among the innovations we see some plantings of sweetbriar. Sprays of this rose are now considered quite the thing to top off a box of flowers or for the finger bowls at a select dinner.

S. S. Pennock's "coolery" is a popular place these days, but, as with other good things, one has to be careful to not indulge too much. His refrigerating plant is certainly a great advantage over the old system of using ice. H. G. Geiger, at the Floral Exchange nurseries, has fitted up a cool room that seems very satisfactory and is kept cool at slight expense. His paper at the next meeting of the club should prove very interesting. He is now on a vacation to Block Island on the New England coast.

Commodore John Westcott is off again to Waretown with another squad of the boys, Robert Craig and others of this city and W. J. Stewart, of Boston, being of the number. Plenty of fish and a good bright coat of tan, well burnt in, are among the good things assured. K.

MARKET QUIET.—AN OCCASIONAL SPURT OF BUSINESS STRAINS THE RESOURCES.—VERY SMALL CUTS THE RULE.—TOO MANY GARDEN FLOWERS.—WOMAN LANDSCAPE GARDENER LET OUT.—VACATION NOTES.—MANY IMPROVEMENTS IN PROGRESS.—PERSONAL MATTERS OF INTEREST.

There is very little to say as to the state of the market. Business takes an occasional spurt but as a general thing demand is light, which is, perhaps, a fortunate thing, as supplies are at the lowest ebb. What new roses there are show very fair quality now but their number is decidedly small; of carnations there are few of particular excellence and orders for these staples would not be welcome in any great number. When it comes to garden flowers, however, the tale is different. The counters are generally loaded with promiscuous lots of indifferent material which seem to offer little inducement to the buyers to part with their coin, despite the allurements of liberal count offered by many a dealer. Even asters are accumulating and as for sweet peas, the clean-up prices are so low that there is no profit in them for anybody.

Mrs. A. R. McCrea, who was appointed landscape gardener at Lincoln Park on February 14 was dismissed on July 21 but declines to let it go at that. She charges the loss of her official head to political influence and has enlisted the support of her friends and the city press in the effort to secure reinstatement.

C. L. Washburn and family have been spending this week at a resort near Muskegon, Mich. L. G. Greszens and his wife leave to-night for two weeks at Paw Paw lake and later Mrs. Horton will go to Colorado Springs.

At the George Wittbold Company's they are pegging away through a very good summer. Their big stock was greatly depleted during the spring but is being rapidly worked up and everything is looking fine. The boys are aiming to be in shape in the autumn for the best season's business on record.

John Van der Wal has determined to dispose of his place at Washington Heights and pay a long promised visit to his relatives in Europe. No other member of his family is in America but he says he will certainly return.

J. A. Budlong, who is an indefatigable cyclist, is contemplating a trip to New York awheel. If he concludes to indulge himself in this little jaunt, Mrs. Budlong will go down on the special train and join him at the convention.

Kennicotts are adding largely to their capacity for storing wire work, this branch of their business having grown to such proportions that they are obliged to carry a large stock.

Among the week's visitors were Herbert Heller, of the South Park Floral Co, New Castle, Ind., and Harry Balsley, the red and bottomless pot park board president from Detroit.

G. H. Pieser, secretary of the Kennicott Bros. Co., will be one of the convention excursionists, the president, Flint Kennicott, having determined that he cannot attend.

McKellar & Winterson are busy with repairs to their wholesale store, which was rather the worse for the wear of a year's heavy business.

Wietor Bros. are getting into shape for a big cut next season. Their stock is all in fine shape and their roses from young plants are excellent.

A. L. Vaughan, who has been cottaging beside the St. Joe river, is at home for a few days and expects to go east about August 15.

E. E. Pieser left Thursday on the Manitou for Mackinac. His itinerary brings him to New York during the convention week.

Those best informed on the subject claim the convention party from this city will be considerably over 100 strong.

John Muno and Adam Zender and their wives are considering the matter of attending the convention.

J. D. Thompson, of the Chicago Carnation Company, Joliet, Ill., will probably attend the convention.

Lawrence Kelley will return to the employ of the Kennicott Bros. Co. next week.

Many of the growers have the work of benching their carnations well in hand.

Walter Retzer is planning to be one of the convention party.

M. Bloy, of Denver, Colo., is in town for a few days.

Chicago to New York.

The Chicago Florists' Club Committee on Transportation to the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists to be held August 21, 22, 23 and 24, has arranged with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway for a special train, which will be vestibuled and will contain as many Pullman sleepers as may be necessary, a buffet smoking car, a dining car and a day coach.

The running time of this train will be as follows:

Leave Chicago - 3:00 p. m. Sunday, August 19.
Arrive Niagara Falls 7:30 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Leave Niagara Falls 9:30 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Leave Buffalo - - 10:20 a. m. Monday, August 20.
Arrive New York - 9:00 p. m. Monday, August 20.
(Grand Central Station.)

The railroad fare for the round trip will be $26.70 on the certificate plan. The sleeping-car fare will be $5 for a double berth to New York. But if sleeper accommodations are desired to Buffalo only, sleeper tickets from Chicago to Buffalo may be had for $3 and the remainder of the distance traveled in the day coach.

At Niagara Falls an hour will be devoted to a trip around the Gorge Route Electric Line, which on the American side runs for miles below the falls along the rapids, whirlpool, etc. Special trolley cars will await the arrival of our special train. Those not wishing to take the trip through the gorge can devote their time to seeing the falls in any way they desire.

Returning from New York the members of the party have the option of returning by all rail route, or of taking the boat as far as Albany. And as a daylight ride up the Hudson is an exceedingly enjoyable trip the majority will no doubt take advantage of it.

The boat leaves New York, foot of Desbrosses street, at 8:40 a. m. daily, reaching Albany at 6:10 p. m. A westbound train leaves Albany at 10 p. m., which arrives at Chicago at 9 p. m. next day. To any preferring the lake trip Buffalo to Cleveland the privilege of taking the C. & B. Transit Co.'s boat is afforded.

Berths may be reserved in the special sleepers by addressing L. F. Vosburgh, City Passenger and Ticket Agent, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway, 180 Clark street, Chicago, who will also supply any other information. Railroad tickets and certificates may be had at the above address or at the Lake Shore Station, Van Buren street.

In reserving berths be careful to state whether you wish a berth to New York or to Buffalo only, and mention that you desire to travel in the Florists' Special Train.

By vote of the Chicago Florists' Club the Committee was instructed to invite all florists in the west to travel with the Chicago party and to share the advantages secured by the committee. We shall be pleased to have your company on this trip. The New York convention promises to be a memorable one, and every florist who can possibly do so should go.

Please make your berth reservation as early as possible.

Building Problems.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—I am building two even-span houses 20x50, one for roses, the other for carnations. The houses will run north and south and 16x16 glass will be used. Please state how many runs of 2-inch pipe will be required in each house, the overhead system of hot water heating being employed. Which of the houses should I use for roses, the one to the east or the one to the west? If you would advise the use of solid beds, how should they be constructed?

A. M. E.

For a well-built, 20-foot rose house with wooden walls, and with the roof of average pitch, a temperature of 60° can be maintained with fourteen 2-inch pipes when the mercury drops to 10° below zero outside. For most varieties of carnations it will be well to use eleven pipes under similar conditions, although good results can be secured with other varieties when only ten pipes are used. There is but little choice in the houses, but under some conditions it would be best to use the east house for roses.

Solid beds are more durable than raised beds as usually constructed, and are particularly valuable where roses are required for summer use and when the plants are to be carried for two years. It is best to construct the walls of brick or cement and thus secure permanency, but plank or boards may be used. Success cannot be secured with solid beds unless thorough drainage is provided. Broken bricks or cobble stones are often used for filling the beds to within eight inches of the surface, but even better results can be secured if the bed is filled with some firm material to within about one foot of the surface, and this is covered with 3-inch drain tile, the lines running across the beds and with the ends even with the outer face of the walls. This use of drain tile favors aeration as well as the thorough drainage of the soil.

Chicago Sweet Peas.

ED. AM. FLORIST:—Your issue of July 21, makes this remarkable statement, in noticing the sweet pea market of Chicago: "There are sweet peas to throw away, many sales being made at a cent a bunch. The only grower whose stock sells out well is C. W. Northrup, of La Grange, one of Kennicotts' consignors, whose flowers are so good and so carefully bunched that the light colord sorts are always chosen where sweet peas are wanted."

This is the second time within a few weeks that the AMERICAN FLORIST has puffed one grower at the expense of all others. But is there really any justice in this? We, of the Sweet Pea Farm, of Evanston, believe that we are offering daily to the floral public as good sweet peas as can be found in the market, and as well bunched. We put from ten to forty thousand stems daily on our counter at McKellar & Winterson's at half past seven o'clock a. m. and usually are all sold before half past eight. Among them are a great variety of colors, light and dark, but they are so good and well bunched that even the dark ones are not left unsold.

N. G. AXTELL.

[We did not state, as our correspondent insinuates, that C. W Northrup's dark sweet peas are left unsold.—ED.]

OBITUARY.

MRS. ISAAC FREYER.

The wife of Isaac Freyer, of Kendallville, Ind., died July 7 after an illness of several weeks. She was 56 years of age, a most estimable lady and an expert in the making of floral designs.

THOMAS LEWIS.

Thomas Lewis, who years ago conducted a flower store on Massachusetts avenue, Indianapolis, died July 18 after a long illness. He was 52 years old and well known and liked by the older members of the trade. In more recent years Mr. Lewis managed the Lakeside and Winona Parks near Warsaw, until poor health forced him to resign. He leaves a widow and three small children. H. J.

WM. M'KELLAR.

William McKellar, who was one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of Chillicothe, O., died Wednesday afternoon, July 18, after an illness of thirteen weeks. Mr. McKellar was born at Paisley, Scotland, January 31, 1833, and consequently was in his sixty-eighth year. He served his apprenticeship at the famed place of the Duke of Argyle and at seventeen he came to America, locating at Jersey City, where he lived for several years. Afterwards he removed to St. Louis, remaining only a few years. From there he removed to Ironton and finally located at Chillicothe, where he has conducted his business successfully for the past thirty-seven years. October 3, 1859, he was married to Mary Johnson, at Ironton. Mrs. McKellar, died ten years ago, They leave eight children, Mrs. Theodore Miller, who resides at home; James McKellar, of Columbus; Mrs. John Hancock, of Columbus; Chas. McKellar, of McKellar & Winterson, wholesale florists, Chicago; Miss Daisy, Arthur and Oliver, who lived at home; and Albert, who is in the Philippines. All the children, with the exception of the last-named, were in constant attendance at their father's bedside during his last illness. That Mr. McKellar's business associates and fellow citizens realized his worth as a man and their loss as a community was eloquently attested at the obsequies, which were largely attended.

HENRY DALE.

The leading rosarian of the Dominion of Canada passed away July 15, after a ten day's illness, blood poisoning being the cause of his demise. Henry Dale, or Harry, as he was almost universally known to the trade, was born at Dorking, Surrey, England, in 1851, and came of a family of market gardeners. When the boy was twelve years old the father removed to Canada, locating at Brampton. In 1870 the son became a partner in the business which had been established, but in 1881 he started for himself, market gardening but growing a few roses and gradually increasing this branch of his establishment until he had a range of 200,000 feet of glass and a reputation as a rose grower which extended all over America. It was years ago that Mr. Dale began to be known outside his own bailiwick. He was one of the first to adopt the methods of the present day and has long been a leader in all things tending to the betterment of the trade. He was a member of all the big and active societies, the Society of American Florists, the American Carnation Society, the American Rose Society and the Canadian Horticultural Society, and their interests were always his interests. Mr. Dale had a splendid business and to keep pace with the largely increased demands of the past season he was building six new houses, two of them 840 feet long. He had, for some years, looked forward to the day of his demise and planned to leave his big industry in competent and well-trained hands. His executors, Thos. W. Duggan and Wm. Algie, will carry on the business, with Mr. Dale's brother, Edward, in charge of the houses and stock. Mr. Dale lost his wife early in this year and the shock was so great that he never fully recovered. He leaves a son, Edward, and five daughters, the eldest being the wife of Wm. Algie, one of his executors. At the funeral, July 17, there was a wealth of floral tokens, sent, many of them, from considerable distances, and the gathering of florists included nearly all in that section of Canada and a number from the United States.

"Plant Culture."

This is the title of an exceedingly useful book for florists and gardeners just issued by the A. T. De La Mare Printing & Publishing Co., Ltd., 2–8 Duane street, New York. The author is George W. Oliver, the skillful propagator at the U. S. Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C., who writes on a great number of subjects in a thoroughly practical manner and in language which all can understand. Growers will find the book a valuable guide on the numerous greenhouse and outdoor questions which come up for consideration every day in the year. We can supply it on receipt of the price, which is $1 per copy.

The Henry Shaw Medal.

The St. Louis Florists' Club desires to call attention to the fact that in June, 1893, the board of trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden founded a gold medal to be known as the Henry Shaw Medal for the introduction of a valuable plant and to be awarded each year, when practicable, for a new plant of value for cultivation exhibited in St. Louis, as a part of the premiums or prizes at a flower show or exhibition provided for in the will of the late Henry Shaw, provided that the judges or other persons making awards at such exhibition shall certify that said medal is "awarded to a plant of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce and introduced to such commerce by the exhibitor during the year in which said award is made."

Numerous plants worthy of the award of this medal are each year introduced into the American trade, and the undersigned will at any time gladly furnish detailed information to their introducers as to the time of holding the flower show at which they may be exhibited in competition for the medal. This year the medal will be offered as a part of the premiums placed in the hands of our local Florists' Club for award at our annual chrysanthemum show to be held in St. Louis, November 14 to 16, 1900.

EMIL SCHRAY, Secretary.

The Discount Question.

"A correspondent, who every year receives a circular from a Dutch horticultural firm, has this year, apparently by a mistake, received the circular intended for his gardener. The circular announces that 'to gardeners only' a discount of 10 per cent is allowed on all orders above £10. This seems to throw some light on the recently agitated question of the illegitimate commission in business. It also, as our correspondent suggests, helps to explain the generous view the average gardener takes of a garden's necessities."

The above cutting, from the Daily Chronicle of the 12th, has been sent to us for our opinion and publication. The former is scarcely necessary, as it is obvious that discounts of this kind cannot be paid honestly; the ordinary five per cent is a heavy tax on the trade, and anything beyond is usually made up at the expense of the purchaser in one way or another. We do not think, however, that we are in a position here to raise a howl of indignation against the foreigner who adopts this questionable style of pushing trade, while several houses are well known to pursue the same tactics by bribing gardeners right and left all over the country. A short time ago a well known firm in the Midlands sent a traveler round offering ten per cent down on the order, and another five per cent when the account was paid. We only hope he met with the same reply in other quarters that our informant gave him.

This is a most urgent question, and would have been taken up ere this by the new Trades' Association, but its discussion is being held over until the result is seen of the bill now before parliament; this may alter the situation so largely that it would not be wise to take action until its fate is settled one way or the other.—Horticultural Advertiser.

LARGE MONEY PRIZES FOR FLOWERS AT THE FAIR.—VARIOUS JOTTINGS, PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

The premium list of the State Fair is ready and obtainable from the secretary. Five hundred dollars in premiums are offered for floral exhibits. There were but four exhibitors last year and only half of the prizes were competed for.

Contrary to the experience of other years, July has been a money making month for retail florists, owing chiefly to a great amount of funeral work.

Jacob Forest, the Greenfield florist, visited Indianapolis last week. He reports excellent trade and intends enlarging his range of glass.

Charles Wheatcraft is giving his place an overhauling, rebuilding some of his older houses.

John Bertermann and family have gone to Put-in-Bay for a two weeks' stay.

AQUATICS AT KENILWORTH.—ACRES OF WATER LILIES.—BUSINESS NOT ACTIVE.—DECORATIONS.

At Kenilworth, D. C , W. B. Shaw has about three acres of aquatics in ponds two feet deep. There is one acre of hardy nymphæas, about the same of tropical varieties and three-quarters of an acre of night bloomers. The balance is mostly devoted to nelumbiums. A few small ponds are devoted to cabombas, which are in good demand, and he is making preparations to increase his stock. He has a small greenhouse, heated by hot water to start his nymphæas in but finds it too small and thinks he will build a larger one this fall. These ponds are filled from a number of springs and are well stocked with bass and other fine fish.

J. H. Small & Sons had the order for the funeral of E. G. Boardman. The drawing room was decorated with palms and the mantle banked with ferns. There was a great number of handsome pieces.

The new palm garden at Cabin John Bridge opened July 21 and the flowers were furnished by A. Gude & Bro. Each patron was presented with an American Beauty rose.

The weather is very pleasant after a much needed rain and summer flowers are showing up very well. Stock is in every way equal to demand. P. G.

Richmond, Ind.

Armed with a large sized paper tablet and a brand new pencil, your correspondent wended his way bright and early one morning toward the E. G. Hill establishment with a view of interviewing Mr. Hill, who has recently returned from a two months' trip abroad. To my disappointment, however, I found Mr. Hill just ready to take the 10 o'clock train for Philadelphia, with not a moment to spare. Thus my attempt to give your readers the benefit of Mr. Hill's observations abroad came to naught, for the time being at least.

There is, however, sufficient interest centering about Mr. Hill's establishment itself, to keep one on the move for an hour or two, and that regardless of the excessive heat. Preceded by the genial Mr. Hoffman, I took a stroll through the houses. Who says that small and medium sized kentias are scarce? There is no scarcity of them here. I saw thousands of them, both kentias and latanias, in benches as well as in pots, in as fine, vigorous and healthy a condition as one could possibly desire. Asparagus plumosus nanus and Asparagus Sprengerii in various stages of growth are not the least to interest the visitor. There are thousands upon thousands of them, yet, Mr. Hoffman remarked, "the supply will barely keep pace with the demand."

Then there are the new geraniums in the field. As grown on Mr. Hill's grounds, one cannot question the value of the new things which he has given us in the past year or two. His new geraniums for 1901, which Mr. Hill selected with great care in France, about fifteen in number, promise to surpass even any of his recent introductions. There is one especially, of the Bruant family, that is bound to make its mark and become a great favorite with all geranium growers.

Nor can I omit making mention of the carnation field. Strong, healthy and vigorous, this will about describe the present condition of the plants. Ethel Crocker, The Marquis, Lawson, Genevieve Lord and a host of others too numerous to mention are seen here at their best.

Ground has been cleared and graded for the erection of two additional houses of the same dimensions as the big one built last summer. It is doubtful, however, if the undertaking will be attempted before next spring, although the building material, glass, pipe, etc., is on the place.

Both Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Lemon accompanied Mr. Hill to Philadelphia. They intend going to Atlantic City, New Jersey, where they may stay a few weeks.

Beach & Chessman are tearing down two houses to make room for a new one, to cover 46x75. Their entire plant will likewise receive a thorough overhauling.

THE NURSERY TRADE.

AM. ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEO. J. SMITH, Pres.; N. W. HALE, Vice-Pres.; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

MANY nurserymen say that there will be more planting this fall than in any previous autumnal season.

J. M. BRIDGES, of Bloomfield, Ind., has bought a farm near Dugger, Ind., and will remove his nurseries there.

W. M. PETERS' SONS, the well known Maryland nurserymen, last fall planted large quantities of peach seed and recently reported that it looked then as though they would have 1,500,000 to bud.

The Finley Lawn Rake.

The common garden rake is an ancient implement and has changed but little in principle of construction throughout the ages, although the form has been frequently modified to meet specific requirements. The rotary lawn rake, however, is a complete departure from the time-worn ideal and affords another illustration of the inventive genius of modern days. As in many other familiar cases, the new machine is simplicity itself; and when one looks upon it for the first time expression is given to the trite phrase, "Its a wonder somebody didn't think of it years ago." The manner in which the idea was stumbled upon is commonplace.

C. E. Finley, of Joliet, Ill., the inventor, spent his days in the city, retiring for rest and recreation to his suburban home, where much of his leisure time was devoted to amateur gardening. Saturday afternoons he mowed the lawn and on Sunday mornings raked up the grass in the old-fashioned way. It was tiring work in the hot summer months, and Mr. Finley often thought there should be some easier and more expeditious method. It was an unusually hot Sunday morning, as the inventor tells it, when the idea occurred to him, "Why not a lawn rake on the carpet-sweeper principle?" He had it. The rest is simply the story of drawing designs, constructing patterns, making a model, tests, improvements, etc., until a company was formed, special machinery devised and the invention was placed on the market a few months ago.

As already hinted, the principle of construction in the new rake is that of the carpet-sweeping machine. The teeth, as shown in the illustration, pick up the lawn debris—including loose grass, leaves, twigs, litter, paper, orange and banana skins, peanut shells, windfalls from fruit trees and even stones as large as chestnuts—and the blades in which the teeth are set, being rotary, cause a suction which carries it to the capacious receiver. The parts are few in number, strong and well put together. The machine is so light that a moderately strong boy can do as much work on a lawn with it in one hour as the average man can do in four with an ordinary rake.

Many well known men in the trade have already tested the machine or seen it in operation and it meets with their general approval. There should be a future for it in public grounds, parks and cemeteries as well as in private establishments.

Helpful Reminders.

One is apt to neglect the permanent plants and trees about the place and their special requirements are more easily ascertained now than at any other time. A shrub that has recently flowered shows the older twigs inclined to be sluggish, while there are young sprouts trying to make their way to light and form blooming branches for next season. Take a sharp knife and cut the old branches completely out. As a rule well-grown branches will bloom for three years and the four years' wood should be cut out each July. Careful observation will, however, induce you to make exceptions to any rule.

With larger trees less is thought of the flowers but more of the general form. Where old trees are dying, cut off all the dead wood but do not take off any more foliage than is necessary, even through it may be on branches that would be undesirable for appearance sake; every leaf is valuable just now for manufacturing the building material that is stored in the bark for next season's growth. Go over the trunk and branches and cut out all decayed wood, paint the wounds or fill the large holes with cement or wax; be sure that they are so filled that water will not lodge. If the tree is on a lawn where you can work around it, dig up the surface as far out as the branches extend, working in well decomposed manure; cover the ground thus dug with hay and make it secure from wind by drawing a few cords across. In October bind the trunk with straw. In one year the new bark should have welded itself over the edges of all the wounds and strong growth with large leaves pushed out in many places; then you can thin out and trim for the sake of appearance, and remake the lawn. Where other plants interfere with digging around a tree, take a post auger and bore many holes; this will aerate the soil and the lighter soil and manure can be put in the holes. This should be done every two years with all lawn and sidewalk trees, before they show signs of decay.

Clematises should be well drained, for they cannot endure standing water. The subsoil should be of good loam to retain moisture for a long while, the surface should be loosened for quite a radius from the stem and old cow manure worked in and, with a good trellis, success is insured. C. B. W.

Omaha Florists' Picnic.

On July 20 the Nebraska and Iowa Florists' Club picnicked at Krug Park, Omaha. There was a large attendance and the contests were exciting because of the many handsome prizes offered. In the bowling contest J. F. Wilcox carried off the trophies for the highest score and for making the greatest number of strikes. R. Davey made the second highest score and the most spares. For the match the team was divided into two divisions, five on each side; the winners were Wilcox, Davey, Swoboda, Paulson and Stewart.

Recent visitors were Mr. Currie, of Milwaukee; R. Engelmann, of Indianapolis; F. Emory, of Valley, Neb. GRIPPE.

FLORISTS' CLUB VOTES TO INVITE NEXT YEAR'S CONVENTION.—WILL WORK HARD AT NEW YORK.—NOTES.

A meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club Friday evening, July 20, brought out a large attendance as business of importance was to be transacted. After the routine work was despatched the matter of the S. A. F. convention was brought up. It was the unanimous sentiment that, as next year is to be Pan-American year and all florists will want to see the exhibition, the B. F. C. extend an invitation to the national society to meet in Buffalo in 1901. A committee was appointed with that end in view. As Buffalo now has a fine convention hall, in a good location, with every convenience, we can handle almost any convention and the more that come the merrier. All other cities aspiring to the honor of entertaining the convention, beware, as our delegation will be a warm one. President Kasting also appointed a committee consisting of Wm. Scott, W. A. Adams and E. Brooker to arrange for our annual outing. In all probability the beautiful Bedell House will be chosen.

Trade has been very quiet. Roses are, with a few exceptions, still very poor. Asters are in and of very good quality, while excellent sweet peas are abundant.

Recent visitors: Henry Wise, East Aurora, N. Y.; S. B. Smiley, Lancaster, N. Y. W. A.

Lexington, Ky.

Honaker has just finished a palm and fern house 25x100 and has in course of construction an American Beauty house 32x150 feet which will be the first strictly modern house ever built in Lexington, all iron and cypress, heated by steam. This firm, for it consists of Mrs. D. Honaker, D. B. Honaker and O. S. Honaker, has just finished improvements on its down town store, making it the finest south of the Ohio river. The walls are mirrored, with marble brackets, marble counters and the ceiling is hand painted. They propose making a specialty of American Beauties and fancy carnations.

LIBERTY, Mo.—Paul Stark has purchased the J. H. Weeks establishment and will add the houses to his own range, giving him much needed room.

AKRON, O.—In the recent hail storm the greenhouses of Wm. A. Helfer were damaged to the extent of 700 lights of glass and at S. W. Pike's 200 lights were broken.

PLANT CULTURE

HITHERTO ADVERTISED AS "COMMERCIAL PLANTS."

By George W. Oliver, Propagator to the U. S. Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C., and late of the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh.

A Working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist, Gardener and Nurseryman and all those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer. The plants dealt with not only comprise all those which are commonly handled by the trade, but include numerous deserving varieties not so fully known. Chapters are given on

Stove and Greenhouse Plants, Bedding Plants, Vase and Basket Plants, Vines, Hardy and Tender, Bulbous Plants, Ornamental Grasses, Water Plants—Aquatics, Ferns and Lycopods, Hardy Perennial Plants, Hardy Shrubs;

Also a lengthy chapter of General Directions, including Propagation—Seeds, Grafting, Budding, Layering, Hybridization, Potting Plants, Soil, Mulching, and Watering. Concluded by a very complete index to all subjects mentioned. This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use, not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Strongly bound in buckram to stand rough handling and plenty of it.

12 mo., 193 Pages, Price $1.00, by mail, postpaid.

Columbus, O.

The Franklin Park Floral Company is making a substantial improvement in the way of a fine office building, facing Fair street, with a conservatory immediately adjoining it. What has been contemplated by Mr. Knapp, the manager of the concern, for the past few years, is now being carried out in a way to suit the requirements of their growing business. The elaborate ice chest, partitioned off from the office proper, the tiled floors and counters, the large show window and the general conveniences will make it an ideal floral establishment. Mr. Knapp expects to get through in ample time to go to the convention.

John R. Hellenthal, accompanied by his family, will go to the convention and may visit Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. As usual, things about Mr. Hellenthal's establishment present a fine and healthy appearance. His young roses look fine, and his carnations in the field are doing well.

Gust. Drobish reports a good trade, both wholesale and retail, with the outlook, in his opinion, decidedly encouraging. Mr. Drobish's, by the by, is one of the oldest floral establishments in Columbus. To hear him contrast the past with the present, to point out the progress we have made, is to enjoy a treat as well as to entertain the rosiest hopes for the future. Unlike many other florists of the old school, Mr. Drobish is both alert and progressive.

S. F. Stephens, I am sorry to report, has sustained a great loss in the death of his little daughter, aged 8 years. Mr. and Mrs. Stephens have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in the trade.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO.

324 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL., U. S. A.

Knoxville, Tenn.

A range of twenty-five well built houses comprising over 50,000 feet of glass is what constitutes C. W. Crouch's greenhouse establishment. Mr. Crouch, has kept pace with the times, improving, remodeling and rebuilding as his needs required, until we find him presiding over as fine a greenhouse plant as there is in the state of Tennessee. Two additional houses, one intended for roses, 22x125, and the other one for carnations, 18x100, will soon be in course of erection.

Three houses, each 20x150, are given to American Beauties alone, while Brides, Bridesmaids, Perles and Meteors take up four other houses each 20x100. As a rose grower, therefore, Mr. Crouch ranks among the foremost in his state. Nor are his roses of the kind to be seen on the average fakir's stand, a handful for a song. His are of a superior quality all through the season and sell at the highest market price, both wholesale and retail. His carnations, of which he has several good sized houses, were likewise in the pink of condition all through the season. Among whites John Young takes the lead here, being especially at home in the Tennessee soil, although Flora Hill is a close second. What The Marquis, Ethel Crocker and other varieties of recent introduction may or may not do remains to be seen. Thus far they are by no means disappointing.

Besides roses and carnations, Mr. Crouch grows large quantities of bulbs, bedding and decorative plants, hardy roses, shrubs, etc. In addition to his office at the greenhouses, Mr. Crouch has equipped a fine store on Clinch avenue. Mr. Crouch intends to shake hands with his brother florists at New York, in August. NOMIS.

PARIS, ILL.—John A. Helfrich, who some three months ago succeeded to the business which H. D. Caldwell & Co. had conducted so successfully for eight years, finds his 4,000 feet of glass inadequate to his needs and is already planning to increase it.

PLANS FOR A GREAT FALL SHOW.—LIBERAL PREMIUMS AND PROMISES OF MANY EXHIBITS.

The Colfax Avenue Floral Company's rooms were the scene of the largely attended and enthusiastic July meeting of the newly organized florists' society. Arrangements were being made for the chrysanthemum show to be held November 8 to 14, under the auspices of the Denver Floral Club. The exhibit will be held at the pavillion at City Park. The park commissioners have promised to provide a suitable building. The premium list amounts to $2,000. Responses have been received from Chicago, Council Bluffs, Kansas City and New Orleans, and it is hoped to make the affair such a success that it shall, in a great degree, supply the place of the Festival of Mountain and Plain.

Excursions will be arranged for from the various towns in the state. The following ladies are honorary members of the Denver Floral Club: Mrs. W. S. Decker; Mrs. Henry Van Kleeck, Mrs. H. V. Johnson, Mrs. J. D. Walling, Mrs. W N. Byers, Mrs. C. S. Thomas.

The next meeting will be held August 3, 1900, at the chamber of commerce, at which time some interesting papers will be read.

Mansfield, O.

The Berno Floral Co. has had a busy time of it up to the present writing. No sooner were they through with their spring sales than a crop of fair June brides kept them hustling with decorations. That over, they commenced to rebuild and to spruce up things generally. Among the noteworthy features introduced about their establishment are brick benches, with which they have equipped three of their houses. They have likewise put in a new boiler, increasing the heating capacity. With a lot of thrifty carnations in the field and with the young roses all planted and doing splendidly, the Berno Floral Company has no complaints to make. Mr. Berno will likely be one of the crowd of westerners in New York, in August.

NOMIS.

BAY CITY, MICH.—Boehringer Bros. are making a number of additions and improvements about their establishment. In their new houses and in rebuilding they are using brick walls.

CHICAGO, April 7th, 1900.

HULL & COMPANY, 74 and 75 Traders' Building, Chicago, Ill.,

GENTLEMEN:—In reference to my opinion of your THACKER SPLINT COAL, will say I am v ry well pleased with it and think it is superior to any Coal of the splint grades we have yet used. Burns free, making an intense heat with very few ashes; no clinkers, and has the lasting quality of all high-grade Coal. I certainly consider it a very economical Coal to burn.

Finley Rotary Lawn Rake.

Something New.

"PAPA! WE CAN RAKE YOUR LAWN."

THIS IS A CUT SHOWING THE FINLEY LAWN RAKE IN OPERATION

The mower and reaper succeeded the scythe; the thresher succeeded the flail—but never until now has a machine been invented to take the place of the antiquated hand rake. The machine has arrived. This is it. YOU NEED IT.

A THOROUGHLY durable and reliable machine, to follow the lawn mower. It takes up all the grass, either long or short; twigs, leaves and small loose litter of any kind, stones included, that a HAND rake would not touch. A man can rake three times as fast as with a hand rake. ☞ A CHILD can run it.

Just the thing to fight crab grass.

It will save its cost in 60 days on any good lawn.
